President Edel Sets Date For His Retirement

DR. WILLIAM W. EDEL announced to the Board of Trustees at the semi-annual meeting in Philadelphia on December 14 that he plans to retire as the president of the College when he reaches his 65th birthday in March 1959. He made a similar announcement to the faculty at a special meeting called for the purpose on Monday, December 16.

Dr. Edel's statement as made to the trustees and the faculty was as follows: "Ladies and Gentlemen:

"I will have served you as your chief executive for 12 years at the end of the present academic year. With pardonable pride, I believe I can say that the College has progressed both in its academic standing and in its material possessions in that time. For this improvement I give credit to the wise judgment of the trustees, the effective service of my administrative staff and the devoted teaching and loyalty of faculty members of outstanding quality.

"But the years move on, and I am conscious of their passing. I believe the time has now arrived when I may gracefully request the Board to relieve me of the burden of administrative responsibility and permit me to retire.

"There are three basic reasons for this request. As all of you are aware, Mrs. Edel has not been really well for several years, and her doctors recommend against her remaining in the hot summers and difficult winters of the Eastern seaboard. You will understand, I am sure, my wish to be able to spend a few years with her and my family before the infirmities of age overtake me.

"The second reason is that we are now in sight of the accomplishment of the aims I outlined in my inaugural address of 1946 and in my formulation of the

President Edel

Ten Year Development Plan of 1948. With the completion of the Althouse Science Building, the dedication of the new Allison Methodist Church—Dickinson College Chapel and the installation of the Bonisteel Planetarium, the Ten Year Plan culminates with even greater advances than were contemplated at its inception. Our improvement in the most critical area of American higher education, faculty compensation, has not only won for us the Ford Achievement Award, but enabled us to move up to the front rank of liberal arts colleges in faculty salary scale.

"The third reason follows from the second. The ship has been steered through troubled waters and into a period of calm. Great problems have faced the College: accreditation, academic standards, admission policy, scarcity of endowment, limited facilities in buildings and equipment, the threat of subversive infiltration, and each of these has been faced squarely and solved, or at least the foundations of the solution solidly laid.

"Because of these reasons I am asking the Board to grant my request that I be placed upon the retired list of the College on my 65th birthday, March 16, 1959. I give the Board this 15 months' notice, in order that there may be ample time for the selection of my successor, and for the orderly turnover of the responsibilities of the presidency to him. Should the selection not be made by that time, or should my successor not be ready to take over the duties, I would be willing to continue for a few months should the Board desire it.

"With appreciation for the privilege of having served you since 1946, I am

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM W. EDEL"

In accepting Dr. Edel's statement "with regret," the Board directed its chairman, Boyd Lee Spahr, to prepare a resolution of appreciation and commendation for his many outstanding services to the College.

Victory Eludes Grid Men

A thrilling 13-13 tie with a highly-favored Johns Hopkins eleven was the best the 1957 Dickinson football team could do during the abbreviated seven-game season. The team came close to victory on only one other occasion, against Swarthmore, which left Biddle Field with a 14-12 triumph, although outgained in the air and on the ground.

Coach Don Seibert in his first year at the College had the team well grounded in the split T offense, but the resources for a consistent running game and a sound defense were lacking. Only in the air was Dickinson a real threat and this was largely the working of Dave Wachter, junior quarterback, who had moments of brilliance when he earned comparison with Doug Rehor, '48, greatest passer in Red and White annals.

Against Swarthmore, Wachter completed 14 out of 19 passes for 186 yards and had an even better day against Hopkins in the Homecoming thriller when he connected 20 out of 26 times for 211 yards. These individual performances rank with the best in Dickinson history.

A large crowd of alumni and other Biddle Field visitors witnessed the Hopkins game which found the team gain a tie in the final moments on a pass from Wachter to his brother, Bob, in the end zone and the conversion by Bob Cook, reserve fullback.

A mid-season outbreak of influenza was as upsetting as the superior power of the opponents. The team was out of action for two successive Saturdays because of illness at the College or on the campus of the opposition. The Susquehanna game, originally No. 4 on the schedule, was finally played at the end of the season and the game with Wagner on Staten Island could not be rescheduled and was cancelled.

The team will lose only six players by graduation. They are Dave Shanaman, the leading ground gainer; David Woodruff and Samuel Rose, in the backfield, and Harvey Bair, Robertson Taylor and Herbert Gaither, in the line.

The season's record (opponent score first): Lycoming, 40-6; Swarthmore, 14-12; F. and M., 35-7; Wagner, cancelled; Allegheny, 26-2; Wilkes, 13-0; Johns Hopkins, 13-13; Susquehanna, 25-14.

Increase Student Charges

An increase of $100 in the tuition charge of the College was authorized by the Board of Trustees this month on the recommendation of President Edel.

Beginning next September, when the increase is effective, the tuition will be $850 and the general charge for women living on the campus will be $1,650. The added income will enable the College to extend its scholarship and grant-in-aid program, provide for faculty salaries and meet the ever-rising cost of general college operations.

Dean Thompson Dies After Long Illness

RUSSELL I. THOMPSON, '20, dean emeritus of the College, died October 20 in Graduate Hospital, Philadelphia, following brain surgery.

He had entered the hospital early in the month and underwent two operations in the space of five days. He rallied in encouraging manner after the second operation, on October 14, until complications set in. He was 59 years old.

Having submitted to similar operations in 1950, Dr. Thompson spent the last years of his life under the shadow of incurable illness but with a brightness of spirit and an unyielding courage that flowed, all who knew him said, from deep religious faith.

The illness, which first manifested itself less than two years after his appointment to the highest academic office that the College can bestow, that of dean of the college, cut short an administrative career of great achievement and of great promise.

He first joined the faculty in 1928 as an instructor in education and psychology, became full professor and chairman of the department in 1941 and dean of the college in 1947. His health made it necessary for him to relinquish the deanship in 1950 and he became provost of the college. He retired in 1954 with the rank of Dean Emeritus and Richard V. C. Watkins Professor Emeritus.

