GER BROOKE TANEY

A much maligned Dickinsonian of the Class of 1795, who became A Great Chief Justice
Of the United States Supreme Court

“Taney’s opinion will be found to exhibit all the characteristics that have marked his career. It is subtle, sophisticated and false. It is the plea of a tricky lawyer and not the decree of an upright Judge. . . . He walks with inverted and hesitating steps. His forehead is contracted, his eye sunken and his visage has a sinister expression.”

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE

“As a man, a Christian and a Jurist, he falls below the lowest standard of humanity, religion and law recognized among civilized man. . . . As a Jurist, or, more strictly speaking, as a Judge, in which character he will be most remembered, he was, next to Pontius Pilate, perhaps the worst that ever occupied the seat of judgment among men.”

ANON.

It was a decree of Destiny that a graduate of Dickinson College should deliver the decision in the Dred Scott Case," wrote Judge Edward S. Delaplaine, jurist, historian and author of Frederick, Maryland.

It was held in that case by the United States Supreme Court that the framers of the Constitution did not contemplate that Negro slaves would be included within the meaning of the term "citizen," and therefore they had no right to sue in the Federal Courts. Unfortunately the Court went on to say that, while under the Missouri Compromise Act, the fact that Dred Scott had lived in the territory acquired by the Louisiana Purchase made him free, the Congress had no constitutional power to pass such a provision, because no slave owner could be deprived of his property without due process of law merely because he may have taken the property into free territory!

WRITING in the May 1962 issue of the Dickinson Alumnus, Judge Delaplaine continued, "He (Taney) handed down the decision two days before he administered the Presidential oath to James Buchanan, Class of 1809."

Abraham Lincoln, whom Taney was to swear into the Presidency three years later in 1861, declared in his House Divided Speech on June 16, 1858 that "this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free," and Lincoln suggested there had been a grisley collusion between the two Dickinson College alumni!

The Illinois lawyer commented upon the Dred Scott Case as follows: "Why was the court decision held up? Why even a Senator's individual opinion election?

Plainly enough now, the speaking out then would have damaged the 'perfectly free' argument upon which the election was to be carried.

"Why the outgoing President's (Pierce's) felicitation on the endorsement? Why the delay of a reargument? Why the incoming President's (Buchanan's) advance exhortation in favor of the decision?

"These things look like the cautious patting and petting a spirited horse, preparatory to mounting him, when it is dreaded that he may give the rider a fall.

"And why the hasty after indorsements of the decision by the President and others."

Taney survived this crisis, served the Lincoln administration although he was not in complete sympathy with all of its measures, and died still in his high office in his eighty-eighth year. He is buried in Frederick near the Taney Home on South Bentz Street which Judge Delaplaine has helped preserve as a memorial to Chief Justice Taney and his brother-in-law, the author of The Star Spangled Banner!

THE College now owns a bronze bust of Taney, identical to the one which presides over the main entrance to the Courthouse in Frederick. It was presented to Board of Trustees President Dr. Samuel W. Witwer during a bipartite celebration of Law Day recently with the Dickinson School of Law. Walter E. Beach, '56, President of the Dickinson Club of Washington, D. C., was the donor and gave the bust to Dickinson immediately before the Law Day address by Dr. Earl F. Morris, President-elect of the American Bar Association. Dr. Morris spoke on the 1967 theme of Law Day, No Man is Above the Law, and No Man is Below it.

No Man is Above the Law

And No Man is Below It!

By Dr. Earl F. Morris

If we were to go some sixteen hundred miles west from where we are gathered today, we would find nestled in the Black Hills of South Dakota the Mount Rushmore Memorial. From tremendous height the granite faces of Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt would look down upon us. Gutzon Borglum, their sculptor, chose these four great Americans because each represents a stage in the development of our country.

Jefferson, author of the Declaration of Independence and articulate advocate of freedom, symbolizes the creation of the Republic.

Washington, man of action who fashioned the visions of Jefferson into a nation.

Lincoln, preserver of the Union, and Roosevelt, architect of the Panama Canal that bound our Continent together by adding a new dimension of communication.

