MICROPRINT: The Library's Friend In Need

By PROF. CHARLES C. SELLERS, Librarian

IN 1951, two pleasant, elderly gentlemen called at our Library and, after assuring themselves that such a gift would be acceptable, presented us with 59 volumes, all in immaculate condition, which had belonged to their father, William Charles Ford Reed, of the Class of 1851. These were the books he had used in the Preparatory School and College. They represent everything required for the bachelor's degree, and while students frequently delved farther, there was no actual need for them to do so.

The trend in college education since then, however, has been consistently toward the wider and more independent use of books, and college libraries have continually expanded with the trend. At the same time, the volume of printed matter has been increasing. Periodicals, from newspapers to learned journals, are emphasized as study materials to an extent inconceivable a century ago, and now stand on an equality with book needs. The revolution in study has been accompanied by a revolution in the reproduction of printed matter. This technological revolution is exciting in the rapidity of its development, in its many aspects, and in the fact that it is now possible for any library to bring almost any materials to its public.

GREAT SPACE SAVER

Through these techniques, most of them photographic, it is within the range of possibility to build at Dickinson a specialized library collection in any desired field, complete to a degree which could not even have been hoped for a few years ago. Rare or unique books and serials can not only be brought here in microprint form at relatively low cost but, because of their compact size, effect an enormous saving in storage overhead. We are now gradually building up a set of the New York Times on microfilm. What we now hold on film it would be almost impossible for us to store as bound volumes. When the bound volumes we do have, running from 1931 to 1948, are replaced by film, we shall have gained 312 feet of shelving, enough for the storage of over 2,000 ordinary books. Similarly, with journals such as Saturday Review, we save both binding and storage costs by replacing the current issues with microprint.

PROF. HIMES WAS PIONEER

Dickinson can claim her own small share of the credit for these benefits. Just short of a hundred years ago, at the outbreak of the Civil War, our Professor Charles Francis Himes suggested to the government a plan for reducing messages photographically to microprint on tiny squares of mica (this was the glass-plate, pre-film era of photography) as a means to maintaining secret communication with Union sympathizers in the south. His plan was not used, but he had demonstrated its technical possibility. Later, Himes pioneered in the photographic reproduction of unique historical records. He was fully aware of the implications and future usefulness of both processes, and considered photography of sufficient importance to include it in his teaching.

Prof. Sellers, an authority on the history of American art and author of the definitive, two-volume biography of Charles Willson Peale, artist of the Revolutionary period in America, is at work on a new book dealing with the portraits of Benjamin Franklin made in the sage's lifetime. Research for this book has taken Prof. Sellers to London and Paris. He came to the Dickinson faculty in 1949 as curator of Dickinsoniana from Wesleyan University where he was an associate of Fremont Rider in the development of several revolutionary library techniques, including microcards. Since 1956 he has been the librarian of the College. Temple University gave him the honorary Doctor of Letters degree in 1957. Haverford College has honored him with election to Phi Beta Kappa.

Microfilm is the oldest of the processes, and the best adapted to the preservation of long series. It has been accompanied by various forms of microprint on paper or celluloid, the best known of which is the microcard, invented by Fremont Rider 12 years ago and perhaps the most striking illustration of the savings involved since it places, in effect, an entire book on its own catalog card. Actually, for a large volume, several of the 3" x 5" cards are required, but a single issue of a journal generally needs only one, and with these, pamphlets or small books, the cards have an advantage over film since they can be handled more quickly in the reading machine.

COLLEGE MAKES START

Dickinson has at present one microfilm and one microcard reader. The growth of materials and of the use for them have brought us to the verge of needing more, and in our plans for library expansion, a much-enlarged room for these and related services will inevitably have consideration. Indeed, it may be predicted that a fairly large part of the library of the immediate future, at Dickinson or elsewhere, will be given over to non-book materials.

These will include not only micro-reproductions of printed matter, but the phonodiscs (of which we have a good incipient collection, but no more), and the 2" x 2" slides of art objects, of which we have now more than 8,000, mostly in color. This last is a very reputable total, and includes the important new study set of 1,200 covering the "Arts of the United States," the recent gift jointly of Dr. David Van Pelt and the Carnegie Corporation.

Microprint has one obvious disadvantage. The physical character of the book or manuscript, always of significance to the scholar, is lost, and the reading machine imposes a mechanical process between user and material. For this reason it is used only for research materials or those available in no other form, remaining in an area where reader inconvenience is least, and financial savings greatest.

NEW PROCESS HELPS

Some of the inconvenience is being overcome by the use of xerography, a new, non-photographic process which cheaply transforms microfilm into readable printed pages. So far, the Dickinson Library had used this only for the inexpensive duplication of catalog cards for the union catalogs. Simpler copiers for office use are being adapted to library service, and one of these could be useful here, for the convenience of students, and to make multiple copies of short articles for use in the Reserve Room or elsewhere.

There is much in progress and in prospect at Dickinson which students and teachers alike of the last century would consider beyond belief—excepting, of course, those who had talked with Professor Himes. He knew it was coming.

Albert Walker Resigns

Prof. Albert Walker, the alumni secretary and editor of the DICKINSON ALUMNUS since last March, resigned in mid-August to accept appointment at Bowling Green University, Ohio, as director of university publications. He took up his new work Sept. 1.

Prof. Walker was assistant to the president of the College from 1956 until last March when he was appointed alumni secretary and magazine editor.

Roger Steck, '26, director of news services at the College and an associate editor of the DICKINSON ALUMNUS, has been appointed acting alumni secretary and acting editor of the magazine.

COVER STORY

Class of '60 Faces World with High Ideals

THE Dickinson Class of 1960—our newest alumni—entered a troubled world. As a result, members of this class may well be the most socially and politically conscious of all Dickinson generations.

Ample evidence of this special awareness is found in the theme for the 1960 Microcosm, published and edited for the Senior Class by Gary E. Lawton, '60, editor, and his staff.

Emblazoned on the opening page is: "The 1960 Microcosm Salutes the United Nations and Emulates its Aims."

THEY HAVE DREAMS

The main headings continue to embody the hopes and dreams of the class. Here are a few:

"To life together in peace as good neighbors . . . establish conditions under which justice and respect can be maintained . . . achieve cooperation in solving problems.

"To achieve international cooperation . . . freedoms for all without distinction . . . better standards of life in a larger freedom.

"To promote social progress . . . develop friendly relations among nations based upon respect for the principles of equal rights . . . sovereign equality of all its members.

"To practice tolerance and live together in peace."

But while the newest Dickinson graduates are to be deprived, at least temporarily, of peace, they seem to have an ample supply of the other half of the bromide—prosperity.

They have readily found their places in our economy, sustained in part by the critical shortage of teachers, and the necessity for graduate study and military service.

80 CONTINUE SCHOOLING

Out of a class of 200 graduates, 80 are continuing their studies in graduate or professional school, 25 have entered military service, and 17 have gone directly into teaching.

A total of 35 have entered business and industry, most of them at starting salaries of $100 a week and up, with guaranteed increases following brief training periods.

TOP PAY IN SCIENCE

Even among teachers, the lowest paid of the professions, graduates are starting at $4,000-$5,000 annually. The highest paid teaching positions are in New Jersey and New York, and the highest paid among these are in the science fields.

In industry, sales positions are the most remunerative, with science-research a close second.

Many of the men who show the greatest professional promise have to postpone their careers because of military service. However, the sacrifice here is lessened by qualifying for places of leadership and responsibility as officers.

The class of 1960 deserves the best society can offer. It is one of the brightest classes in recent College history. The average for the class is 2.79, a very high C. This is also the highest average of all four classes in the College, and one of the four highest in the breakdown of fraternities, and independent senior men and women.

ONE IS IN AFRICA

Dickinson is represented in foreign lands by two 1960 graduates who have returned to their homes. Zacharia Abendong, the first African to receive a degree from Dickinson College, entered government service in the British Cameroons, West Africa. Ricardo Orlich, Costa Rica, has gone into private industry in his country.

The Class of 1960 also includes a dramatic farewell to the Abbas Alley family of Berwick, Pa. From 1949 to this year there was always a member of the family in Dickinson. Last June, the last of the five Alleys (four brothers and a sister) received his degree. (See story on page 12.)

The usual number of mergers (see Weddings) occurred soon after graduation. In 11 of these marriages or marriage plans, both the bride and bridegroom are Dickinsonians.