Dr. Thompson was born December 29, 1898, in Reading, Pa., the son of the late Oan J. and Sallie E. Snyder Thompson. Both his father and grandfather were physicians. He prepared for college at the Reading High School for Boys.

For three years after his graduation from Dickinson in 1920, he taught psychology and Greek at Williamsport Dickinson Seminary, now Lycoming College, and then went to New Haven, Conn., as director of the Wesley Settlement House for three years. While there he began work for his Ph.D. degree at Yale. He received his doctorate in 1932.

Russell I. Thompson

When in my first year as the President of the College, I nominated Professor Russell I. Thompson to be the Dean of the College. I knew that I had associated with me in the academic life of the college an able, willing and devoted educator. I looked forward to years of fruitful growth and development as we worked together in the field in which he was so well trained.

It was a shock when his health became impaired so soon and that only three years later, in 1950, he was compelled to relinquish the deanship. I then nominated him to be Provost of the College, the first man ever to be so honored, but in 1954 his health had failed and he was retired from the faculty.

Though often wracked with pain in his long illness, his rare spirit and kindly mien rose above his suffering and was a challenge to those who visited him. Standing by him through these years of trial, the devotion and loving care of his wife, Ethel Wright Thompson, was like the Balm of Gilead to him and is a monument to her.

Three days after his last operation, I visited him in Graduate Hospital, Philadelphia. It appeared then that capable surgeons had won a victory. He was bright and smiled as he spoke of returning home soon. But it was not to be, and a few days later we laid to rest a truly great Dickinsonian.

William W. Edel,

The President of the College.

Joining the Dickinson faculty in 1928, with the rank of instructor in education and psychology, he rose steadily through the faculty grades. In addition to his teaching, he was at one time or another dean of the sophomore class, registrar of the college and director of the summer session.

In 1941, upon the death of Dr. Wilbur H. Norcross, he was elevated to the Richard V. C. Watkins Chair of Education and Psychology and became chairman of the department. He continued to serve as chairman following his appointment of dean of the College in 1947.

Dr. Thompson was recognized for his scholarship, administrative accomplishments and service to the College. In 1940, the Dickinson Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa elected him an alumnus member. The alumni luncheon of the 1954 commencement was turned into a tribute to him upon the announcement of his retirement. "He served the College loyally and with distinction," said President William W. Edel on that occasion. Dr. Thompson's health did not permit him to be present. He was presented in absentia with the mahogany chair symbolic of the Watkins professorship and a Wedgwood black basalt bowl inscribed with his name and faculty title in gold around the rim.

Fellow members of his Class of 1920 presented his portrait to the College at the 1955 commencement and this painting now hangs in the foyer of Bosler Hall.

Dr. Thompson married Ethel Wright in 1923. She survives him. Mrs. Thompson was one of the organizers and the first national president of the Mary Dickinson Club. She continues to reside at LeTort Farm, the Thompson home at Bonny Brook, near Carlisle.

Dr. Thompson was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and held membership in other educational and professional organizations. He was a member of Allison Methodist Church, a number of Masonic bodies and the Kappa Sigma fraternity. For a number of years he was secretary of the board of trustees of the Methodist

Home for Children, Shiremanstown, Pa.

He is survived, in addition to Mrs. Thompson, by a brother, Walter O. Thompson, Reading, Pa., and two sisters, Mrs. Paul Horting, Phila., and Mrs. Frank Keyes, Albuquerque, N. M.

Funeral services were held in Carlisle and were conducted by President Edel, the Rev. Wallace F. Stettler, '44, who was a student of Dr. Thompson, and the Rev. J. A. Leatherman, minister of the Allison Methodist Church.

Dies While On Leave

Prof. Lionel Dennis Peterkin, John Hay Whitney Professor of Latin since 1954, died at his home in Hancock, N. H. on September 13. He had not been in good health and had been granted a leave of absence until next February.

Born in 1888 in the Barbados, British West Indies, he was an honor graduate of Durham University, England, where he also received his master's degree. He taught at Harvard University for seven years.

In 1932, he joined the faculty of Phillips Andover Academy and taught there until his retirement in 1954. Last year, the Dickinson Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa elected him to honorary membership in recognition of a "distinguished teaching career, marked by high scholarship."

He is survived by his wife, who conducted a story telling hour for children at the Bosler Library last year.

Attends Hood Dedication

Glenn E. Todd, '12, trustee of the college, served as the delegate of college at the dedication of the Lillian Brown Hodson Science Hall and the R. Paul Smith Residence Hall at Hood College on October 18 and 19 in Frederick, Md.

Mr. Todd was accompanied by his wife, the former Mary K. Line, '23.

Launch Fund Campaign At Homecoming Session

THE 1958 Annual Giving Fund, formerly the Alumni Fund, had an auspicious launching at the well-attended Homecoming meeting of the Alumni Council and Class Agents when gifts totaling $56,000 were announced.

The hope that Dickinsonians everywhere will support the appeal in record number was voiced by John Milton Davidson, '33, serving as Fund Chairman for the fourth successive year. "The College we love continues to grow and so do its needs," he said.

While the 1,600 alumni who gave to the 1957 fund represented a 20 per cent increase in donors over the previous year, there remains much room for improvement in alumni support, considering the fact that there are 7,000 living Dickinsonians, he pointed out.

The work of Class Agents will be supplemented this year by Area Agents who will solicit prospects in person. The chairman thanked the Class Agents who, he said, are rendering a great service to the College and finding their work personally rewarding.

George Shuman, Jr., '37, financial vice-president of the College and development director, asked for 2,000 donors and $100,000 in unrestricted gifts, the same twin goals as last year when over $130,000 was subscribed but the number of donors was far short of objective.