All of these men believed wholeheartedly in the preservation of law and order as a realistic basis for a vigorously viable society. I have chosen as their spokesman today Theodore Roosevelt who, in the statement that is this year's Law Day theme, said:

No man is above the law, and no man is below it.

Although sixty-three years have passed since Roosevelt made this observation, his statement is even truer today than it was then. There are those who have tried to raise doubts as to the effectiveness of our legal system. There are those who have tried to maintain that law is on the side of power, influence, and money, and against those who are poor or without influence. But examination of the facts proves that in this country to a remarkable degree we have achieved equal justice for all.

Dr. Earl F. Morris addresses a Law Day audience in the social hall of the Holland Union Building, Saturday, May 6, 1967.

Let us look at some of the specifics of this statement. Blackstone in his commentaries told us:

"The King is the vicegerent and minister of God on earth; all are subject to him; and he is subject but to God alone."

The effect of this concept was that the sovereign could not be sued by a subject however grievous might be the injustice done him by the state. Such was the law of England for centuries. With the adoption in this country of the common law of England, this principle became a fundamental tenet of our law. In 1821 we find Chief Justice Marshall saying in Cohens v. Virginia that "this general proposition will not be controverted."

But it had long been urged that the principle should not apply if the sovereign gave its consent. By 1855 it was recognized that in this country the giving of such consent by the government was the only course consonant with our conception of the rights of our citizens. In that year we established a federal court of claims where citizens could sue the United States if it breached its contracts. Similar steps were taken in many of our states. Over the years the concept has expanded at both the federal and state level. By 1946 with the enactment of the Federal Tort Claims Act and similar laws in many states the citizen could sue his government for injury to his person and sovereign immunity was no more.

"No man—not even the sovereign—not even the government—is above the law."

The last part of the 19th century and the early years of this century saw the growth of great industrial and transportation empires in this country. Their economic power became awesome. Their effect on our competitive system became stifling. To meet this threat to our American way of life the anti-trust laws were passed. While their application in the early years entailed a titanic struggle, slowly but surely the law emerged triumphant.

The struggle goes on. Price-fixing is proscribed by the anti-trust laws. In 1961 in Philadelphia our two largest electrical equipment companies, 29 other companies and 44 executives were charged with a price-fixing conspiracy. All were found guilty, fined and some of the executives given jail sentences.

"No man—no corporation however large—no executive whatever his station—is above the law."

We turn to leaders in labor and government.

Teamster President Dave Beck in 1957 was accused of stealing $370,000 from the union. He dodged, cajoled, and long avoided effective legal action. In 1962, however, his conviction of tax fraud became final, and he went to jail.

His successor, Jimmy Hoffa, challenged law enforcement for years. He flouted the law and bragged about it. I recall discussing his conviction in Tennessee for jury tampering with a friend shortly after he had been found guilty. He predicted that Hoffa would never go to the penitentiary. The road was indeed long and hard. His lawyers used every weapon in the legal arsenal. But the day came when the prison doors at Lewisburg clanged shut behind even Jimmy Hoffa.

And then there was Bobby Baker. Known in Washington as Mr. Influence, he found that this could not stem the inexorable processes of the law. Despite being a millionaire and having influential contacts in government and business, he was found guilty of larceny, conspiracy, fraud and income tax evasion.

The lesson of Dave Beck, Jimmy Hoffa and Bobby Baker comes through loud and clear. It is, as Theodore Roosevelt said:

No man is above the law!

BUT what of the rest of the quotation? What of justice for the man who cannot afford a lawyer?

In civil cases the legal profession has long provided free legal assistance to those who could not pay for it. Such assistance was initially provided by individual lawyers and in many places this is still the method used. Beginning in 1876 in New York City and subsequently in other parts of the country, those without adequate funds have been provided legal advice and assistance through legal aid societies.

The Federal government, cooperating with the legal profession, has recently expanded this legal assistance. The Legal Services Program of the Office of Economic Opportunity is now rendering such services in 600 neighborhood law offices in 40 states and in 44 of our 50 largest cities.