The statistics of the class are tabulated on this page. However, nothing describes the class better than the words written by a member of the class for the 1960 Microcosm in reviewing the four years:

"We arrive as freshmen with an image of Dickinson: a united, friendly college with high academic and social ideals. We are somewhat shaken by orientation—the blue and black hats, hourlies and roll calls.

"Sophomore year brings us into the midst of campus activity—fraternities, and we begin to prove our talents in activities and social events.

"Junior year we step up the ladder, aware of our upperclass stature. Leaders emerge and prove their abilities. We begin to take shape in molding the College.

"And now, as we prepare to step into the world, we hope our experiences have shaped us to shape the world for a better, more secure and peaceful existence."

Costs Force Tuition Up

Tuition for the second semester of the current term was increased $100 by action of the Board of Trustees last June. At the same time the Board voted to raise tuition another $100, beginning in September, 1961. The tuition for 1960-61 is $1,050 and for the 1961-62 term it will be $1,150.

The Board acted to offset an anticipated deficit of $150,000. Mounting costs, including faculty salaries, account for much of the need for additional income. The new tuition is still comparable with that of colleges equal in standing to Dickinson and falls considerably below the actual cost of educating a student. Faculty salaries exceeded three-fourths of a million dollars last year and constituted the largest item in the budget.

President Malcolm and the Board of Trustees expressed the earnest desire that no student be deprived of a Dickinson education because of his inability to meet the increased tuition. Therefore, President Malcolm in a letter to parents pointed out the availability of student loan funds and a number of scholarships and opportunities for employment.

Prof. Wing's 'Just Simply Great'

(Millions of subscribers of Newsweek magazine (June 27) read the article on Prof. Herbert Wing, Jr., who completed 45 years on the Dickinson faculty in June and retired. With the story was a photo of Prof. Wing captioned "Dickinson's Mr. 3 by 5." For Dickinsonians who missed the tribute, the article is reprinted below just as it appeared as the lead story in the education section of Newsweek.)

A PROFESSOR of flinty principle, Dr. Herbert Wing, Jr., 70, sports no national reputation; and he has published little in the way of scholarly treatises. But he has taught Latin, Greek, archeology, and history—and taught them superbly—to 80 per cent of the living alumni of Dickinson College, a small liberal-arts school in Carlisle, Pa. "He didn't win many cheers from the undergraduates," says an old pupil. "He made us work." After 45 years on the secluded Cumberland Valley campus, graying, rotund "Herbie" Wing retired last week, honored by hard-worked alumni and faculty alike.

Like many another retiring teacher across the nation (see box), Dr. Wing is an educator of the old school. "A teacher shouldn't be one of the boys," he says vigorously. Yet he spent hours advising individual students in his office on Denny Hall's third floor; he also, for example, tutored seniors in Greek, free of charge, to help them enter graduate school. "The academic diet has become broader and broader," he explains. "It's garnished with all sorts of frills and salads. We must keep pushing the student back to the main course, to the roast beef."

Steady Stream: As part of his meaty classroom fare, the Harvard-educated professor, who held Dickinson's Robert Coleman Chair of History for 23 years, insisted on weaving Greek and Roman authorities into contemporary political science. He also made youngsters take pinpoint notes, with heavy references to outside reading, on 3- by 5-inch cards. Thus his nickname: Mr. 3 by 5. And to make sure his lessons stuck, he sprayed classes with a steady stream of quizzes and hour tests.

"There has to be in each generation a process of informing men and women of the heritage of the past," Dr. Wing says in his flat New England twang. (Reared in New Bedford, Mass., he comes from a robust line of whaling captains.) "This can't be done with books only. You must inspire—and your inspiration must be factually rooted and firmly hooked to the mind of the class." Equally important, the professor says, is the "ethic" tightly twined in the liberal-arts life. "In debating, which I coach, I have always scorned tricks. You must argue from a position of absolute intellectual honesty. I repeat this again and again to the students."

In this sociological age, when many educators analytically declaim about the sad state of the current generation, Dr. Wing has held firm to a no-nonsense philosophy. "Young Americans exist," he points out. "They must be educated. Whether or not we're pleased with them is irrelevant." Such hard-headed dedication has earned him the vast admiration, and sometimes envy, of his colleagues. "He's tremendously strong, energetic, capable," said a Dickinson official. President Gilbert Malcolm added: "He is just simply a great teacher."

What of the future? A widower with one son at the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi, Dr. Wing will still live in his two-story brick house near the campus, and probably take on some advisory chores at the College. "Naturally, the prospect of being idle doesn't please me a bit," he said last week. "I'm an interested man, and when I feel like biting into something, well, I'll just bite." When he does, Dickinson College will undoubtedly feel the effect.

Sigma Chi Elect

Robert E. Young, '59, and Howell C. Mette, '48, have been re-elected secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the Harrisburg Alumni Chapter of Sigma Chi Fraternity. S. Carroll Miller, '12, was re-elected Sigma Chi Foundation president.

Club to Give Portrait

The Dickinson Club of Delaware is raising funds to have a portrait of John Dickinson painted for presentation to the new John Dickinson High School, in Wilmington. President Malcolm, sharing the program with the mayor of the city and governor of the state, spoke at the dedication of the new school Sept. 7 following introduction by the Rev. Howell Wilkins, '44 president of the club and pastor of Hillcrest Memorial Methodist Church, Wilmington.

The portrait is being painted by John D. Pusey, the College's artist-in-residence, from the Dickinson painting which hangs in Memorial Hall, West College, and which is a copy of the original painted in 1770 by Charles Willson Peale and owned by the Historical Society of Pennsylvania. The Memorial Hall copy was the gift years ago of the late Lemuel T. Appold, '82.

John Dickinson, who died in 1808, is buried in Wilmington. His mansion near that city is being restored and furnished with antiques once owned by the family. The College gave its highly-prized John Dickinson clock to the shrine a few years ago in support of the restoration movement, started by the Society of Colonial Dames of America.

He's Back At Work

Prof. Herbert Wing, Jr., who retired from the faculty in June, then attended the 50th reunion of his class at Harvard, followed by a few weeks' vacation at the family home near New Bedford, Mass., was back in harness by mid-August, pulling a heavy load as usual. He accepted appointment by President Malcolm as Assistant to the President and Lecturer in the Humanities for the current term. His many and varied duties include one he has performed at Dickinson for years, that of scheduling speakers for the two-a-week chapel and assembly programs. Another is that of directing the Adult Education Program, which presents a series of non-credit evening courses each fall and spring. Campus visitors can find Prof. Wing each morning in Room I in West College and each afternoon in the third-floor Denny Hall office he has occupied for the past 45 years.

Follows in Father's Paths

Raphael S. Hays, II, '56, is following in a family tradition in both tennis and business. His father, E. Gardner Hays, is president of the Frog, Switch and Manufacturing Co., Carlisle, and was successful Dickinson College tennis coach for 27 years. Raphael's mother is the former Jennette Burgyes, '31.

Raphael, or Louie to his friends, learned the net game from his father and played under him at Dickinson. He is also learning the manufacturing game from his father. Although Gardner Hays compiled fine records annually, he left it to his son to come up with the first undefeated season in the history of tennis at Dickinson. Raphael follows another of his father's paths—he coaches without pay.

The Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. Thomas are shown here with Prof. Charles C. Sellers (in light suit) in the College Library with part of the vast collection of autographed photos of famous people made by the Thomas' son before his death. The collection is a gift to the library.

Boys Lifetime Hobby Now His Memorial

(This article was prepared for the DICKINSON ALUMNUS, at the editor's request, by Beatrice Pennell Thomas, '39, wife of the Rev. Robert J. Thomas, '40. It deals with their late son, who was 1954 National Cerebral Palsy "Poster Boy," and of his famous collection of autographed photographs, now housed in the Dickinson Library.)

ROBERT and I are delighted that our College is now the permanent home of the lifetime hobby of our only son, Craig Robert Thomas. Craig died on June 2, 1957, at the age of 11 years.

Craig was a victim of cerebral palsy, but he crammed a lifetime of fun and satisfaction into his few years on this earth, chiefly through a hobby that brought him over 1,000 autographed pictures and personal letters from leading national and international figures of our time.

EXHIBITED AT DICKINSON

His collection of photographs was presented by us to Dickinson College last June during Commencement weekend and was exhibited then for the first time.

Craig's hobby was the source of a great deal of his happiness. It made it possible for him to have talked with President Eisenhower, Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther, Vice President Nixon, Sen. Joe McCarthy, Charleton Heston and many, many other celebrities.

As national cerebral palsy "Poster Boy," he was invited to the White House in 1954. In a ceremony at the Indian Village of the New York State Fair, Craig shared honors with Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan, and both received ceremonial Indian head-dresses and were adopted by the Onandaga Indian Tribe.