Of the $56,000 contributed to date, $35,000 came from Irene duPont, of Wilmington, Del., for the new science building and $21,000 was in unrestricted gifts. It is the latter category of giving that will be stressed in the current effort, although, as Shuman said, no gift will be spurned because of a string attached.

C. Wendell Holmes, '21, president of the General Alumni Association, presided. The attendance of nearly 100 Council members, Alumni Club representatives and Class Agents and their wives or husbands was one of the largest of record. The meeting followed a dinner in Morgan Hall.

A great increase in the number of Life Members of the Association resulting from the Council's decision to increase the fee to $50 from $40 after next July 1 was reported by Dr. Gilbert Malcolm, '15, in his report as alumni secretary. Details of this phase of his report are given elsewhere in this issue. He urged Alumni Clubs to set dates for their dinners as soon as possible and to notify their alumni in plenty of time for them to reserve the date.

The following nominating committee for the May elections, when three Council members and one Alumni Trustee will be chosen, was appointed: John D. Hopper, '48, chairman, Mrs. Mary M. Eshelman, '43, Jack F. Spahr, '36, C. Weston Overholt, '50, and Clarence A. Welliver, '30.

The Council commended the last three graduating classes on their initiative, enterprise and loyalty in entering into insurance plans for creating major class gifts for the College. At the same time, it accepted the recommendation of a special study committee that the use of such plans be suspended for at least one year while the study continues. The Class of 1958 will be notified of the recommendation.

Hopper, chairman of the committee, reported that an examination of the insurance programs of the 1955 and 1956 classes shows a yearly decrease in the number of contributors and amount of premiums. Each class has experienced "cash due" situations which were met by recourse to the class damage fund.

The committee noted that the successful insurance plans long in operation at Yale, Princeton and Lehigh are favored by numbers, tradition and other circumstances and by the fact that these are all-male schools. Hopper reported that a check with Franklin and Marshall shows it has no insurance program and plans none. Gettysburg has no program, although one was tried there some years ago without success.

A number of alternate plans for class giving are under consideration by the committee, which suggested that officers of undergraduate classes be invited to attend committee meetings in the future to gain information of possible use in their class-gift planning.

The committee, which feels that insurance programs may decrease the young graduate's interest in the year-by-year fund raising programs of the College, was authorized to continue its study. Members with Hopper are Charles F. Irwin, Jr., '27, John P. Winand, '56, William E. Woodside, '54, Arthur L. Piccone, '55, Robert D. Burrowes, '57, H. Chace Davis, Jr., '50, and Edward Jones, '58.

President Edel Named Exchange Preacher

By Albert R. Walker, Assistant to the President

PRESIDENT Edel has been appointed an Exchange Preacher by the Council of Churches of Christ in the United States and will be among the distinguished American Preachers to fill pulpits in England this summer, under the auspices of the Interchange of Preachers Program of the Council. Under the Program a matching group of British clergymen will also fill pulpits in U.S. churches.

The appointment of Dr. Edel to this assignment is the latest in a series of his opportunities to win new friends for Dickinson on both sides of the ocean. In 1951, he traveled to Carlisle, England, as an emissary from Carlisle, U.S.A., and established a close liaison between the two Carlisles. It was also during this trip that he visited the Wedgwood Potteries and uncovered the original mold of the ceramic portrait of Joseph Priestley made by Josiah Wedgwood in 1779, which formed the basis for the Dickinson College Annual Priestley Award.

Since becoming President of Dickinson College, the demands upon Dr. Edel's time in traveling as a representative of the College or an association of colleges have been such that he has known very few completely free days. In June, he completed a term as President of the Foundation for Independent Colleges of Pennsylvania, Inc., the college-industry fund-raising group which he helped to organize. Following this, he was elected President of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities, an organization of 64 accredited institutions of higher learning in the Commonwealth.

Dr. Edel's itinerary taken from the last Sunday of October through the first Sunday of December is an example of the fast-pace set for the man who occupies the president's chair at Dickinson College. It began in Lakehurst, N.J., with a preaching assignment at the Cathedral of the Air, which Dr. Edel helped to erect 25 years ago when he was a chaplain in the U.S. Navy.

On the first Sunday of November, he began the first of a two-week period he was to spend in calling upon presidents of leading industries and business firms on behalf of the Foundation for Independent Colleges of Pennsylvania. Dr. Edel attended an executive meeting of the Foundation on Sunday night in Philadelphia, followed by a workshop the next day. During the week he returned twice to the Campus, the first time on Monday afternoon to preside at a meeting of the Faculty and to preach in Chapel on Tuesday, as a substitute for Dr. Philip S. Bernstein of Rochester, N.Y. Immediately following Chapel, he returned to Philadelphia to continue his calls on behalf of the Foundation.

Dr. Edel returned again to the Campus on Wednesday evening to attend to the accumulation of work on his desk and to introduce Dr. Archibald J. Carey, a distinguished Chicago clergyman who spoke in Chapel on Thursday morning. Following Chapel, he drove to Allentown where he continued his calls for the Foundation for Independent Colleges.

On the second Sunday in November, Dr. Edel was enroute to New York, where he joined an accreditation team of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools to help evaluate the academic, fiscal and administrative program of Finch College. Finch is a skyscraper college overlooking Central Park in midtown New York. After completing the survey, he spent two days in New York visiting the Offices of Foundations. He returned to the Campus on Friday in time for a meeting of the Board of Athletic Control, Boyd Lee Spahr Lecture and the Homecoming game with Johns Hopkins University.

On the third Sunday in November, Dr. Edel was host at a reception in his home to an estimated 125 persons at the start of Religion-in-Life Week and then early the next morning, he was off to Pittsburgh for the second week of his duties on behalf of the Foundation for Independent Colleges.

Dr. Edel returned to the Campus at the end of the week in time to see the final game of the football season against Susquehanna, and to catch up with the accumulation of work during his absence.