Through legal aid we say to the poor:

No man is below the law.

In criminal cases legal services for the indigent have likewise been provided. The usual system is the appointment of individual attorneys to represent the accused. In the Federal courts until recently the lawyer so appointed served without compensation. In some state courts he serves without pay and in some receives a relatively minimal fee for his services. In some states the government maintains public defender offices with a permanent staff of criminal law specialists to defend the indigent accused at government expense. Gerald Getty who represented Richard Speck in his recent trial in Illinois for the murder of the eight nurses is an example of the public defender. The state, not Speck, paid for Mr. Getty's legal services.

But in some states such defense was available only to persons charged with a capital offense and not for other charges, even though conviction could lead to imprisonment. When Clarence Earl Gideon was charged with such a lesser offense in Florida, he requested an attorney. Since there was no provision in the law for appointing one, the court refused the request. He was convicted and sentenced to prison.

Acting as his own counsel he carried his case to the United States Supreme Court and there Abe Fortas, one of the ablest attorneys in the country and now a Justice of the Supreme Court, was appointed to represent him. In a landmark decision the Court held that an indigent defendant charged with any serious crime has a right to counsel and in doing so said:

" . . . reason and reflection requires us to recognize that in our adversary system of criminal justice, any person haled into court, who is too poor to hire a lawyer, cannot be assured a fair trial unless counsel is provided for him . . . The right of one charged with crime to counsel may not be deemed fundamental and essential to fair trials in some countries, but it is in ours. From the very beginning, our state and national Constitutions and laws have laid great emphasis on procedural and substantive safeguards designed to assure fair trials before impartial tribunals in which every defendant stands equal before the law. This noble ideal cannot be realized if the poor man charged with crime has to face his accusers without a lawyer to assist him."

It can be said more succinctly:

No man is below the law.

And finally, there is Shuffin' Sam. His full name was Sam Thompson, a slim, dignified 46 year old handyman who lived in Louisville, Kentucky. His income came primarily from odd job carpentry and painting. But he had a problem—he frequently was arrested for loitering, vagrancy, or disorderly conduct.

The final blow came one day when Sam was waiting for a bus. He stepped into a nearby cafe and to help pass the time began playing a record on the juke box.

As the music played, he shuffled his feet to the rhythm. Two policemen walked in and accused him of hanging around and dancing in an establishment that had no dancing license. They arrested him for loitering, and when Sam protested, added a charge of disorderly conduct.

In contrast to Gideon, he had an attorney from the beginning but he stood convicted until the United States Supreme Court held that there was no evidence that he had committed a crime. In reversing his conviction the Court said:

"The hurt done by a denial of justice is not easy to describe, but it is nonetheless real. A man's innate sense of dignity, his conception of himself as a person unique, yet part of a community, his feeling of proud security in the impartiality of the law—impairment of destruction of these values cannot be measured in money. Yet such a hurt can shatter a man. And that is the hurt which is done when justice is denied."

And that, my friends, "the hurt which is done when justice is denied," is why in this country "No man must ever be below the law."

It is appropriate that I should be discussing this subject in this place when your distinguished graduate is being honored by your sister institution. It is difficult to fit the Dred Scott decision into the quotation to which I have been addressing myself. But Chief Justice

Taney must, in fairness, be remembered for more than this one pronouncement. His portrait hangs over the teaching podium in the south classroom of Langdell Hall at the Harvard Law School. His eyes in this portrait are particularly penetrating and, if the lecture grows a bit dull, an occurrence I am certain that never happens at Dickinson, it is easy to let one's gaze meet that of the Chief Justice and to imagine that he is again making the statement in Abelman v. Booth that is paraphrased in President Johnson's Law Day Proclamation:

"Free government could not exist without ready obedience to the law."