Craig was born on September 1, 1945, in San Francisco, Calif., but it wasn't until he should have been attempting to walk that it became apparent that he had a motor disability.

BISHOP MIDDLETON

BISHOP LORD

Font of Leadership

Dickinson Gives Another Bishop to the Church

THE steady contribution of Dickinson College to the leadership of the Methodist Church since the beginning of their close relationship 127 years ago has been underscored again by a number of recent events.

Among the events was the election of Rev. Dr. W. Vernon Middleton, '28, to the office of bishop by the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference at the meeting in Washington, D. C., in June, and his assignment to the Western Pennsylvania Area. He brings to five the number of Dickinsonians in the Methodist episcopacy.

BISHOP LORD TRANSFERRED

At the same Washington meeting, Bishop John Wesley Lord, '27, was transferred from the Boston Area, over which he presided for 12 years, to the Washington Area to succeed Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam who retired. Because of its location, the Washington Area is considered to be one of the most important and demanding posts in the Church. Bishop Oxnam, a Dickinson trustee and honorary alumnus, served it with distinction.

In August, Bishop Fred P. Corson, '17, bishop of the Philadelphia Area, became leader-designate of the 40 million Methodists in seventy countries with his election as president of the World Methodist Council at the meeting in Zurich. He will take office at a meeting of the World Council in Oslo next year. The Council fosters world-wide fellowship among Methodists and other Protestant denominations.

BISHOP LEDDEN RETIRES

Still another event recalling the role of the College in developing Methodist leadership was the retirement of Bishop W. Earl Ledden, '10, from active service as bishop in June. This month he became professor of Christian worship at Wesley Theological Seminary, Wash., D. C., A former president of the Methodist Council of Bishops, he served as bishop of the Syracuse Area for the past sixteen years. In recognition of his services to the Church, Methodist congregations in the area established the Bishop W. Earl Ledden Professorship at Syracuse University with a $300,000 endowment fund.

BISHOP MIDDLETON IN CARLISLE

Within three days after his election, Bishop Middleton was on the Dickinson campus presiding over the annual Central Pennsylvania Conference in session in Allison Church-Dickinson Chapel. He took the occasion to renew acquaintance with the many Dickinson alumni serving pastorates and other positions in the conference. His wife, the former Mariam Horst, '30, was with him.

Bishop Middleton is vice-chairman of the Division of Home Missions of the National Council of Churches. He has visited outpost missions in Alaska, Puerto Rico and Hawaii and has intimate knowledge of conditions among American Indians, migrant workers and other minority groups in the United States.

He was executive secretary of the Philadelphia Missionary and Church Extension Society of the Methodist Church from 1939 to 1944; executive secretary of the Section of Church Extension of the Division of National Missions from 1944 to 1954; executive secretary of the Division's Section of Home Missions, 1954-1956, and general secretary of the Division of National Missions of the Board of Missions, 1956 to 1960.

A native of Baltimore, he was ordained on trial by the Philadelphia Conference in 1928 and was admitted to full membership in 1930. He served several Pennsylvania pastorates, including Germantown, Canadensis and Narberth. He has an honorary Doctor of Divinity degree from Dickinson.

SHIRT-SLEEVE BISHOP

Bishop Oxnem in his years in Washington became known in throughout the nation and the world as one of Protestantism's most forceful leaders. Bishop Lord, his successor, is also known as a "hard-working, shirt-sleeve bishop," as one churchman put it, who expects Methodism to make things happen. President of the Methodist General Board of Temperance since 1956 and a member of the Interboard Commission on Christian Social Relations, he has often spoken out

Grads and Families Return To Campus for Study and Fun

"I'm Glad I Was Selected To Teach"

by PROFESSOR A. B. HORLACKER

The program was new to Dickinson and offered no precedents for either faculty or students. As teachers, we had each a suggested and later an agreed upon subject and a schedule of presentation. That is all. Mine was "The Aims of Great Literature." Unlike the regular class situation, I felt I could not assume any extensive preparation in background reading by the class; there was hardly time for that. As a result I chose to make my lectures rather basic, but retrospect.

The plan which I devised and carried out was to present at the first session some broad and fundamental conceptions of what great literature is—why men take the pains to create a memorable work of art and why, once created, it becomes an undiminishing

SEVENTEEN alumni and their families took part in a new educational venture at the College when they gathered on the campus June 5, following commencement exercises, for studies in three areas of knowledge: the humanities, social studies and physical sciences.

Families lived in Morgan Hall, dined in Drayer Hall, and attended classes and discussions under regular members of the college faculty. Children were enrolled in French studies and swimming.

This first Alumni College provided for the continuing education of alumni and their families. Classes were scheduled from morning through the evening, June 5-8, in the following subjects:

"Aims of Great Literature," by Professor A. B. Horlacher; "International Diplomacy and the UN," by Professor Stoyan Gavrilovic; and "Concepts of Outer Space," by Professor Henry L. Yeagley.

The principal texts were Liberal Education and the Democratic Ideal, a paperback, by A. Whitney Griswold; Space Primer—An Introduction to Aeronautics, and other readings.

The students attended all classes together, as well as discussions which considered the relationship of the three subject areas. Informal discussions with faculty members continued during meals. Students were awarded certificates of completion signed by President Malcolm.

The first Alumni College attracted Dickinsonians from a wide range of professional interests and classes. The oldest student was Rev. Mr. George S. Southwick, '16, who enrolled with his bride of less than one month. The youngest student was Jean Coslett Reynolds, '55.

The other students were:

Dr. George V. Neel, academic dean at Monmouth College, in New Jersey, and Dr. Helen McDonnell Neel, '28, professor of English there.

Dr. Irwin Saberski, '45, dentist, and Mrs. Saberski.

Leo Stern, director of the Redevelopment Authority of Allegheny County; Mrs. Stern; son Edward, a freshman at Dickinson this Fall; and daughter Barbara, 12.

Charles F. Saam, '43, a school psychologist; Jean Lentz Saam, '46; daughters Beverly 12, and Patricia, 10; and niece, Sandra A. Markey, 9.

The first Alumni College class is shown here after "graduation." Bottom row: Diane Dewis, children's French teacher; Sandra Markey, Patricia E. Saam, Barbara Stern and Beverly E. Saam. Second row: Jean Lentz Saam, '46; Jean Coslett Reynolds, '55; Dr. Helen McDonnell Neel, '28; Mrs. Irwin Saberski; Edith G. Hoover, '23, and Mrs. Leo Stern. Third row: George S. Southwick, '16; Dr. George S. Neel; Leo Stern, '36; Edward Stern, '64; Dr. Irwin Saberski, '45, and Charles F. Saam, '43. Fourth row: Prof. Henry L. Yeagley, sciences; Prof. A. B. Hurlacher, humanities; Prof. Stoyan Gravitovic, social studies; Prof. Albert Walker, director.

The Alumni College was established at the suggestion of President Malcolm and Whitfield J. Bell, Jr., '33, and was carried forward as a project of the Alumni Council. The committee included:

Dr. Carl C. Chambers, '29, who served as dean; Mary Snyder Hertzler, '42; Robert G. Crist, '47; Weston C. Overholt, Jr., '50; Raymond A. Wert, '32; C. Wendell Holmes, '21; Prof. Douglass S. Mead, '17, and Prof. Claude C. Bowman, '28.

Trickett Hall Enlarged

Trickett Hall, Dickinson School of Law, is undergoing a $100,000 renovation-expansion program designed to improve library and office facilities and correct fire hazards. An addition of a wing at the rear of the building is a major part of the project.

Woman Awarded Scholarship

The new Mary Dickinson Club Scholarship of $500 has been awarded to Mary Beth Heffner, a freshman, whose father, Samuel F. Heffner, '31, died in 1955 while serving as the first Democrat mayor of Coatesville, Pa. He was 47 years of age and left four children. Mary Beth is the oldest.

Mrs. Heffner went to work as a school nurse in Coatesville, and is studying for her teaching certificate at West Chester State Teachers College. All the Heffner children rank high in scholastic average. Mary Beth was second in a class of 347 and received several awards upon her graduation. In addition to the Mary Dickinson Scholarship, she has been awarded one of the College's eight full-tuition Presidential Scholarships.

EACH man owes to mankind the best contribution his abilities can make, in return for the benefits he inherits. His heritage is the wealth of culture amassed by society from the beginning of time. It is his moral duty to add as much to that wealth as he can, for the benefit of generations to come.