As November moved into the final week, Dr. Edel went to Harrisburg to help select Fulbright scholars as a member of the Fulbright Selection Committee for Pennsylvania and on Thanksgiving, he presided at a family dinner.

December has started out to the same hectic month for the president of Dickinson College. On the first Sunday, he has already presided at a four-hour session of the executive committee of the Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities to help plan a long-range program for higher education in the Commonwealth.

Dr. Edel's advice to anyone who still wants to become a College President, after reading this, is to develop a rugged constitution, buy a matched set of traveling luggage, and give up any hopes for the normal comforts of home and relaxation.

An Exchange Preacher

The Rev. Robert J. Thomas, '40, was selected as an exchange preacher to Ottawa, Canada and went there on October 27 to preach in the Canadian capitol under the joint auspices of the Syracuse and Ottawa Councils of Churches.

He is the minister of the Rockefeller Memorial Church at Cumberland and Tecumseh in Syracuse, N. Y. His wife is the former Beatrice Pennell, '39.

Their son, Craig Robert Thomas, who was the 1954 Cerebral Palsy poster boy, and whose friends included President and Mrs. Dwight D. Eisenhower and other national celebrities, died in June. At the age of 7, he began writing letters to famous people which brought him in contact with hundreds of leading national figures. He was named an honorary citizen of several states and was appointed first honorary cadet in the Civil Air Patrol in 1951. Others he could list as friends were Roy Rogers, Walt Disney, Governor Thomas Dewey, General William Dean, and the late Connie Mack.

Honor Bishop Ledden

Syracuse University will have a professorship in religious education next year. It will be known as the W. Earl Ledden Professorship of Religious Education in honor of Bishop Ledden, '10, administrative head of the Syracuse area of the Methodist Church.

The University will use $300,000 to endow the new professorship from funds to be received from members of 900 Methodist Churches. The amount is part of a goal of $585,000 to be raised in the next three years for increased support to higher education from churches in the northern, central and western New York and northern Pennsylvania area.

Prepares Needed Guide To Graduate Studies

BEFORE top government officials issued a desperate call for more scholars to restore American leadership in the arts and sciences, Frederic W. Ness, Dickinson, '33, was doing something practical about the crisis triggered by the Soviet Sputniks.

The Academic Vice-President and Dean of his alma mater, Doctor Ness last Spring began preparing A Guide to Graduate Study for the Association of American Colleges, with financial support from the Ford Foundation and with the cooperation of the Association of Graduate Schools in the Association of American Universities.

The Guide was published this Fall, when copies were rushed to college and university deans throughout the country. It was conceived by Dr. Ness to serve several ends: to assist undergraduates in planning, academically and financially, to meet the requirements of graduate study; to give a realistic view of the educational and social life of the graduate student; to provide some basis for making a wise selection of a graduate school; to encourage better qualified undergraduates "to continue their training toward the greatest utilization of their abilities in a life of service to their nation and the world at large."

Practical considerations, including the urgency of the times, made it necessary to limit detailed information to graduate schools offering programs leading to the Ph.D., the degree generally regarded as the highest earned degree which American institutions can offer. For the first time the undergraduate student now has available in a single volume a vast amount of information about fields of study offered by 138 graduate schools, their facilities, admission requirements, fees and financial aid. For easy reference there is a guide to all fields of study, ranging from accounting to zoology.

In a foreword to the Guide, Dr. Theodore A. Distler, executive director, Association of American Colleges, points out that "recruiting enough good teachers is the most crucial problem with which higher education is likely to be faced in the next decade." "If we do not have enough teachers, we cannot hope to have enough scientists, engineers, administrators, preachers, doctors, nurses or what you will," says Dr. Distler. The Guide which Dean Ness has authored gets at the grass roots of this problem by helping college faculties to multiply their "intellectual progeny."

"While it may be presumptuous," states Dean Ness in the preface, "to suggest ways in which the Guide might be used, the sponsors, by presenting two copies to each accredited four-year undergraduate college, are hopeful that it will become widely available to academic deans, deans of students, major professors, advisers, and to any others to whom the student turns for advice about the possibility of graduate study."

The first 54 pages of the 335-page publication are devoted to essays by Dean Ness under the general heading "Graduate Study and the Undergraduate" and these sub-topics: What are the objectives of graduate study?, Who should go to graduate school?, How to prepare for graduate study, How to select a graduate school, How to gain admission to graduate school, How to finance graduate study, What to expect in graduate school.

Responsible for the preparation of the information about the graduate schools and for the production of the Guide were Robert W. Crist, '23, and his son, Robert G. Crist, '47.

Dr. William W. Edel, President of the College, is a member of the Commission on Professional and Graduate study, Association of American Colleges, under whose direction the Guide was published.

In addition to Dr. Edel, members of the Dickinson faculty, particularly Arthur C. Flandreau, Jr., Robert A. McGill and Herbert Wing, Jr., are credited with assistance by Dean Ness.

Copies of A Guide to Graduate Study are being distributed by the American Council on Education, 1785 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W., Washington, 6, D.C.

Create New Watches

The inventive skills of Henry Line, '38, and his brother, James, partners in the Carlisle jewelry firm of Line and Line, have led to the creation of a new line of watches known as the "Henriline."

The "Henriline" features four new mechanical improvements patented by the Line brothers and are manufactured in Switzerland by the Welta Watch Company of Bienne for the Henriline Watch Company, Inc., organized by the Lines.

Current importation of 200 watches a month will be increased to 1,000 monthly, Henry Line, the president, announced. Only men's watches are presently being offered. A line for women will be introduced late in 1958, he said.

Henry and James Line are brothers of Lemuel B. Line, '39, Philadelphia artist, whose drawings of ships, freight cars and other forms of transportation often appear in Fortune Magazine, and Harriet B. Thompson, concert pianist.

Set N. Y. Dinner Date

Announcement has been made by J. Cameron Frendlich, '13, president of the Dickinson Club of New York, concerning the annual dinner.

