BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH

Zatae Leola Sturgis Longsdorff was born on April 16, 1866, the eldest daughter and the second of six children of William Henry and Lydia R. Haverstick Longsdorff of Centerville, Pennsylvania, a few miles southwest of Carlisle. William Henry, a physician, was a Dickinson graduate of the class of 1856. Zatae's brother, Harold, graduated from the College in 1879. Zatae, having been educated in area schools, entered Wellesley College in 1883. However, when Dickinson first allowed female students to attend in 1884, Zatae and her sister Hildegarde enrolled. Graduating with the class of 1887, the eldest Longsdorff girl became the first female graduate of the College; she obtained a master's degree in cursu from Dickinson in 1890. Sisters Hildegarde (class of 1888), Jessica (class of 1891), and Persis (class of 1894) all attended Dickinson in turn.

After graduation, Zatae pursued medical instruction at Women's Medical College in Philadelphia, earning her medical degree in 1890. She served a year as an intern at the New England Hospital for Women and Children, and then relocated to a Native American reservation in Blackfoot, Idaho where she became the resident physician for a short time.

Amos Gale Straw and Zatae Longsdorff were married November 12, 1891, shortly after she returned to the eastern U.S.; the couple settled in Manchester, New Hampshire. They had four children (Enid, Zatae Gale, David, Wayne), and also raised Gertrude Grey as their foster daughter. Longsdorff later resumed her medical practice at Elliot Hospital in Manchester. In addition to her thriving practice, she was very involved in the community as a member of the American Legion Auxiliary, the PTA, and the Daughters of the American Revolution. She would serve as state president of the American Legion Auxiliary for the year 1935-1936.

In her later years, Longsdorff became active in New Hampshire politics. In 1924, she was elected to the New Hampshire State House of Representatives. In 1926 she presided over the New Hampshire State Republican Convention and was elected to a second term in the state House of Representatives. Serving on the Committee on Public Health, she became its chairperson during this second term; she also served on the Committee on Fisheries and Game, being an avid hunter and fisher herself. She ran unsuccessfully for a seat in the New Hampshire State Senate in 1928.

However, this high point in Longsdorff's public life was marred by personal tragedy. Her mother, Lydia Haverstick, died in 1921, having outlived her husband by 16 years. Amos Gale Straw died in 1926 after a long illness resulting from his surgical service in the First World War. In 1929, the youngest daughter, Zatae Gale, died shortly after graduating from Brown University, and a year later son Wayne drowned. Still, Zatae Longsdorff maintained her public profile and continued with her medical practice. Her daughter Enid graduated from Wellesley College in 1921, and in 1937 she married Dean Chamberlin. Son David continued to live in Manchester, and Gertrude remained at home with her foster mother.

Longsdorff ultimately became the first woman president of the Manchester (N.H.) Medical Association, an honor she received in 1923. In 1941, she was honored by the New Hampshire Medical Society for a half-century of service in the medical field. For her lifetime of accomplishments, Longsdorff was awarded an honorary doctor of science degree by her alma mater in 1937, the 50th anniversary of her graduation from Dickinson College.

Zatae Longsdorff Straw died on October 1, 1955 at her home in Manchester.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The Zatae Longsdorff Straw collection is housed in three document boxes, one oversized folder, four artifact boxes, and forty-five photograph folders. The materials in this collection are arranged into six series: Correspondence, Manuscripts, Miscellaneous, Scrapbooks, Photographs, and Artifacts. The majority of the materials in this collection are written about Zatae Longsdorff. However, the collection includes a large number of photographs of her and her family, as well as several scrapbooks highlighting her political and social careers. To avoid possible confusion with her daughter, Zatae Longsdorff Straw has been listed simply by her maiden name, Zatae Longsdorff, throughout the collection inventory.

The Correspondence series contains letters and telegrams received by Longsdorff on the occasion of her graduation from medical school and the receipt of her honorary degree from Dickinson College. These letters were written by family members, friends, and school officials; they have been arranged alphabetically by author and then chronologically. The honorary degree citation that is referred to in the letter from Fred Corson has been separated out and is housed within the Manuscripts series.

The Manuscripts series consists of unpublished materials by Zatae Longsdorff and her two daughters. The items written by Longsdorff include a journal for January and February 1874, the citation read at the conferring of her honorary degree and her remarks, and an undated poem. Also included in the series is a novel, "Lady Doctor," written by Enid Straw Chamberlin, which chronicles the life of her mother, and a bound volume of poems by Zatae Gale Straw. These items have been arranged by author and then chronologically.

The Miscellaneous series includes several printed items about Zatae Longsdorff as well as several postcards featuring Dickinson and the surrounding Carlisle area. A drawing of Native Americans that corresponds with items in the Artifacts series is housed within this series. A folder of ephemera contains calling cards and name tags of Zatae Longsdorff. An item of particular note is a 1952 copy of the Straws' marriage license. The materials in the Miscellaneous series have been arranged chronologically, with ephemeral items (calling cards, airline baggage ticket, American Legion Auxiliary certificate, etc.) placed last. Two oversized items, Longsdorff's honorary degree diploma and a certificate from the New Hampshire Medical Society, have been designated as OC 2002.2 and are housed separately in an oversized folder.

The Scrapbooks series is comprised of four bound volumes of newspaper clippings and other miscellaneous materials which were compiled by Zatae Longsdorff and her daughters. The volumes have been arranged chronologically; any loose materials have been removed and are housed in folders following the volume from which they came. The first two scrapbooks feature materials regarding all aspects of Longsdorff's life, while the volume dated 1924-1930 deals mainly with her political career, and the fourth highlights her honorary degree from Dickinson.

The Photographs have been designated as PC 2002.2 and are separately housed within the Dickinson College Photograph Collection. The collection contains over fifty photographs, most of which are of Zatae Longsdorff herself. Also included in the series are photographs of the Carlisle Indian School and a tintype of Zatae Longsdorff's mother, Lydia Haverstick. The photographs have been arranged alphabetically by subject, and then chronologically. Two oversized photographs have been separated out and are housed with the oversized materials, designated OC 2002.2.

The Artifacts have been designated as AC 2002.2 and are housed within the College's artifact collection. These items include memorabilia from Longsdorff's days at Dickinson, such as her portable writing desk and the black dress she wore when she won the Pierson Prize for Oratory in 1886. The Pierson medal is included in the collection, as is an oversized portrait of Longsdorff wearing the dress. Items from the Fort Hall Reservation at which Longsdorff worked are also in the collection; these include moccasins, pouches, and strings of beads. The portrait of Longsdorff is framed and is housed outside of the collection with other framed objects.