This is the story of one man's fulfillment of that duty—his family—and of the part Dickinson College played in developing it.

When he was 10 years old, Abbas Alley came to the United States from El Mughtar, Lebanon, where he was born in 1896. With his father and brother, he settled in Berwick, Pa., and the trio of new Americans built a grocery and confectionery business, which Abbas continued to operate after the deaths of his father and brother.

MARRIED IN 1929

In 1929, he returned to Lebanon for a visit, and there met and married Malika Kasem. Their six children, all Dickinsonians now, are their contribution to society. The achievements of these six reflect the dedication of the parents to their future.

A visit to his home reveals Abbas Alley's deep respect for learning. Although his formal education was slight, the huge library he collected through the years attests to the breadth and depth of his self-education. Noticeable among his books are his special interests—history, particularly American history; economics, and biographies of world leaders. His vision, his love of learning, and the guidance and understanding he gave his children provided the atmosphere for success.

VISITS CAMPUS

Mr. Alley's first contact with Dickinson came in 1949 when he visited the College with his first son, Ali, for a pre-admission interview, on the recommendation of an alumnus, Rev. Melvin L. Whitmire, '31. Mr. Alley was so profoundly impressed with the campus and with Dickinson's reputation that in later years he often expressed a desire to study at the College himself after retirement from business. Doubtless he would have, but for his death early this year.

In a place of honor in the family living room are six earthen mugs—five marked Alpha Chi Rho, and one Zeta Tau Alpha. The class years inscribed on them show that for twelve years, from 1949 to 1960, there was a member of the family on the Dickinson campus.

ALI IS FIRST

First to matriculate was Ali, who at college age was undecided on a career. His father's astute guidance channeled him into the profession he finally selected—medicine, and he entered Dickinson in 1949. He was graduated in 1953 with a major in chemistry and biology. His performance set the pace for his brothers and sister. All were outstanding students and good campus citizens in a wide range of extra-curricular activities.

Ali was a member of the band throughout his stay at Dickinson, as well as Mohler Scientific Club and Alpha Chi Rho. Here again, he set the pace for his brothers, all of whom were Alpha Chi Rho members.

ENTERS MEDICINE

After graduation, Ali continued working toward his degree in medicine at Hahnemann Medical College. He completed this work in 1956 and interned at the Medical College of Virginia, in Richmond. From 1957 to 1959 he served as a lieutenant in the Navy Medical Corps with destroyer divisions of the Sixth Fleet in the Atlantic, Caribbean, Mediterranean, and Quonset Point.

Ali is married to the former Ramona Helen Williams, of Kingsport, Tenn. His wife studied at East Tennessee State College, but their 13-month-old son, Abbas Ali, will carry the Alley name back to the Dickinson campus in 1977. Ali is now practicing medicine in his hometown, Berwick, and expects to continue study toward a specialty in the future.

SECOND SON

The second son, Amin Alley joined his brother at Dickinson in 1950. An economics and political science major, he too distinguished himself scholastically, and was intensely interested in other college activities. He was president of the Debate Council and debate coach while in the Law School. He was president of the International Relations Club and the Pennsylvania Association of International Relations Clubs.

Upon graduation in 1954, Amin began studying at Dickinson Law School, but his work here was interrupted by two years in the Army. During 20 months in Toul, France, he served with the U. S. Army Legal department. Returning to the Law School, he finished in 1959. He is now preparing for bar examinations and plans to enter general law practice in Berwick.

THIRD SON

In 1951 Samie A. Alley became the third member of the clan to enter Dickinson. Summer courses and outstanding work qualified him for entrance to Temple Dental School in 1953, after only two years of preparation. He gained his degree in dentistry at the age of 22, graduating near the top of his class. He has since served a year of internship in

Behind the Byline

Al Stimeling is assistant advertising manager of the Wise Potato Chip Co., Berwick, Pa., where he is associated with Dickinsonians Percy C. Wilson, '35, advertising manager, and Robert J. Wise, '53. He is a native Berwickian, and knew the Alley family, particularly the father, "for as long as I remember." He recalls that, as a youngster, he spent countless pennies for candy at his confectionary store.

oral surgery at Episcopal hospital, Washington, D. C., and studied a year in the same field at the Cameron School of Oral Surgery, University of Pennsylvania.

Samie is now at work toward a degree in medicine which he expects to receive in 1964. He has already completed his first year of study at Hahnemann Medical School.

FOURTH SON

The fourth son, Richard A. Alley, entered Dickinson in 1953, and was graduated in 1956 with a major in biology and chemistry. Like his brothers, he was a member of Alpha Chi Rho, as well as Mohler Scientific Clubs, Debate Council, and the International Relations and Young Republicans Clubs.

He was graduated from Jefferson Medical College in 1960 and is now interning at Akron, Ohio, City hospital.

FIFTH DICKINSONIAN

Elaine E. Alley was the fifth Dickinsonian in the family and the only daughter. She majored in political science and sociology, and was graduated in 1959. Elaine continued the family tradition of academic achievement, and held offices in the Debate Council, the International Relations Club and its Pennsylvania Association, the Student National Education Association, and in Zeta Tau Alpha,

“to Grow in Numbers is not Enough”

An Open Letter

The Alumni Association, like the College, continues to grow. There are more people in the alumni family than ever before. To grow in number, however, is not enough. The Alumni Association must continue to foster ever increasing interest, service and support among its members. All of us can contribute something to the good of the College. Contributions are vital whether they be in the form of service on the Alumni Council, participation in alumni clubs, financial support, or sincere interest in the College and awareness of the problems and challenges to be faced in the years ahead.

The purpose of the Alumni Association is “to keep alive and stimulate the interest of the alumni in their Alma Mater and to secure their intelligent support of measures beneficial to the College.”

Let me point out several spheres of alumni activity where we are alive but not sufficiently stimulated.

1. Life members of the Alumni Association represent about 27% of the total number of living alumni. According to the May 1960 issue of DICKINSON ALUMNUS only one person of the Class of 1959 is a “Lifer.”

2. Alumni giving represents about 30% of the money raised for the Annual Giving Fund. Only 25% of our alumni give something. Compare this with Ursinus, 44.3%, and Swarthmore, 49.8%.

3. Alumni clubs are weak in some areas and need new and imaginative programming and leadership. Other clubs, springing up for the first time, need encouragement and active support.

The officers of your association are dedicated to the task of brining increased strength and vitality to all fields of alumni endeavor. We welcome and need your support and your interest. The three points mentioned above are but a few hints of the challenges ahead and should give many alumni a clear indication where they are most needed.

WESTON C. OVERHOLT, JR., '50
Association President

“Cook-Out” in Cleveland

The first meeting of the reactivated Dickinson Club of Northern Ohio was a “cook-out,” held at the home of the president, George G. Landis, '20, Sunday afternoon, June 26, in Cleveland.

Approximately thirty-five persons were present, including several who traveled thirty miles to attend the meeting. Honored guests were President Malcolm and

Dr. George Shuman, Jr. President Malcolm gave a commencement report and talked about the future plans for Dickinson. Dr. Shuman reported on the development program. Colored slides were shown of the campus and commencement events.

Dr. Clayton C. Perry, '16, is vice president of the club and James K. Abbott, '50, is the secretary-treasurer.

Alumni Club Dates

Oct. 13—Harrisburg and Carlisle, West Shore Country Club.

Oct. 27.—Connecticut, Howard Johnson restaurant, 831 Farmington Ave., W. Hartford.

New Club in Connecticut

The Dickinson Club of Connecticut, a new club, will hold its first meeting on Thursday, Oct. 27, at 7 p.m., at the Howard Johnson restaurant, 831 Farmington Ave., West Hartford, Conn. All Dickinsonians living in the Hartford area, parents of Dickinson students, and friends of the College, are cordially invited to the meeting.

President Malcolm and George Shuman, Jr., will be among those from the College.

Members of the planning committee are: Howard J. Maxwell, '48, chairman; Dr. Henry Blank, '41; Mr. and Mrs. Guiles Glower, Jr. '39 (Alice M. Ziegler, '41); DeLancey S. Pelgrift, '10; Robert Cohen, '57; Doug Rehor, '48; and Mrs. J. H. Findlay (Ruth F. Ferguson, '33).

Homecoming Nov. 4-5

Homecoming dates this year are Friday and Saturday, November 4 and 5. The eighteen-member Alumni Council will hold its fall meeting and dinner Friday night. Presidents of area Dickinson clubs are entitled and urged to attend meetings of the Council and should prepare now to be present Friday night or arrange to send a representative. Weston C. Overholt, Jr., '50, who was elected president of the General Alumni Association in June, will preside. Saturday's attractions will include a luncheon at noon for all campus visitors and the football game with Wilkes College. Alumni planning to return for the weekend would do well to make early reservation at a hotel or tourist home.