It will be held at Schrafft's Restaurant, 556 Fifth Avenue, which is between 45th and 46th Streets, New York City, at 6:00 p. m., Friday, January 17, 1958.

Narrowly Escapes Death

Joan D. Gallagher, '57, had what she now can call a "smashing introduction to Hawaii" though she nearly drowned in an accident when she reached the island in August where she was to teach at the Punahou School in Honolulu. She began her teaching two months late.

While sailing in an outrigger and racing in on a huge wave at 40 miles per hour, a surfboard rider got frightened and jumped off his board. The board crashed into the canoe, ripped off the outrigger, and catapulted the riders into the Pacific. The loose outrigger struck Joan in the face and knocked her unconscious. She was saved from drowning because she had worn a long-sleeved blouse for sun protection. The blouse billowed her up long enough for Dr. Fox, headmaster of the school, to spy her and reach her before she was swept under the surface. He held her up until a passing surfboard rider came by and took her to shore. They were one and a half miles from shore when the accident happened.

She sustained a contusion of her left cheek bone and surgery was performed from inside her mouth so there will be no scars. The doctors told her that it is a miracle that her sight was saved. She will be under treatment for six months, though she resumed her teaching in October.

Joan is the daughter of Thomas R. Gallagher, '27, and Helen Douglass Gallagher, '26, alumna trustee of the college.

Mathews House Becomes Dormitory For Women

The Mathews House

An additional residence hall for 26 women students has been opened by the College at 60 Mooreland Avenue, formerly the home of Col. Philip Mathews and Miss Anne Mathews, his sister.

One of the largest and most attractive of the private homes in the Mooreland section of the town, it is ideally situated for College purposes across the street from the Benjamin Rush Campus and the new Allison Methodist Church and College Chapel. The Todd Memorial Home, with its trees and wide lawns, is next door.

Following acquisition last Spring, the 16-room, 2½-story brick house of colonial design was extensively altered for dormitory use. Improvements include a new heating system and all new plumbing. Each floor has been laid out with study and sleeping rooms and its own shower baths and lavatory. The ground floor also contains a parlor and date room and the house director's quarters. Women students living there take their meals at Drayer Hall.

Mathew's House, as it is now known, is the fourth small residence for women. The others are the Gibbs House, Biddle House and McIntire House. All were former private residences. There are also, of course, the much larger Drayer and Metzger Halls for women.

Delegate To Geneva

Edward J. McClain, '37, served as the delegate of Dickinson College at the inauguration of Dr. Edwin Cameron Clarke as the 15th President of Geneva College at Beaver Falls, Pa., on October 12.

133 Sign Up For Life Memberships Before Cost Rises

SINCE the mailing of a letter in September by the Alumni Secretary to all alumni, who are not Life Members of the General Alumni Association, telling of the rise in the cost from $40 to $50 next July 1, 133 checks have been received for Life Membership and more than 300 others have paid annual dues. This raises the total number of Lifers to 1,829.

At the June meeting of the Alumni Council, action was taken to increase annual dues from $2.00 to $3.00 after July 1, 1958 but to keep class dues (for the first three years out of college) at $1.00 per year.

The letter stated "Today, Life Membership costs $40.00, but on and after July 1, 1958 it will cost $50.00. The $40 may be paid in one installment or by agreeing to pay $10 a year for four years. Checks should be made payable to Dickinson College and mailed to THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS, Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa."

"The letter had another paragraph which read Life Membership (while not a contribution to the Annual Giving Fund) ends the payment of annual dues to the General Alumni Association and carries a life subscription to THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS. It also gives the right to vote for members of the Alumni Council and Alumni Trustee for life. When a subscription is paid in full a Life Membership certificate, suitable for framing is issued."

When a subscription is made, the maker is asked to include a note saying what he or she is doing now so that proper announcement may be made in future issues of the magazine.

The first check in the new series was entered before the letter was mailed and it came about differently than has ever happened before. When Col. Charles M. Steese and Mrs. Mary Hoover Salter, both members of the Class of 1907, were married in the Durbin Oratory in Old West on September 20, the groom handed an envelope to President William W. Edel, who performed the ceremony. It did not contain an honorarium for the officiating clergyman but a $40 check of the groom to make his bride a Life Member of the General Alumni Association, of which he had been a Lifer for years.

The first reposes to the letter came from John R. Bowen, M.D., '46, who is a physician for the Penn Mutual Life Insurance Company in Philadelphia and the next mail brought a check from William A. Maquillen, '57, of Johnstown, Pa., who graduated last June and is doing graduate work for his master's degree at the University of Pittsburgh.

Planned Language Program

Many schools throughout the country have adopted what is known in education as FLES (Foreign Language Elementary School) program, which was first initiated at Somerville, N. J., by Dorothy Chamberlain, '28.

In 1948, the Somerville schools began the teaching of Spanish and French in the third grade and the youngsters continue the same language all the way through high school. Thus began the first FLES program in a public school in the East.

Other schools, such as Washington, D. C., had a program in which, if there were an elementary teacher who knew a language, she taught some to her particular grade. Somerville hired a language specialist, now there are three, who taught nothing but foreign language in the grades.

As a result, Somerville is nationally recognized and Miss Chamberlain has served on one national committee, several state committees and two committees on FLES for the Northeast Conference of Languages. She has spoken on the program all over the East.

A native of Somerville, she is the daughter of the late Rev. Leon Chamberlain, D.D., '97. She is Chairman of the Foreign Language Department at the Somerville High School, a member of a number of professional associations and author of articles published in Hispania and in the New Jersey Educational Journal. She has done graduate work at Middleburg, Mexico, Havana, Temple, Rutgers and Maine Universities.

A Dickinsonian Speaks

From a Morgan Lecture on College Teaching, delivered before Dickinson students Nov. 26 by Prof. Vincent A. McCrossen, '30, member of the faculty of Boston College.

