BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

James Buchanan was born on April 23, 1791 near Mercersburg, Pennsylvania to James Buchanan, a store owner and prosperous land owner, and Elizabeth Speer Buchanan. Both parents were of Scotch-Irish descent.

James attended Mercersburg Academy near his home until the fall of 1807, when he entered the junior class of Dickinson College in Carlisle, PA. He did not enjoy his years at Dickinson; he found the school in "wretched condition" with "no efficient discipline." However, his behavior while at Dickinson was far from exemplary. Buchanan states, ". . . I engaged in every sort of extravagance and mischief in which the great proficients of the College indulged." For this behavior, he was expelled during the fall vacation of 1808. After pledging his good behavior to his minister, Dr. John King (a college trustee), he was readmitted to Dickinson. In his senior year, James felt slighted by the faculty because he did not win the top award of the College for which his society had nominated him. Buchanan commented, "I left college, . . . feeling little attachment to the Alma Mater."

Upon graduation from Dickinson, Buchanan moved to Lancaster to study under the prominent lawyer James Hopkins. After being admitted to the Pennsylvania Bar in 1812, he quickly gained prominence. He was elected to the Pennsylvania House of Representatives in 1814 as a Federalist and was reelected in 1815.

In the summer of 1819, Buchanan became engaged to Ann Caroline Coleman, the daughter of Robert Coleman, a wealthy and prominent ironmaster. Because of a tumultuous political and economic situation in Lancaster in October and November of 1819, Buchanan ignored his courtship of Ann Coleman. This led to much gossip about Buchanan, suggesting that he was only interested in her father's fortune. The crisis was elevated after Buchanan went to visit his friend's wife, before seeing Ann. When Ann heard of this visit, she broke off their engagement. Deeply distressed about this situation, she went to visit her sister Margaret in Philadelphia on December 4th. On December 9th Ann died after a fit of violent convulsions; the doctor diagnosed it as death by hysteria. Buchanan was devastated, and he never considered marriage again.

In 1820, Buchanan was elected to the House of Representatives as a Federalist. In 1824, when the Federalist Party had ceased, he joined the Democrats. In Congress, he was an active opponent of John Quincy Adams and his great project, the Panama Mission. In 1828 he was an ardent supporter of Andrew Jackson, and this support ultimately led to his appointment as the chairman of the Committee on Judiciary. In 1831, Jackson appointed him minister to Russia. On his return to the United States, Buchanan was elected to the Senate; he was reelected in 1837 and again in 1843.

In the Presidential Election of 1844, Buchanan was “Pennsylvania’s Favorite Candidate”; however, the Democratic nomination went to James K. Polk of Tennessee. Polk subsequently appointed Buchanan Secretary of State.

In 1849, Buchanan retired and moved to Wheatland, an estate outside of Lancaster, PA. Harriet Lane (Mrs. Henry E. Johnston), his orphaned niece, lived with him and cared for domestic affairs. She was known as a gracious hostess, entertaining high society. Buchanan’s retirement from politics, however, did not last long. In 1852, another campaign was made to give Buchanan the presidential nomination; Franklin Pierce of New Hampshire ultimately received the party’s nod. After Pierce’s election, Buchanan was appointed Minister to Great Britain.

In April of 1856, Buchanan returned to the United States and was nominated as the Democratic candidate for President. John C. Breckenridge of Kentucky was the vice-presidential candidate. The campaign platform was based on the finality of the Compromise of 1850 and the non-intervention of Congress concerning slavery in the territories. Buchanan defeated Fremont in the electoral college, although he failed to get a majority of the popular vote.

Buchanan’s presidency was a stormy one, filled with controversy and numerous domestic difficulties. By the end of his term, the slavery issue and state’s rights problems has caused serious divisions in government circles. The election of Abraham Lincoln added fuel to the fire, and between December 1860 and January 1861, numerous members of Buchanan’s cabinet resigned. On January 9th, the Star of the West was fired upon in Charleston harbor. Major Anderson threatened to shoot all vessels at Charleston, while Governor Pickens demanded the surrender of Fort Sumter. Buchanan stated that they would hold and reinforce Fort Sumter.

Buchanan left Washington, D. C. on March 9, 1861, after Lincoln’s inauguration. He lived the remainder of his life at Wheatland. He died on June 1, 1868.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The James Buchanan collection is housed in five document boxes and eleven oversized folders, and the materials are divided into four main categories: Correspondence, Manuscripts, Printed Materials, and Miscellaneous Materials. Since this collection is comprised of the gifts of various donors, each individual donor is noted on the folder of the item that was donated. The majority of these papers consist of correspondence between James Buchanan and his business and political associates, but printed pamphlets and various memorabilia are also represented.

The Correspondence section is composed of over four hundred letters authored by James Buchanan, as well as a few addressed to him. The correspondence are arranged alphabetically by author, and then chronologically, and each individual letter has been listed in the collection inventory. Many letters are accompanied by a typescript. The bulk of the letters from Buchanan were written between 1830 and 1860, though there are relatively few letters from the years of his presidency (1857-1861). Most of the correspondence in this collection are from his days in Congress and as a lawyer in Lancaster. Some correspondents of note include Andrew Jackson, Franklin Pierce, Charles J. Ingersoll, James Campbell, James L. Reynolds, Samuel D. Ingham, William L. Marcy, and Dickinson College notables John Price Durbin and John McClintock.

The Manuscripts section is also arranged alphabetically by author; items of unknown authorship are listed by title or organizational affiliation. This section is composed almost entirely of materials written by Buchanan, such as drafts of speeches. The Buchanan writings are arranged chronologically. Among the Buchanan manuscripts are several written accounts of Buchanan's speeches before Congress, though these are not likely to have been penned by Buchanan himself. Also included among these manuscripts are two of Buchanan's student notebooks from his two years at Dickinson College.

The Printed Materials section is arranged alphabetically by author (or by title if the author is unknown). This section includes printed speeches by Buchanan and his contemporaries, as well as articles and pamphlets written about Buchanan and his times. The printed speeches of Buchanan date from his days in Congress, including orations on the Oregon question and the Consular system. Also found here are a number of pamphlets regarding Buchanan's campaign for the Presidency in 1856, discussing the main issues of the election. A few articles and pamphlets about Buchanan's niece, Harriet Lane Johnston, and his Lancaster home, Wheatland, can also be found among the printed materials.

The Miscellaneous Materials section is arranged alphabetically. Included are autographs of James Buchanan and Harriet Lane. There are also campaign badges and ballots from the Buchanan and Breckenridge Ticket of 1856. This section also includes a number of images of Buchanan, mostly engravings, as well as an image of Harriet Lane.

Several oversized folders, arranged according to the above mentioned categories, contain materials which have been separated out of the collection due to their size and particular storage needs. One folder of manuscripts contains documents signed by James Buchanan. Six folders of printed materials include newspaper clippings and political cartoons related to Buchanan. The miscellaneous materials include five folders of engravings and mezzotint images of Buchanan.