Three past presidents of the Alumni Association extend congratulations to Weston Overholt, '50, new president of the Association, at the 1960 commencement meeting. L. to r., Paul L. Hutchison, '18, and C. Wendell Holmes, '21, now trustees of the College; Charles J. Irwin, '27, and Overholt.

His Monument a College

Monmouth College, in West Long Branch, N. J., stands as a monument to William M. Smith, '12, who helped found it in 1933 and served as president of the board of trustees for 25 years, until he declined reelection last year. Last June, Monmouth conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters upon Dr. Smith, who has seen the college grow from a public junior college with 300 students to a private, self-supporting and accredited four-year institution serving 2,000 students.

WILLIAM H. SMITH

The degree citation noted that Dr. Smith's name is now inseparably linked with Monmouth's origin and continuous growth. He was saluted for "accomplishments in the fields of education, public service and life itself.

"As superintendent of Monmouth County schools for 14 years and of Long Branch school for 15 years, and as president of the board of trustees of Monmouth College for 25 years, you have invested the rich resources of your mind and professional experience in your fellow men and in the generations of the future . . .

"The record of your public service—as president of the New Jersey Department of Superintendents, as president of the New Jersey Schoolmasters' Club, as original member of the Monmouth County Planning Board, as President of the Long Branch Rotary Club and later District Governor of Rotary; as a founder and director of the Stability and Loan Association of Freehold; as New Jersey leader of the nation-wide Cooperative Project in Educational Administration—this record testifies to the qualities of vision, leadership and social responsibility so uncommon in human beings generally, so conspicuous in your own achievements."

Rally at Ocean-Side

The sixth annual meeting of the Del-Mar-Va Club was held August 5, at Ocean City, Md., the vacation spot for President Gilbert Malcolm and many Dickinsonians. A total of 40 persons were present at the meeting, which was preceded by an Eastern Shore dinner.

Marvin H. Tawes, '26, president, convened the meeting of what he dubbed "Red's own club," explaining that it was organized by President Malcolm and the first club he attended as President of the College. The club traditionally meets on the first Friday of August.

Guests from the College included President Malcolm, Dr. George Shuman, Jr., and Roger H. Steck, a classmate of the club president. The program included showing of colored slides of the campus and commencement events.

Among those present from some distance were: C. Wendell Holmes, '27, past president of the General Alumni Association and College Trustee; Homer C. Respass, '17, vice president of the Alumni Association; Mr. Howell O. Wilkins, '44, president of the Dickinson Club of Wilmington, Del.; Professor C. Law McCabe, '43, Pittsburgh; Robert H. Maxwell, '15, Camp Hill, Pa., and Carlyle R. Earp, '14, Baltimore.

Also present were A. Wellington Tawes, '12. He and Marvin Tawes are brothers of J. Millard Tawes, Governor of Maryland and College trustee.

Dickinsonians Honored at American University

FOUR of the five persons awarded honorary degrees by American University, Wash., D. C., last June were Dickinsonians, a record percentage of some sort. Honored were Edward G. Latch, '21, Doctor of Humane Letters; Lynn H. Corson, '29, and Frank W. Ake, '31, Doctor of Divinity; Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, Dickinson trustee and honor-ever, would speak with sufficient eloquence to communicate to you the warmth of our gratitude for all that you contribute to life in this of the nation's capital."

Dr. Carson's citation read: "This year marks your completion of ten successful years as minister of the large and beautiful Haddonfield, N. J., Methodist Church

ary alumnus, and Chief Justice Earl G. Warren.

The citation for Dr. Latch, pastor of the National Methodist Church, Wash., D. C., Dickinson trustee and member of the World Methodist Council, read in part: "We admire and respect the outstanding leadership you are providing for one of the great Protestant churches of the city. One could utter many flattering words about your genius for administration, your total devotion to your people, your church, your community. None, how-where your friends and neighbors paid you an appropriate tribute this spring. Your active mind and many interests have led you into active relationships with boards and commissions of your Church, locally and nationally. You serve on the board of trustees of three educational institutions. In 1958, you were a guest minister in Dublin, Ireland, and in 1959, you were in the Church of Scotland in Glasgow."

Eight-game Football Season Opens October 1 with W. & L.

DICKINSON football candidates began practice September 1 for the schedule of eight games that opens October 1 on Biddle Field against Washington and Lee. Don Seibert, head coach for the fourth year, and Wilbur Gobrecht, '52, his new assistant, are working with a squad of 40 players, including 19 lettermen.

Prospects for improvement over last season's record appear to be good but even so, coaches and players have their work cut out for them. The lettermen and seven other players with varsity experience provide a strong team nucleus, but heavy reliance must be placed again on freshmen. Thirteen freshmen received invitations to pre-season practice. The roster also lists seven seniors, nine juniors and ten sophomores.

THREE POSITIONS STRONG

Greatest team strength will probably be at end, center and fullback, there being at least two unusually fine players for each of these positions. Fortifying these sports are Barney Field and Durbin Wagner, centers; Roger Smith and Sam Gowdy, ends, and Jan Skladany and Bob McNutt, fullbacks. All had good years last season, when Field and Skladany were voted the outstanding lineman and backfield player.

On hand again are two of last year's three fresh quarterbacks. They are Reno DiOrio and Don Brominski. Bob Harlowe and John Quirk, track team sprinters, will contribute speed to the T attack. Ken Campbell is another fine halfback with experience. The power will come from Skladany and McNutt.

This year's team will likely have a pair of brothers at the tackles in Mike and Dave Morrissey. Mike is a 225-pound senior. Dave is a junior and weighs 210. Both won letters last season. They are the only tackles with experience. The dependence upon them for consistently good performance is great.

PLAYER LOSSES HURT

The team will miss Bob Worthington, a June graduate, who was Dickinson's offensive leader the past two seasons. Toby Craig, a quarterback, who saw much service last year; Millard Shoff, an aggressive, dependable guard, and Mike Green and Bob Lewis failed to return to College this fall. Their loss was a blow to prospects.

Big home games after the opener with Washington and Lee will be the Parents Day contest October 8 with Haverford and the Homecoming game November 5 with Wilkes. The only newcomer to the schedule is Susquehanna, which replaces Ursinus.

He Lists Some Ifs

By PROF. EAVENSON
Athletic Director

There are, no doubt, many questions on the mind of the alumnus as to football at Dickinson this season—questions such as how does the team shape us?, how many games will we win?, what about morale?

The prospects are just average. There are a few good players, perhaps some outstanding ones, and there are many more with quite limited potential.

The 1960 season certainly has a lot of "ifs" as the term opens. I think it is safe to say that if the attitude of the squad remains high, if the boys put forth their best efforts under all circumstances, if we can get them out to practice every day at a reasonable hour, and if we can get the necessary cooperation of the faculty and administration, the record of 1960 will be considerably better than that of 1959.

With the possible exception of wrestling, this will be a rebuilding year at Dickinson. It will be interesting to see if the cross-country team can turn in a third highly successful season in a row. How much longer can the swimmers maintain the pace of the past four years in which they ran up 35 successive team victories? Can the basketball team improve, and what about the tennis team which was undefeated last spring and lost only one match in 1959? Track, baseball and lacrosse prospects are all uncertain. These questions are not only on my mind; they are also on the minds of coaches, players and students.

The overall athletic record last year was one we can all have great pride in. As to this year, all I can be sure of is that it will be a most interesting one in its unfolding.

While Millions Watched

An estimated 15 million television viewers of the Republican convention saw two Dickinsonians play prominent roles in the convention program. Samuel H. Witwer, '30, candidate for the U.S. Senate from Illinois, introduced the Lincoln readings on Monday night, later escorted President Eisenhower to the convention hall. Sam also was prominent from his delegate position which was directly in front of Governor Nelson Rockefeller.

The windup of the convention on Thursday evening included the benediction by Rev. Dr. Edward D. Latch, '21, pastor of Metropolitan Avenue Memorial Church, Washington, D. C. Dr. Latch was introduced as the minister of Dick Nixon's church in Washington and the family pastor.

Among others at the Republican convention were Winfield C. Cook, '32; George Maroodian, '51, and J. Paul Slaybaugh, '21, alternate delegate from Delaware.