Obedience to the law rests upon respect for the law. Respect for the law flows from the equality of its operation. To be sure, we have not in these United States achieved perfection in administering justice as among all men. Much lies ahead to be done. But progress there has been and progress there continues to be. We should, I think, while guarding against complacency, take pride in our accomplishments, and I suggest that, could the granite figures speak from the heights of Mount Rushmore, they would tell us that they find satisfaction in what has been done but would urge upon us that we carry on until we reach as close as mere humans ever can to the goal that:

No man is above the law, and no man is below it.

Walter E. Beach, '56, Presents Taney Bust

"The business of bringing into being this piece of art with its special historical significance to this College is more than a matter of funds.

"A number of individuals have shared in significant ways towards realizing what we have before us today, and I want to tender recognition to them.

"First, I want to thank Dr. Rubendall and Mr. Witwer for their continuing interest in this matter. Second, I want to thank those whose concern in this matter related to art and administration: Sculptor Joseph Urner, Librarian Charles Sellers, and Alumni Secretary Vincent Schafmeister. There are two others who also shared in a perhaps less direct, but nonetheless important way: Donald Flaherty whose stimulating classes in Constitutional Law first developed my interest in law and the judicial process, and Judge Delaplaine whose patient, persistent, and generous efforts on behalf of the memory of Chief Justice Taney has served as an inspiration to all who study and honor Taney.

"Finally, I want to thank Mr. Morris whose presence further honors this occasion.

"This sculptured work of Chief Justice Taney is not the first of him. In the old Supreme Court Chamber in the Capitol at Washington, where he presided for 28 years, there is a marble bust of him. In Annapolis, in Baltimore, and in Frederick, the cities in the State in which he practiced law, served as State Senator, and Attorney General, there are sculptured works of Taney.

"So it is appropriate that at his College he also be honored in this form. But in a special sense this opportunity to honor Taney at Dickinson is unique for here this memorial is linked to the Taney Collection of papers and memorabilia in the College Library.

"Here our gesture to Chief Justice Taney takes on form and substance. It stretches from the visible memorial to the commitment of library facilities and a growing collection of his papers for the study and understanding of his life and work.

"And this is as it should be at Dickinson.

"For the College where the Chief Justice sharpened his mind and developed his intellect in the 18th century, should provide resources where students and scholars of the 20th century can study his contribution to our society.

"And at his alma mater which he held in affection and regard during the long course of his life and career as evidenced by his letters and personal ties we should render special respect and honor to his memory.

"To these ends, to encourage the growth of Dickinson as a Taney Center and to render our due honor to him, I am happy to present this bust to Mr. Witwer, the Chairman of the Dickinson College Board of Trustees."

And The Rains Came!

After four consecutive unblemished Parents Weekends on the Dickinson Campus, intermittent rain—sometimes light, sometimes just unreasonable — kept nearly 1,000 parents and guests shadowed under large black umbrellas and shrouded in pastel plastics.

Perhaps it was coincidence that all but one weekend activity was scheduled indoors and that because of extensive alterations to Biddle Field, no athletic contests were programmed for the homefront. Or perhaps the rain was just long overdue. Whatever, Parents Weekend '67 unfolded as one of Dickinson's most entertaining.

Neatly balanced between the intellectual and social, parents found their red and white programs as enticing as a menu at the Ritz. One could not hope to digest each and every entree, but by one headcount, several surely tried.

“When's the next affair like this for parents?” asked a New Yorker clad in his tan, double-breasted storm-coat.

“October 14,” the Program Chairman crisply stated, “And we've already ordered better weather.”

Parents Annual Meeting

The Annual Meeting of the Parents Advisory Council was called to order on May 6 by John B. Ferguson, Jr., Chairman. Reports from five standing committees were received as well as special presentations by the Nominating Committee and the Chairman of the Parents Division of the Third Century Development Program.

Dickinson's president, Dr. Howard L. Rubendall, welcomed Council Members and thanked them for their participation in council activities. He indicated that college students today "don't behave in the manner that everyone thinks they should," but went on to state that Dr. George W. Beadle, President of the University of Chicago, was very impressed with Dickinson's student body when he visited the campus to accept Dickinson's annual Priestley Award in April.

