Dear Sir,

I beg you would lay before the Royal Society W. Bennett's Account of his Electrometer, the sensibility, and consequently the value of which exceeds anything that I have seen of the kind. I have seen all much pleasanter, and indeed with regard, the experiments mentioned in the account.

If you will, I dare say, consider this instrument as a valuable addition to our electrical and philosophical apparatus.

I am, Dear Sir,

Your sincerely,

J. Priestley