Big Year for '27

Three members of the Class of 1927 were signally honored the past summer. Bishop John Wesley Lord was assigned resident bishop of the important Washington Area of the Methodist Church. Rev. Dr. W. Vernon Middleton was elected bishop of the Methodist Church and assigned to the new Western Pennsylvania Area, in which Dickinson is situated. Dr. James M. Read, deputy UN high commissioner for refugees for the past 10 years, with headquarters in Geneva, was named president of Wilmington College, in Ohio. Dr. Read's election, effective October 1, brought to six the number of Dickinsonians currently serving as presidents of American colleges.

2500 Applied for New Frosh Class of 330

By BENJAMIN D. JAMES, Dean of Admissions

PRESIDENT MALCOLM and I were talking recently about the admission procedures of the 1930's and earlier years. It was my understanding, I told him, that registration then was completed only about a day or two before the opening of college. President Malcolm assured me that this was the usual procedure in those days and, further, that the College rarely had registrations for more than two or three students before September.

This was true in college admissions until after World War II. Then there was an upsurge of veterans' applications until about 1950. Because of the Korean conflict, 1951 and 1952 were lean years for college admission. However, Dickinson was able to do well during these years because of the continuing active cooperation and contacts with secondary schools. Following this period there was a gradual upsurge in admissions until today we have many, many more applications than we have spaces for students. The College opens this fall with 1,100 students, including about 330 freshmen.

The present indication is that this surge will increase. During the month of June, 1960, the Admissions staff forwarded more than 2,100 applications for prospective students interested in entering the College as freshmen in September, 1961. This would indicate, in all probability, that we may process as many as 3,500 applications for an entering class of 300 for the fall of 1961.

In the past year, in completing registration for 330 freshman students for the fall of 1960, the Admissions staff processed about 43,000 pieces of mail, visited more than 200 secondary schools, reviewed about 4,300 inquiries, and completely evaluated more than 2,500 applications. The Admissions staff also conducted about 2,000 interviews with prospective students in the course of the year. (President Malcolm, the Deans of Men and Women and others assisted.)

Not too many years ago, the Admissions staff consisted of the Dean of Admissions and one secretary. Today the staff consists of the Dean of Admissions, Assistant Dean of Admissions and four secretaries, and in addition to this staff there is almost continuous need for supplemental services from other clerical sources in the College, especially from Kay Bankert and her helpers and Polly Lay and her secretarial staff. In addition to this, we have help in preparing printed promotional material.

There are several factors that would appear important for alumni and friends of the College to know concerning our Admissions program.

1) Each year we plan to register about 200 freshman men and about 100 freshman women. It is difficult to make any commitment to transfer students because of our dormitory situation. This past June we registered 25 of our own upperclass girls and about 50 upperclass boys without room assignments. We hope by this fall to have the women housed in dormitories but some of the young men will have to find housing in town.

2) This year there were more than 1,000 girls applying for 90 places.

3) It becomes necessary to place some reasonable limitation on the number of men and women we can accept from any one school. This is not an arbitrarily determined figure and it is affected by the quality of the applications presented from

MEET THE CLASS OF 1964

The entering Freshman class, some 330 eager young men and women, cannot be described adequately in a few sentences, but I can list some facts and figures that suggest the background and qualifications of the class. Seventy-eight have Dickinson relatives. Twenty-five of the 78 have one alumnus parent and in six cases both parents are Dickinsonians. Although most of the Freshmen come from Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, many travel much greater distances to be at Dickinson. Excluding the foreign students, the Freshman living farthest from Carlisle hails from Alameda, Calif. Living nearest to the campus is the student from West Louthier Street, right across from Old West. Sixty-three per cent show a religious preference for the Methodist, Presbyterian, Episcopalian and Lutheran Churches, in that order. Academically, the class had a fine record in school. Fifty-five per cent were in the top fifth of their senior class, 33% were in the first tenth. On the Scholastic Aptitude Tests the median scores achieved were 580 verbal and 588 mathematical. Thirty-five per cent on the verbal and 40% on the mathematical scored 600. These are impressive statistics. The one unfortunate fact is that we had to refuse admission to many well-qualified students we would have preferred to accept.

—PROF. BENJAMIN JAMES

a single school. Whatever the quality, however, it is not feasible, for instance, to offer admission to 20 men or 20 women from one high school.

4) Balance must be maintained also among the students accepted for various programs of study and their qualifications considered in the light of their objectives.

5) Applicants needing scholarship aid must be evaluated in terms of the amount of aid needed and our ability, within budget limitations, to meet it.

6) It seems difficult for many people to accept the idea that a student may be qualified for admission and yet rejected. In letters to such applicants we make it clear that only the competitive situation, not lack of qualifications, is responsible for this action. If we were to accept all well-qualified candidates our class would be at least twice the size we can accommodate.

I hope that if any of you have knowledge of an applicant for admission to the College you will feel free to pass it on to us. With that information we can tell you what his chances for admission are. I hope, too, that if our answer is not as favorable as you would have hoped, you will understand that we are doing our best to call the shots as we see them. Our errors of judgment—and there will inevitably be some—will be honest ones. In many cases, however, we shall have information on the applicant, or be confronted with problems concerning his admission which are known only to the Admission Office—and which often cannot be revealed.

This year, in my absence on a much appreciated "Refresher Leave," Professor Robert Andrews will be the acting Director of Admissions and Joseph Carver, '59, will be the Assistant Director of Admissions. It is the plan of the Admissions Committee to accept a few "early acceptance" candidates in December. However, the great majority of the prospective students will be informed of the status of their candidacy about March 15, 1961.

With your help and understanding we hope that the class admitted in 1961 will be an outstanding class and that it will represent also the most careful selections we can make, taking into consideration the character and personal qualifications of the candidate.

AROUND THE CAMPUS

Dr. Friedrich Sandels, professor emeritus of German, who retired in June, 1959, returned to active status this fall to teach on a parttime basis.

President Malcolm delivered the address at the banquet closing the 121st general convention of Beta Theta Pi, August 30-September 2, at Mackinac Island, Mich. He joined in honoring Sherwood M. Bonney, '31, who stepped down after three years as Beta national president.

Former Dean Fred Ness, '33, refreshed by a two-week vacation in England, left in August for his new position at Long Island University as vice president and provost of the Brooklyn Center and dean of the Graduate School. He was a Dickinson eight years. His new address is 10 Pineapple St., Brooklyn 1, N. Y.

Sellers House, named for Montgomery Porter Sellers, '93, a member of the faculty for nearly 50 years, who died in 1942, is the new name of the house which Dean Ness and his family occupied. To ease the pressure of a full enrollment, the attractive brick house adjoining the gymnasium was converted over the summer into a residence for 15 coeds. It was Prof. Sellers' home at one time.

One of the first jobs tackled by Prof. Roger E. Nelson after he was appointed acting dean of the College in July was that of arranging the annual two-day faculty seminar held at Camp Shand on the eve of the fall term. Mathematician and U.S. Naval Academy graduate, he came to the faculty in 1949 on retiring from the Navy with real admiral rank after a brilliant career.

Prof. Charles Flint Kellogg, acting chairman of the English department this term, received the honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree at the centennial commencement of Bard College in June. An active Bard alumnus, he was cited for service to the college and alumni, for his contributions to understanding between races, for carrying into his teaching the ideals of social responsibility. His history of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is soon to be published.

Dr. George Shuman, Jr., financial vice-president, spoke on the problems of college dining room operations at a meeting of the National Federation of College and Business Officers Associations, in July at French Lick.

Nine faculty members received promotions in June. To associate professor, Donald W. Flaherty, political science; Carl E. Kerr, mathematics; David B. Eavenson, physical education. To assistant professor, Ernest Kuhinka, sociology; Alfred N. Hartshorn, English; Philip B. Secor, political science; William W. Virgin, geology. To instructor, Daisy W. Strayer, physical education. Arthur C. Flandreau, '51, was promoted to assistant librarian.

* * *

Tenure was granted to John F. Brougher, educational; M. Benton Naff, chemistry; David B. Eavenson, physical education. Prof. Eavenson is the first director of athletics in recent College history to receive tenure.

New language laboratory equipment, purchased with funds given by Irene duPont, Wilmington, Del., has been set up temporarily in Althouse Science Hall pending the opening of the projected Language Center.

John B. Carver, '59, has been appointed assistant to the dean of admissions. He was in the insurance business in Pittsburgh. With Dean of Admissions James on a year's leave this term, Robert Andrews, English instructor, is the acting dean.

Twenty students are taking instruction in Russian at the College this term from visiting Professor J. William Frey, '37, who comes to the campus twice a week from Franklin and Marshall, where he is head of the department of German and Russian. Dickinson has restored Russian to the curriculum after a lapse of seven years.