Richard O. Smith of St. Davids, Pennsylvania, submitted the report of the Finance Committee. He stated that this year's Parents Fund shows less growth than had been hoped. He cited recent tuition, room and board increases, the instability of the stock market and the capital gifts drive of the College as possible reasons. Smith produced figures showing a ten per cent decline in gifts to meet current operating expenses. He also reported that the Committee met in Philadelphia during January and that it was decided not to interrupt Parents Annual Giving during the major capital funds drive. "The funds we raise," stated Smith, "are for an entirely different purpose than those being raised in the capital funds campaign now underway and they are essential if Dickinson is to be the kind of college parents want it to be."

George Shuman, Jr., Treasurer of the College, then informed the Council that the College has an operating budget of $4,643,839. He listed total assets of $23,235,000 and the market value of endowment funds at $8,500,000. His figures indicated the College ended the 1966 fiscal year with a surplus of $23,826, approximately the same amount raised through Parents' Annual Giving that year.

Reporting for the Educational Program Committee, Mr. Alex Kotch of

The warmth and hospitality of a Mary Dickinson Club Coffee Hour in itself is worth a long drive to the campus. The Club hopes to add a second yearly scholarship.

The Aquacade performed

Over 400 parents, alumni and friends attended the evening program and heard Dr. Rubendall outline the story of how the Ford Grant was won; heard Dr. Witwer relate the College's exciting plans and the need for meeting the Ford Challenge; and heard Dr. Shepley describe how his National Development Committee plans to reach Dickinson's $6 million goal.

Rockville, Maryland, reported an interesting meeting with Dean Samuel H. Magill. Prime topics were the 4-1-4 calendar which sets September through December and February through May as regular semesters, but leaves the month of January free for independent projects, field trips and research. Discussion also centered on the advisability of courses which would not be subject to conventional grading but which would receive simply a pass or fail designation. It was also learned during the meeting that Dickinson still has a "C" rating for compensation to full professors, despite recent improvement at the instructor, assistant professor and associate professor levels.

J. Donald Scott submitted the report for the Student Affairs Committee. He cited improvement in campus communications and noted that students now sit on three faculty committees. These student representatives have all privileges excepting the right to vote. Mr. Scott also cited recent problems concerning pledging times for fraternities and sororities and informed the Council that discrimination is not a barrier to membership in these organizations because of the recent resolution adopted by Dickinson's Board of Trustees. Dickinson's Health Service was acclaimed and special note was made of Dickinson's excellent athletic records despite the obvious absence of concentration in that area. Mr. Scott also indicated that Dean James would return to full-time teaching next year and that Mr. Harold Gillespie, formerly of the Department of English, has been selected as Dean of Students.

The Communications Committee convened at the direction of Mr. Woodford O. Flowers, Wayland, Massachusetts, who indicated the Committee was extremely pleased to note significant improvement in the student newspaper. It was also noted that Mr. Flowers' committee circulated to all parents a comprehensive statement on the Financial Affairs of the College last February. He noted that the Committee would like to question parents about the materials they receive from Dickinson.

The Educational Fund Committee granted six loans to faculty members who applied for assistance to complete study for advanced status. The loans totaled $2,500. Mr. Gerald Lannholm, Princeton, New Jersey, explained that loan requests are made through the Dean's Office and forwarded to each member of his committee for review and further recommendations. Dean Magill indicated that whereas only $2,500 is distributed to Dickinson faculty for this purpose, $30,000 has been set aside at Davidson College. Magill went on to explain that the loan program helps to attract faculty who are desirous of keeping abreast of their disciplines.

Several comments were made from the floor. Recommendations were received to study a four-year guaranteed tuition payment plan and to make basic changes in the format of the invoices issued by the College for tuition payments. It was also suggested that parents as well as students be informed of existing opportunities to study abroad.

Paul Hanna, Chairman of the Parents Division of the Third Century Development Program, cited progress being made on that front. He urged the Council to lend its full support to the program designed to replace some of Dickinson's sub-standard facilities and to raise additional endowment funds. Hanna indicated that 1.9 million had been raised toward the Ford Challenge. (The figure climbed to 2.1 million later that evening.) Fred T. Richards, Princeton, New Jersey, echoed Mr. Hanna's appeal. He indicated that many parents were actively seeking funds in New York for the capital drive.