"In closing I wish to make this final remark. Dickinson College is a college to help the individual find himself through high academic standards. I have taught in many colleges and universities. But I have always a pride and a nostalgia in being a Dickinsonian. I have seen very, very few such opportunities as you have here to find yourself and know yourself under the challenge of high academic ideals. You have here hallowed ground upon which to learn to be true to the divine spark that is in you."

Expect Fine Tank Team

The presence of 13 lettermen from last year's great swimming team virtually assures Dickinson another fine tank season this winter, although the 1956-57 record of eight victories in nine meets will be hard to improve upon or even to match.

Coach David Eavenson's well-balanced squad is headed by Capt. Don O'Neill, butterfly specialist; Jonathan Kulp, voted "most valuable" team member last season, and Edward Mulligan, holder of most of the Dickinson freestyle records and Middle Atlantic Conference champion at 220 and 440 yards freestyle.

The schedule: Dec. 14, Delaware; Jan. 11, Wilkes; 18, P. M. C.; Feb. 1, Gettysburg; 8, Drexel; 12, at Swarthmore; 15, Lycoming; 22, triangular meet with Gettysburg and F. and M., at Gettysburg; 25, at Bucknell; Feb. 28-Mar. 1, Middle Atlantic States championships; 5, at F. and M.

Two Alumni Defeat Two For Work Bench

George W. Atkins

Richard E. Kohler

YORK COUNTY voters elected a pair of Democratic attorneys after four Dickinsonians waged a lively campaign which ended in November when District Attorney George W. Atkins, '30, '33L, was elected judge of the Court of Common Pleas and Richard E. Kohler, '37L, judge of the Orphans Court. Kohler succeeds Judge Harvey A. Gross, '03L, who held the post 21 years and is the only separate Orphan's Court judge York County has had.

Atkins and Kohler defeated Edwin M. Buchen, '33, '36L, of Hanover and Horace G. Ports, '29L, of York, the Republican candidates.

Judge Atkins was district attorney at the time of his election and had served four years from 1950 to 1954 as first assistant district attorney before his election to the higher office. From 1946 to 1950 he was Solicitor to the York County Controller. Prior to that he was a corporation tax officer with the Department of Revenue of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Politicians were surprised when Judge Dale F. Shughart, '34, '38L, of Carlisle, was returned to office in Cumberland County, with a lead of more than 6,500 votes. It was the largest majority ever recorded in the county for the judicial office. He defeated his fraternity brother, J. Boyd Landis, '31, '34L, the Democratic candidate.

Judge Karl E. Richards, '10, of Harrisburg, Trustee of the College, was re-elected Orphans Court judge of Dauphin County.

Two graduates of the Law School were reelected in Schuylkill County, Judge James J. Curran, '30L, of Pottsville and Judge Charles W. Staudenmeier, '16L, of Ashland.

All-Americans? No! Not One! Americans? Innumerable

Reprinted from the Sunday Patriot-News, Harrisburg, Pa. of November 17, 1957, the day after Homecoming and the Johns Hopkins game.

By RUSTY COWAN
Sunday Patriot-News Sports Writer

CARLISLE, Nov. 16—In its attitude toward football, Dickinson is like the eye of the hurricane. The whole world may be whirling madly around, but in the vortex all is calm.

Yet in this atmosphere of organized purity, football is exciting as that played by Notre Dame, Oklahoma, Army, Navy, Duke, Pitt or Penn State is played.

This writer knows. He has seen them all this year.

Yet nothing can match the thrill of watching the Red Devil brother battery of Wachter to Wachter passing its way down the field.

Four pitches; four strikes. That adds up to 90 yards and a touchdown; a tie ball game with Johns Hopkins, 13-13; the first time that Dickinson has been able to escape a loss all year.

This is pure-as-pure football, clean as the new driven snow. This is football for fun, not for pay. Nor for its equivalent—a college education in repayment for athletic prowess.

THE OTHER brands of football have their point, but so does out-and-out professionalism. They certainly produce better teams. Notre Dame, Army, Oklahoma, et al, would sweep Dickinson and Johns Hopkins off the field.

But you can't recruit thrills. They are made by two evenly matched teams playing wide open football.

Dickinson is no newcomer to football. It has been played since 1885 and played them all. The Red Devils have proved demons to Penn State five times, to Navy and to others. They beat Penn State as recently as 1931.

Over on the other side of town, the ghosts of the Fabulous Redmen still roam on a frosty night over the site of what was once the Carlisle Indian School. They can tell you how Dickinson fought and defeated the most famous football team of them all.

THERE'S A game in town today. Near the Jim Thorpe monument you stop and talk to a pair of pretty girls like Barbara Rice, Newville, and Elizabeth Eberly, Newburg.

"What football game?" they ask. "The game was played last night."

That would have been Carlisle and Chambersburg. There were 5,000 on hand then; about 2,500 at Biddle Field today.

Down the street, things are a little more frenzied. "To Sputnik with Hopnik," proclaims the Sigma Xi fraternity float being completed in honor of homecoming day.

"Are you excited, Charles Mayer?" you ask a Lancaster lad.

"Sure we're excited," he answers. "Not so much over the game, though. But the parties will be exciting tonight."

At Alumni Hall the homecoming luncheon is in progress. The chicken is good, the atmosphere friendly and the speeches short. Things are so friendly that a perfect stranger can walk in off the street and help himself.

DR. WILLIAM W. EDEL, who proclaimed in April, 1955, that "there will be no subsidization of athletes," is talking.

"We believe in being optimistic," he said. "Therefore we expect to win . . . I'll see all of you at the game."

No promises of success. No pledges to better teams in the future. No pleas for money to support a program.

This is the epitome of low pressure football. The players walk through back alleys and along a railroad track from their dressing room to reach the field. There are no autograph seekers around, but the omnipresent small boy carrying the headgear is on hand. Someone cares.

Don Seibert walks behind them. There is no large entourage as there is around many a football coach. Last year Seibert was a successful high school coach; this year he has been unable to produce a victory.