* * *

With "Search for the Significant" as theme, Religion-in-Life Week will be observed November 13-17. One of the several visiting leaders selected by the student committee is Rev. Daniel C. Whitsett, member of the "Committee of 100" set up by the Methodist Commission on Education to visit college campuses during the present quadrennium.

* * *

Dr. Daniel J. McDonald, geneticist, and his wife, Dr. Barbara B. McDonald, cytologist, who teach in the department of biology, presented papers on their separate research projects at the meeting of the American Institute of Biological Science this summer.

New Faculty Appointments

The College is participating this year for the second time in the John Hay Whitney Foundation's Visiting Professors Program, which makes available to independent, liberal arts colleges the talents of distinguished professors who have formally retired. At Dickinson for the term under this program is Dr. Thomas Means, teacher of Greek and Latin at Bowdoin College and one-time Rhodes Scholar. Holder of earned degrees from Yale and Harvard, he has published several books and produced classical plays.

Another visiting professor is William H. Webb, teacher of chemistry at Pennsylvania Military College for 22 years until retiring in 1958. Educated at N. Y. U., Harvard and Temple, he is co-author of the American Chemical Society standardized tests for general college chemistry. He will serve for Prof. Horace Rogers who is on leave.

Among other new faculty appointments are:

Donald E. Grodon, assistant professor of art. A practicing artist, he has his A.B., A.M., and Ph.D. degrees from Harvard. He has also studied at the Art Students League, New York, and at the University of Hamburg.

Frank R. Hartman and Stephen B. Coslett, assistant professors of psychology. Dr. Hartman is a graduate of Pennsylvania State University where he also earned his M.S. and Ph.D. degrees and where he was a research associate the past three years. Dr. Coslett, University of Pittsburgh graduate, has advanced degrees from University of Denver and has just completed a year as intern at Western Psychiatric Institute and Clinic, Pittsburgh.

Bruce R. Andrews, associate professor of political science. He taught at Syracuse University where he is a candidate for his Ph.D. and where he graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors in 1950.

Micheline Marie Ricois, of Paris, instructor in French. She was a student at the Sorbonne for six years and has taught English and American literature in France and in England.

Nancy J. Loughridge, assistant reference librarian with rank of instructor. Graduate of Antioch College with a master's in library science from University of Michigan, she has served on the library staffs of Michigan and University of California at Los Angeles.

Harold R. Gillespie, instructor in English. Candidate for the Ph.D. at Indiana University where he was a teaching assistant the past year, he is a graduate of University of Texas.

Judith F. Kneen, instructor in mathematics. She graduated magna cum laude from Bryn Mawr in 1958 and earned a master's degree at Radcliffe College last February.

Mrs. Susanne Myers Broughton, instructor in physics. She graduated cum laude from Bryn Mawr where she was a classmate of Miss Kneen. Brandeis University awarded her a master's last June.

Mrs. Kathleen W. Barber, instructor in physical education. A graduate of Syracuse University, she has also studied at University of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State University and has had several years of teaching experience in secondary schools.

3 on Leave, 3 Return

The Board of Trustees has awarded Refresher-Year leaves for the 1960-61 term with full pay to Professors Benjamin D. James, Horace E. Rogers and William R. Bowden. Professors Charles D. Kepner, Elmer C. Herber and John C. Pflaum have just completed similar leaves.

Prof. James, chairman of the department of psychology and education and dean of admissions, will conduct a study of graduate programs in about 100 private liberal arts colleges and will prepare his findings for publication by the Association of American Colleges. He has a grant from the association to cover expenses of travel and clerical help.

Prof. Rogers, head of the chemistry department, will spend the year at the University of Arizona where he will work closely with Dr. Henry Freiser, of the university, in instrumental analysis methods and new techniques for analysis of radioisotopes. He will not teach, but will study and do research.

Prof. Bowden of the English department plans to improve his scholarship on the subject of Shakespeare, write several articles and investigate the possibility of preparing a short text on the sentence diagram.

In the course of a world trip Prof. Kepner, a sociologist, spent five months at Nanyang University, Singapore, as a visiting professor, toured the troubled areas of Africa to talk to leaders of emerging nations. He spent a half hour in Leopoldville with Premier Patrice Lumumba.

Prof. Herber, head of the biology department, spent most of his leave in Central America doing research in tropical diseases under a fellowship granted by the National Institutes of Health.

Prof. Pflaum, historian, also traveled around the world, visited a number of Dickinsonians in New Zealand and Australia, spent some time in Russia and Africa and in American research in Virginia and the Southwest.

Since the introduction of the program in 1958, six members of the faculty have completed refresher-year leaves. The program is designed to enhance the quality of their teaching by providing a year of further study or research for faculty members with 10 or more years of service at Dickinson.

Look Him Up After Game

James W. McGuckin, '42, one of the nation's leading football officials, has received his schedule for 1960 from the Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Football Officials. The schedule is published here for his Dickinson friends who will be attending the games and would like to say hello:

Sept. 24, Army-Boston College at West Point; Oct. 1, Delaware-Amherst at Newark, Del.; Oct. 8, Holy Cross-Syracuse at Worcester, Mass.; Oct. 15, Pennsylvania-Brown at Franklin Field, Philadelphia; Oct. 22, Illinois-Penn State at Champaign, Ill.; Oct. 29, Lafayette-Gettysburg at Easton, Pa.; Nov. 5, Villanova-Boston College at Villanova; Nov. 12, Navy-Virginia at Annapolis; Nov. 19, Princeton-Dartmouth at Princeton, N. J.

normal home environment. Syracuse was mentioned as one of the few cities where this type of help could be had. Robert was assigned to the First Methodist Church of that city so that Craig could attend the Syracuse Cerebral Palsy Clinic.

Here, with the aid of the best treatment available and his own courageous heart, Craig learned to walk with full length braces, overcame his speech problem, and mastered a vocabulary which was far advanced for his age.

He had finished the 6th grade of school when, on June 2, 1957, on the 184th annual commencement of Dickinson College, his heart finally gave out.

Yet, in 11 years, Craig met, talked with, and was pen pal to more distinguished figures than most of us get to see in a lifetime. He was first honorary cadet of the Civil Air Patrol, and upon the recommendation of Secretary of Air Force Thomas Finletter, he was flown to New York City to receive his "wings" for courage and determination.

COMMANDED A FLEET

In 1954 he was made Commander of the Fleet for a day. He was piped aboard the USS Macon and received the admiral's cap from Admiral Arleigh Burke. He was an honorary member of the U.S. Secret Service, the 108th Infantry of the New York National Guard, and the Nevada State Patrol. In spite of his handicap, Craig's life was a full and happy one.

Of the collection, Prof. Charles Sellers, librarian of Dickinson College, was kind enough to say it "is the best and most complete I have ever seen."

It is also remarkable that each person, unaware of the other photographs in the collection, was able to select a unique pose or type of picture. Some are costumed, others are caricatures by famous cartoonists, and still others are penciled sketches and drawings.

We know that the photographs will be cared for at our College, where we hoped that Craig would some day study, much better than we would have been able to at home. We hope that Dickinsonians will ask to see the pictures when they are on the campus.

Dickinson Gives

and acted against the social evils affecting the nation and the world.

Born in Paterson, N. J., in 1902, he was a factory worker, shoe salesman, Merchant Marine sailor and teacher before he turned to the ministry on leaving Dickinson. He served pastorates in New Jersey and in 1948 was elected, at the age of 45, one of America's youngest bishops and assigned to the Boston Area.

Among his other duties in the Methodist Church, he serves as member of the Board of Education, the Commission on Promotion and Cultivation, the Interboard Commission on the Local Church, and the Board of Lay Activities of the North-eastern Jurisdiction.

Keeping Step

Frederic W. Ness, former Dickinson College dean, and Craig R. Thompson, formerly with Lawrence College, Wisconsin, were Dickinson classmates (1933) and majored in the same subject—English. Last year, almost simultaneously, both were installed in newly-established chairs in the humanities at their respective colleges. Both resigned from the faculties of their respective institutions at approximately the same time and this month finds both starting new assignments, Dr. Ness as a vice-president and provost of Long Island University, and Dr. Thompson as librarian and professor of English and history at Haverford College.

"I'm Glad I Was Selected To Teach"

resource in the intellectual and spiritual life of man. These propositions established, I sought to illustrate them objectively and in some detail by the examination of the Divine Comedy and Goethe's Faust in the two subsequent lectures.