Mr. Frey, representing the College, spoke briefly about the College's two separate fund-raising efforts—Annual Giving and the Capital Campaign. He indicated one could not go forward without the other, and that all gifts to Dickinson were being matched by Ford. He thanked the parents for their past interest and participation and appealed that parents carry the Dickinson story to their friends and business acquaintances. "Somewhere out there," Frey stated, "there are friends of higher education who have never had an invitation to help the small private college like Dickinson. We can provide that kind of invitation and opportunity, but only through you who can state our case and arouse interest." Frey then introduced Randall Hamrick, the parent of a 1960 graduate of the College, who is leading a campaign to renew interest and support among parents of recent Dickinson graduates.

The Nominating Committee Report was submitted by Fred T. Richards. Nominated were Donald O. Scott, Gladwyne, as Chairman of the Council and Dr. Ann Martin, Munhall, as Secretary. Committee chairmen nominated were John B. Ferguson, Jr., John Trickey, Jr., Kenneth G. Morris, George B. Coleman and Woodford O. Flowers. The motion to elect carried unanimously.

Mr. Ferguson thanked senior parents who served the Council and indicated his appreciation for the support he personally received during his tenure of office. Mr. Frey, speaking for the College, indicated that a by-law in the Council's Constitution prevented any member from serving in the same office for a period of more than two years and expressed his pleasure that Mr. Ferguson had been selected as a Committee Chairman for the academic year 1967-68. Frey then presented to the former chairman, on behalf of the College and the Council, an appropriately engraved gavel which Ferguson promptly used to adjourn the session. The next meeting is on October 14.

Evan Frey, '59, Director of the Dickinson Fund, addresses Parents Council.

Men of Malcolm Hall Staged An Open House and Helped Memorialize "Mr. Dickinson"

Neil Garfield, '67, President of Malcolm Hall, was the student representative on the dedicatory program. He concluded that Malcolm Hall opened a new and exciting approach to independent living.

Dr. Gilbert Malcolm of the Class of 1915 served with distinction in every non-academic administrative position at Dickinson College including the offices of Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds, Alumni Secretary, Development Director, Treasurer, Executive Secretary, Vice President, President and Provost. On two other occasions he was acting President.

His range of responsibility and his forty-one dedicated years of service to Dickinson are without parallel in the College's history.

In 1957 Dickinson Alumni presented him a scroll which read "Because of his sincerity of purpose, his thoughtfulness of others, his diligent and faithful devotion to duty, he has carved for himself a niche among the great leaders of Dickinson College and has won the unending affection of her alumni."

Malcolm Hall was filled with alumni and friends in spite of heavy rains. President Rubendall recalled "Red" Malcolm's devotion to the College and thanked Alumni for their generous gifts which made this building possible.

Letters To (And From) The Editor

To the Editor:

I must disagree with Mr. Paul Walker's letter in the Winter issue of the Alumnus. The Fall issue, which he criticizes in part, was a success because of the inclusion of Professor George Gaylord Simpson's speech and the article by George W. Ahl. These presentations indicate the caliber of our graduates better than the "alumni gossip" prevalent in many alumni magazines.

Many Dickinsonians to whom I have spoken have read, with a great deal of interest, your articles by the faculty and others, and although they may not always agree with the views expressed, they do praise the attempt to present a wide variety of pieces of an intellectual nature.

I am looking forward to your next issue.

Sincerely,

William A. Morgan, '63

I relinquish the space of my usual letter in this issue to Ralph Scheuer, president of Phi Epsilon Pi Fraternity, and his splendid case statement for I.F.C. Hopefully, a letter from I.F.C. will become a regular feature of the Alumnus.

V.J.S.

Just as Dickinson has grown and changed to meet the new challenges of society, the Interfraternity Council has felt the need to change and reshape itself to meet the demands of this new college community. Admittedly, the I.F.C. was not as active as it should have been in many areas, and until recently there existed a degree of out-dated thinking on the part of fraternities at Dickinson.