HIS FACE is tauter than it was a year ago; his hair a little thinner. But his eyes still smile, even though there is no smile on his face.

This may be football for fun but the coach is still not packed in a pressure-proof vacuum. If he loses, he will probably be fired as surely as he would at Oklahoma or Notre Dame. He doesn't have to win all the time, but he must sometime.

"The pressure is off everybody but the coach," he said. "They brought me here to change things."

It's a half hour before the game, but the stands are nearly deserted. The crowd at the gate is composed of ticket takers, program salesmen and policemen.

ONE BIG virtue of football for fun, from a spectators standpoint, is that you don't have to stand in line for tickets.

It's 15 minutes to game time and the team is in its dressing room. First he gives fundamental instruction, and then:

"We have lost three games we should have won . . . We should get the breaks this time, they are long overdue . . . There is nothing a little determination won't do . . . I'm expecting to win."

To match a low-pressure atmosphere, it is a low-pressure speech. No shouting, no histrionics.

The team went on the field, shouting and enthusiastic. Perhaps they were over anxious. On the kickoff a halfback moved up too fast and bobbled the ball. He recovered and the game was underway.

THIS IS NO World Series crowd and there are no World Series roars from it. But it is an enthusiastic crowd. They shout, they roar, they follow the cheerleaders; they applaud the players as they come off the field; they damn the coach when things go wrong.

There are eight cheerleaders. They are pretty, but to match the atmosphere, they are not beautiful in the sense that a Hollywood reproduced cheerleader would be.

There is the usual dog on the field. A much more enthusiastic dog than usual. He isn't chased far and seems quite interested in the proceedings.

After the game, the teams need no police escort to get them off the field. In fact, they seem quite happy to meet girl friends, parents, well-wishers on the field; after all, this is football for fun.

SEIBERT WALKS virtually alone back toward the dressing room: "It beats losing," he is consoled—or congratulated as the case may be. "Except for a few mistakes . . ." he answers.

There's Jan Skladany on the dressing table. He didn't play due to a leg injury. His father was Muggsy Skladany, a Pitt All-American, and Jan has seen big time football at its biggest—as a spectator.

"It's like any kind of football," Jan said. "The only difference is that here it isn't subsidized; everyone plays because they like it."

"Dad influenced me to go here. He didn't tell me what to do, but let me make up my own mind. I decided that I'd like a small school best."

THE LIGHTS are going on in Old West. The old school, founded in 1773, hasn't produced an All-American, probably never will.

"But," Dickinson would answer, "I have produced Pennsylvania's only president, James Buchanan. I have produced a Chief Justice of the United States in Roger Brooks Taney."

"Among my sons are 14 Bishops, four of them living. More than 100 college presidents have called me Mother. Two Secretaries of War and two Secretaries of Treasury have studied here. The discoverer of chloromycetin and three governors of Pennsylvania have set at my feet."

"All-Americans, none; great Americans, innumerable."
And the ageless Appalachians answer back: "Amen."

Retires From Teaching

Clarence M. Shepherd, '10, retired on July first after 20 years as a teacher in the Baltimore public schools. He has been chairman of the science department

Denison Honors the President of Redlands

DR. George Henry Armacost, '26, president of the University of Redlands, Calif., was awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters by Denison University in June. At the same time, his eldest son, Peter, received his Bachelor of Arts degree.

Peter was awarded both a Danforth and Woodrow Wilson Fellowship and is now working for his Master's degree in Psychology at the University of Minnesota. Following the commencement at Denison, he was married. After the wedding, the rest of the Armacost family, Mike, now a senior at Carleton College, Sam, now a freshman at Denison, Mary, a high school sophomore, and Mrs. Armacost toured 13 countries in Europe in a Volkswagen Micro-bus. Dr. Armacost then returned to Redlands to start his 13th year as President of the University.

The Redlands enrollment is now 1331 and total assets have increased to over $11,000,000, with about half in plant and half in endowment. Three new buildings are being dedicated this year, a new addition to the library, a science building and a dormitory. Since he went to Redlands in 1945, three dormitories holding 424 students have been erected, also a music building, a hall of sciences, a stadium, an addition to the library, an addition to the Commons and three temporary buildings for science and dramatics and a village housing 50 married families.

The University of Redlands is preparing to celebrate its 50th anniversary and a campaign for funds is being launched to add more than a million dollars for the endowment fund.

When he was elected president of Redlands, Dr. Armacost was on the faculty of William and Mary College in the Department of Education and was also acting Dean of Men. Dickinson College conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws upon him in the June, 1947, commencement.

Memorialize Organist

Norman Landis, '94, whose death in May, 1956, ended 60 years of service to the Presbyterian Church, Flemington, N. J., as organist and choirmaster, is memorialized by a bronze wall tablet placed in the church by its organizations and by friends.

As part of the unveiling service last October 6, former pupils of Mr. Landis presented a memorial concert of music he composed. In a long and fruitful life devoted largely to church music, he wrote more than 50 published pieces for organ, voice and piano.

A memorial booklet printed for the service included a sketch of his life, a reproduction of the tablet and two photographs of Mr. Landis in choir robes. One of the photos shows him as a young and dedicated organist in 1896, the year he assumed the church position, and the other, in the last months of his life.

The tablet reads: "To the glory of God in memory of Norman Landis, A.A.G.O., beloved organist of this church for 60 years, March 15, 1896—May 23, 1956. 'A man of understanding holdeth his peace'".

Romance Blossoms at 50th Reunion

One of the campus romances in the class of 1907 was that of the then Mary E. Hoover and Charles M. Steese. When they graduated Mary went to her home in Wellsville and Charles left for the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he received a B.S. degree in 1908. Two years later he began an army career and was discharged as a colonel in 1945.

The pair returned to Commencement for their 25th Reunion in 1932, but accompanying Mary was her husband Charles M. Salter, of the Class of 1906, and Colonel Steese was also married.