How successful my plan was in conception and execution only the students can say, but I can record my appreciation of the courtesy they afforded me and for the interest shown—especially as this was revealed by questions and discussion both in the course of the lectures and at table when teachers and students took their meals together. And this, incidentally, appeared to be one of the most enriching aspects of the program for teachers and students alike—the provision that all members of the Alumni College would share a common meal and talk over the more significant things that were said by teachers and students in "the classroom."

In retrospect, I was glad I was selected as one of the teachers for our first Alumni College not only because I "profess" literature and love to talk about it, but for the stimulating discussions which followed with students and colleagues. The atmosphere was one of relaxed seriousness and friendliness, and if we could not expect extensive preparation on the part of the students, rare is the teacher who has a more interested and appreciative class.

The Director has asked me to suggest some books for further reading, and I have complied with his request in the list that follows. Two students requested a copy of my syllabus for the World Literature course, and I was glad to oblige. If others desire copies, I shall do the same.

SUGGESTED FURTHER READING

From Homer to Joyce: A Study Guide to Thirty-Six Great Books. By J. S. Weber, J. A. Weir, Arthur Waldhorn and Arthur Leiger. Published by Holt-Dryden Co. (paper approximately $1.50). Three merits of this book are: its extensive coverage, its well-chosen bibliographies, and the penetrating questions which follow each book discussed.

Literary Masterpiece of the Western World. Edited by Francis Horn. Published by the Johns Hopkins Press (approximately $3.50). This is a cloth covered book containing essays on thirteen of the great masters of world literature by outstanding scholars and specialists in their respective fields.

Three Philosophic Poets. By George Santayana. Published by Doubleday Anchor No. 17 (paper approximately $1.00). This little book contains three masterly essays; one each on Lucretius' The Nature of Things, Dante's Divine Comedy, and Goethe's Faust.

The Divine Comedy. A new prose translation by H. R. Reese. Rinehart Edition No. 72 (paper, approximately $1.50). This book has the whole text of the Divine Comedy with timely and valuable explanatory statements needed by the modern reader. Each of the three cantica is prefaced by an easily comprehended design of the area of Dante's projected travels through Hell, Purgatory and Heaven.

Goethe's Faust Parts I and II. An abridged version translated by Louis MacNeice. Published by the Oxford Press (paper, approximately $1.50). Practically all Goethic scholars agree that Faust, written over a period of seventy years, is too long in its full text. MacNeice in adapting the drama for radio production in England made an admirable abridgement.

Heads Transit Merger

John N. Hall, '29, president of Hall's Motor Transit Co., has announced a merger with Buch Express, Inc., and Bingaman Motor Express Co., Inc. The three carriers have a combined gross income of $20 million, placing the new company among the top 20 motor carriers in the nation. Hall continues as president of the new company, which will continue to be known as Hall's Motor Transit Co. W. Leroy Hall is vice-president. Mrs. John N. Hall is the former Miriam S. Bell, '29, and Mrs. Leroy Hall is the former Thelma Nickey, '25.

her sorority. She was also a member of the band, Union Philosophical Society, the staff of the Dickinsonian, and worked on publicity for the Aquacade.

Elaine was an elective student in criminal law at the Law School, along with her regular study. After graduation she worked with the YWCA as a director of teen-age programs in Wilkes-Barre. She will be studying at WYU this fall in the Graduate School of Political Science.

LAST SON

The last of the family is Albert A. Alley, Class of 1960. He majored in chemistry and biology and will enter Temple Medical School in September. At Dickinson he served as secretary of Alpha Chi Rho, was a bandsman, a member of Mohler Scientific Club and the Debate Council, and was active in interfraternity sports.

Abbas Alley has made his contribution to the future with his children. His incentive and keen interest inspired them to intellectual growth and guaranteed the same background to their children.

His dream of a fine education for his family has been realized, but still another cherished hope may materialize, to stand as a memorial to him. His sons are looking forward some day to establishing a medical clinic, with four of them as physicians and the other as legal advisor.

Whether or not the clinic becomes a reality, this family will build its own monument in service to humanity, and Dickinson will watch with pride.

Complete Medical Course

Dickinson College was topped only by Pennsylvania State University in the number of its graduates completing the medical course at Jefferson Medical College last June. Those from Dickinson were Richard Alley, Robert A. Hartley, Barry H. Hellman and John B. Nevara. All were graduated from Dickinson in 1956.

Dickinsonians Honored

The citation for Dr. Ake, pastor of the Pine Street Methodist Church, Williamsport, Pa., and secretary of the Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference of the Methodist Church, was: "Your versatility in interests has led you into social work, government service in the U. S. Department of Commerce, academic administration, and finally into the pulpit and general church administration which you pursue with distinction. I have watched your work as secretary of the Northeastern Jurisdiction of the Methodist Church and admired the skill with which you carry, with apparent ease, the many details of this office. In addition to the normal responsibilities which you so well discharge, you have found time to devote yourself to world affairs in many ways, including extensive travel in both the East and the West."

Close Call for Mermaid

The Mermaid, storied symbol of the College, escaped unmarked in August when a bolt of lightning shattered one of the 12 wooden columns that support the dome of Old West's graceful Grecian cupola where she has her perch. The bolt tore several large splinters from the 10-foot column and, to the vast relief of officials of the College, that was the only damage left by the storm. Alva Franckle, superintendent of buildings and grounds, supervised the placement of a new column.

Victor Hann Elected

New officers of the Alumni Interfraternity Council are Rev. Dr. Victor B. Hann, '26, president; the Rev. Kermitt Lloyd, '52, vice-president; and James Humer, '41, executive council.

A Continuing Program in Support of the College

SINCE its establishment in 1954, the Parents Association has given support to several unique educational programs. The first of these was the annual across-the-board appreciation awards to faculty members in the form of sums of money to help meet the need for better salaries. After salaries were substantially increased, the Association turned to other projects.

These included a loan fund from which teachers could borrow to help finance further graduate study or special research, a hospitality program providing reimbursement for entertaining students in faculty homes, and contributions toward Althouse Science Hall and improvements to the student lounge in South College.

The Parents Association is currently interested in establishing a vocational counseling center and careers library on the campus, purchasing additional equipment for the reading improvement clinic, and sponsoring a survey of campus health facilities.

Dr. Randall B. Hamrick, Association chairman for 1959-60, speaking at the Parents Spring Weekend last May, told the parents they spend a grand total of $10,000 a day at Dickinson during the four years their sons and daughters are in college.

"This is money we are investing in the lives of our children," he said. "Never has there been a greater premium on education. We need to make 30 million jobs available in the next 15 years, and we need more trained manpower. We anticipate a paradox of having greatest unemployment at a time when there will also be an acute shortage of skilled labor."

Parents Asso. Officers

Chairman: Jerome K. Kuykendall,
Washington, D. C.

Vice Chairman: P. Walter Hanan,
Binghamton, N. Y.

Treasurer: Norman Miller, Tyrone,
Pa.

Secretary: John W. Douglas, Brookfield Center, Conn.

The Parents Association serves the College chiefly through the 40-member Advisory Council. The Council is the executive body of the Association. It is consulted on matters of programming for spring and fall Parents Weekends, and advises the president and other administrative officers of the College on many problems concerning students.

At the start of each academic year, the Advisory Council sponsors the publication and mailing to parents of a complete schedule of campus events for the term. The current mailing invited all parents to share actively in the college experience of their sons and daughters through active support and interest in the work and aims of the Parents Association.

"You are invited," stated the mailing, "to communicate with officers and committees of the Parents Council, and keep them informed of your own opinions, desires and beliefs with regard to the education of your son and daughter."

Phi Kappa Psi

Pennsylvania Zeta chapter of Phi Kappa Psi was established in 1859, and celebrated its centennial last year.

While participating in group efforts within the house, Phi Psi's individually contribute to campus activities and organizations. Brothers are in all aspects of college life from Student Senate committees to athletic teams.

Phi Psi's do well as a fraternity group and as individuals. The experience is of value in learning how to get along with others and in developing character and personality.

Chi Omega

Delta Chapter of Chi Omega was established at Dickinson College in 1907.

Serving the college and community through such projects as faculty teas and coffee hours, parties for orphans and for the ladies of the Lydia Baird Home, and programs for the Carlisle Y-Teens and Tiny Tots, Chi Omega strives to maintain its high ideals of friendship, scholarship, and the development of sisterhood and individual personalities.

Socially, Chi Omegas enjoy pledge and senior formals, desserts, picnics, parties for alumnae and patronesses, and festivities of initiation.