However, the new I.F.C., like the new Dickinson, is directing its energy towards being a more integral and active member of the organic academic and social community. The activities of the I.F.C. are an organized effort to improve the place of fraternities here and give them a more vital role in helping to shape Dickinson into the type of institution able to meet the requirements of tomorrow.

At a recent meeting of I.F.C. a new scholastic fraternity, Delta Chi, was formed. Fraternity with a minimum average of 3.20 are eligible for the new honorary. It is felt that this organization will foster high scholarship and provide inspiration for future fraternity men at Dickinson. This too reflects the high standards of scholarship set by the fraternity system as a whole.

In addition such projects as an ad book, community car wash, Heart Fund Drive, Law Day participation, and others, seek to strengthen relations between the College and the surrounding community of Carlisle. The I.F.C. realizes full well, that if it is to remain a strong voice and active partner in the future of Dickinson, it can not sit idly by. It must up-date and re-evaluate its standards and goals to be compatible with those of the college. To remain strong tomorrow much work must, and is being done today.

As of this May, the Interfraternity Council will have completely revised and rewritten its present Constitution. The new document permits greater freedom of action on the part of the houses, while increasing the responsibilities of the Council to act as a more dynamic organization at Dickinson. In addition the new Constitution expands the powers of the officers, creates an executive committee, and modernizes the old system of finance.

Of course, as always the success of the I.F.C. depends very heavily upon the support given by alumni. To help keep alumni more active and up to date on fraternity life, and the activities of their chapter, an Alumni I.F.C. has been formed. It consists of three alumni members of each house, plus members of the I.F.C. itself. This body will meet several times a year to discuss any problems which may arise and to plan a program of activities for both alumni and undergraduate fraternity men. A fraternity system, like individual houses, is only as strong as its membership, and a vital force in the membership of any house is its alumni. Without alumni interest, the I.F.C. can never realize its fullest potential.

And what is that potential? To help fraternities and fraternity men live up to the exciting challenge of a growing society and a dynamic college environment.

An Encouraging Report On Annual Giving

With nearly 4,000 alumni, parents and friends contributing to Annual Giving, the 1967 Dickinson Fund edged past the $200,000 mark toward its $240,000 goal. Showing a strong advance was the Alumni Annual Giving division which reported 81 per cent of its $100,000 plus objective in hand. Parent and alumni chairmen were enthusiastic at their May meetings that a record amount would be announced by June 30 when the Fund closes.

General Chairman John S. Snyder '33, Scarsdale, New York, greeted many of the volunteers at the National Leadership Conference and expressed his appreciation "for their careful attention to the needs of the College and their recognition of the importance of Annual Giving to Dickinson." As usual, the funds received through Annual Giving will be used to support current educational activities.

Around The Campus

Dr. George W. Beadle 16th Recipient Of Priestley Award

A world-famous biologist joined the distinguished roster of eight chemists, three biochemists, three physicists and one geophysicist who hold the Dickinson College Award in Memory of Joseph Priestley.

The largest of all the presentation ceremony audiences recently saw George W. Beadle, of Chicago, become the 16th recipient of the award.

Among the 900 persons who filled the Holland Union social hall at the College were students from colleges in Shippensburg, Chambersburg, Gettysburg, Emmitsburg, Md., Westminster, Md., and Annullville.

As usual, section members of the American Chemical Society held their March meeting at Dickinson in connection with the Priestley fete. They came from the seven counties comprising the section. A dozen alumni of the University of Chicago joined in the tribute.

"We honor a man of extraordinary distinction whose work in science has created modern genetics," said Dr. Howard L. Rubendall, Dickinson president, in opening the ceremony.

Prof. William B. Jeffries introduced the recipient as "teacher, researcher, author, biologist, and president of one of the world's great universities."

In the breadth of his interests and abilities he was compared with the award namesake, Joseph Priestley, 18th century scientist, theologian and political theorist—best remembered for his discovery of oxygen.