They met again at the 50th Reunion in June 1957 as widow and widower. When Commencement was over Mary didn't go back to Vancouver, British Columbia and the Colonel was in no hurry to return to Harrison, Arkansas. Instead, he went to see his classmate at her parental homestead in Wellsville, where her brother, Donald D. Hoover, '06, resides.

They were still around on September 20 when they came to the Durbin Oratory in Old West and were married by Dr. William W. Edel, the President of the College.

Harriers Undefeated

Dickinson's first cross-country team in eight years turned in a perfect record this Fall, sweeping to impressive victory on all three of the meets. A fourth meet, with Juniata, had to be cancelled because of an outbreak of influenza on the campus.

The Harriers of Coach Joseph Du-Charme, who is also coach of the track team, defeated Albright, 21-40; F. and M., 21-37, and Elizabethtown, 28-31, in that order. The Elizabethtown meet was the only one over the home course, a 4.2 mile test laid out over the countryside northwest of the campus.

The Harriers provided Dickinson with its first undefeated sports team since

Bride and Groom

1937 when the football eleven turned in seven victories and a tie.

Fraternity Honors Four

National Achievement Awards of Phi Epsilon Pi were presented to four alumni of Dickinson's Iota chapter at a dinner given by the chapter in their honor in Philadelphia.

Recipients were Herman Levin, New York, producer of "My Fair Lady" and other Broadway hits; Benjamin R. Epstein, Wash., D.C., director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith; Joseph N. Gorson, Phila., banker, and Joseph Altman, mayor of Atlantic City. The representation was made by Vidgor Kanaler, Pittsburgh, grand superior of the fraternity.

At a meeting of the Iota Corporation preceding the testimonial dinner plans were advanced for construction of a new Dickinson chapter house on the site of the present building which will be razed. Work is expected to be started in the Spring.

Chosen National President of Beta Theta Pi

THE BETA THETA PI fraternity chose a Dickinsonian as its national president at the organization's 118th general convention last August in Poland Spring, Maine.

Sherwood M. Bonney, '31, New York lawyer and insurance executive, was unanimously elected for a term of three years and was immediately installed by Bertram W. Bennett, retiring president, who presented Bonney with the President's pin.

A former district chief, general treasurer and a trustee of the Founders Fund, Bonney is the first Beta from Dickinson to be honored with the presidency, although a number of other alumni of the College hold offices in the fraternity. Samuel J. McCartney, Jr., '41, and Howard J. Maxwell, '48, are district chiefs. Karl W. Fischer, '25, is the assistant historian and Dr. Gilbert Malcolm, '15, has long been on the editorial staff of the Beta magazine.

Dickinson Betas rejoiced over the honor accorded Bonney and turned their usual Homecoming banquet last month into a testimonial dinner for him. Upwards of 100 members of the active chapter and alumni attended. Toastmaster was E. Forrest Hann, '31, Bordentown, N.J., lawyer and a classmate of Bonney's, and the main speaker was A. J. G. Priest, member of the faculty of the University of Virginia Law School and a former Beta president.

Others on the program were Dr. Malcolm, who extended the greetings of the College; Henry B. Suter, '31, Baltimore, speaking for alumni, and Grant Mulholland, '58, president of the active chapter. Bonney was presented with an electric desk clock by alumni and a set of engraved silver cuff links by the active chapter.

Bonney is treasurer of Johnson and Higgins, insurance brokerage firm with offices at 63 Wall Street, New York; a director of the Sun Chemical Corp. and trustee of the Irving Savings Bank of

Writes Book On Insurance Agency Management

FRED A. LUMB, C.L.U., '29, is the author of a book "The What's of Agency Management," published by Rough Notes Company, Inc., of Indianapolis, which is now in its second issue.

The first edition was sold out pre-publication to the Saturday Evening Post for a special promotion of theirs. The Post distributed over 3,000 throughout the country to agency heads and to Home Office personnel of the major companies. It was part of an insurance promotion campaign on the part of the magazine to stimulate additional insurance advertising. The author, who is now general agent of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company office in Grand Rapids, Mich., has had 15 years of experience as a general agent. He has not written the book for monetary reward, but rather to "help others avoid any of the headaches" which he suffered over the years. He has succeeded admirably.

A native of Harrisburg and a graduate of Technical High School there, he entered business as an agent in 1937 after graduation from the college, a brief career in newspaper work, and seven years with the Bell Telephone Co., most of which were spent in special equipment selling.

In 1938, he became a supervisor of an agency in his home town, Harrisburg, and acquired his C.L.U. in 1940. In 1942, he became associate general agent in the Harrisburg agency of New England Life.

From 1944 to 1946, he was in the Navy aboard the light cruiser, Concord, in the North Pacific. The Concord is credited with firing the last shot of the Pacific war; and the author signed her final log, decommissioning her.

Studying at sea, he acquired the C.L.U. management certificate in 1946 and became general agent for his company in Grand Rapids in July of that same year, opening the agency when it was broken off from Detroit. He won the company's Manpower award in division in 1953 and the President's award for overall performance in division in 1955.

He has served as president of the Harrisburg Life Underwriters, Grand Rapids C.L.U. chapter, Michigan Management Association, and Grand Rapids General Agents and Managers. He is a past president of the Grand Rapids Civic Theatre and a former member of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A. there and formerly also a trustee of the Trinity Methodist Church. He is the author of numerous articles for insurance periodicals.

He is a member of Theta Chi Fraternity, the Sales Executive Club, the Peninsular Club and the American Society of Chartered Life Underwriters.

He married the former Caroline E. Finkenbinder, a graduate of Hood College. They have two daughters, Marilyn, who is now doing graduate work at Indiana University in radio and television upon her graduation from Illinois Wesleyan last June, and Carol, who is now a junior at Hood, where she has been named Chief Honorary Marshall as the number one girl scholastically in the junior class.
