BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Josiah Albertson headed a successful family in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. He owned and operated a lime and lumber business in partnership with his brother, Benjamin, and in later years he also worked with his brother Jacob in running the Plymouth Railroad Company. Around the year 1800, Josiah bought a farm in Plymouth, PA to which he relocated his immediate family, and became involved in banking. Benjamin moved his family to Havisham, although he continued to travel frequently to attend to Josiah's business affairs. Besides his lime and lumber and railroad businesses, Josiah also owned and managed a general store in Philadelphia named Williams & Albertson, located at the northwest corner of Market and Front Streets (the responsibility for which he also shared with his two eldest brothers). Regarding these various business dealings, Benjamin appears to have been Josiah's chief counselor. Josiah was involved in several legal disputes concerning his business, often protesting the over-billing of various ship captains and other workers whose services he employed to aid his lime and lumber company.

Josiah's family included not only his brothers Benjamin and Jacob, but also sisters Alice, Amy, and Hannah. Aside from the fact that Josiah married a woman named Ann Chew, little additional information is available about his personal life.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The Albertson Family Papers are housed in two document boxes and are arranged into two major groups, Personal Papers and Business Papers. The Personal Papers consist exclusively of correspondence which have been arranged alphabetically according the author of each letter, and then chronologically. The subject of these letters revolves around family matters, including news about children and upcoming visits to one another.

The Business Papers consist of a variety of materials regarding the Albertson family's Lime and Lumber Business and the Plymouth Railroad Company. These Business Papers have been arranged into the following basic categories: Bills and Receipts, Correspondence, Day Books, Legal Materials, and Plymouth Railroad Materials. The Bills and Receipts section is ordered alphabetically according to the Albertson family member involved in the transaction. The letters found in the Correspondence section are arranged alphabetically by the last name of the author, and then chronologically. The bulk of these letters are addressed to Josiah Albertson, the majority of those having been penned by Josiah's brother Benjamin. The Day Books, numbering four in all, appear to have been the financial ledgers maintained by Josiah Albertson in daily operation of his business enterprises. These Day Books have been arranged chronologically. The Legal Documents section includes papers which pertain largely to business disputes, and these papers have been arranged chronologically. The Plymouth Railroad Materials section includes miscellaneous company papers such as maps, a book of company shares, minutes of board meetings, memorandae, and legal agreements.