It was noted that the Priestley Award, first given in 1952, is universally respected because of the eminence of the recipients—men who have benefited mankind through their science.

Dr. Beadle said he knew all of the award winners "as friends and scientists." He said he was honored to join the distinguished group and accepted the award "with humility and very great pleasure."

President Rubendall presented him with the mounted Priestley portrait medallion in handsome Wedgwood blue and white pottery, and a check for $1000.

In 1958, Dr. Beadle and Edward T. Tatum received the Nobel Prize in medicine. Their research led to the discovery that genes act by regulating chemical events, thus laying the foundation for biochemical genetics.

Since 1961 Dr. Beadle, who holds all eight major awards for scientific achievement and 12 honorary degrees, has been the president of the University of Chicago.

In the acceptance address, "Genetics and Cultural Evolution," Dr. Beadle, who spent the full day at the college, said that man has sufficient knowledge and understanding to direct his own evolution but that it is not at all clear he is prepared to do so wisely and in a manner that will lead to certain future improvement.

He noted that cultural change can be “enormously more rapid” than biological change and added, “It is clearly possible for man to revert to a prehistoric cultural level in a single generation and to reverse the process with equal rapidity. Stated in another way, the opportunity for education in the human species is almost unlimited.”

As an example, he said, one of our infants placed with the Bushmen will grow up like the Bushmen, and place one of their infants with us and he will grow up with all of our cultures.

“In other words,” he said, “it is possible to go from Bushman culture to our culture in a single generation.”

But if the child is three before placed in the new environment, that environment will not catch hold. Only recently, said Dr. Beadle, have scientists learned how early in life the acquisitions of cultural characteristics begins.

“There is great resistance to cultural change unless influences are brought to bear soon after birth. This is a fact that has heretofore—unappreciated implications for educational programs.”

He raised this question, “Are there significant differences among races in ability to acquire a given cultural pattern?”

And made this answer, “We do not know the answer; neither do we know how to get it. Furthermore, if we did know how to get it, it is not at all clear what we would do with it.”

He closed with the plea that “we give all groups and all civilizations opportunity to develop culturally.”

Dr. Beadle was presented for the award by Dean Samuel H. Magill. Seated on the platform as chairman of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Section of the American Chemical Society was F. Melvin Sweeney, Lancaster. Dr. Horace E. Rogers of the faculty was introduced as chairman of the awards jury and of the celebration committee.

Central Intelligence Agency Is Defended For Subsidies Paid To Students

John P. Davies, Jr., retired career diplomat, spoke at the annual scholarship dinner recently and defended the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) secret subsidies paid to student groups, professors and research organizations.

In his opinion, the "sabotage" of CIA covert operations by the recent disclosures in the newspapers was "more serious than any reverses that we have suffered in the Vietnam war."

Davies, in a long career, served diplomatic posts in China, the Soviet Union, Burma, and elsewhere and was the first to foresee the Communist takeover in China in 1944. An audience of 250 faculty members and students heard the address.

Dr. Howard L. Rubendall, Dickinson president, presided at the large dinner, traditionally a highlight of the College's academic term. Others taking part were Dean Samuel H. Magill and Prof. William H. Wishmeyer, president of the Dickinson chapter of Phi Beta Kappa.

Davies labeled the public exposures of the CIA operations "a display of callow irresponsibility."

"The mass media vied in competitive irresponsibility, exposing and damaging, if not wrecking the utility of a complicated and delicate structure that had taken years to build and that reached far beyond the academic community," he said.

The CIA secret subsidies paid to the National Student Association and other academic groups were, in Davies' view, the U.S. Government's "counter-offensive" against the use of professors and students by Communist and other totalitarian states for the purpose of subverting free societies.

"Much of the counter-attack had to be secret," he said. "This deadly serious struggle around the world was an undercover war and had to be fought that way."

"In fighting this undercover war, our government could not, naturally, draft and order about students, professors and others as did the Kremlin.

"As far as the academic community was concerned, the CIA had to rely on finding elements on campus which spontaneously wanted to join the struggle, and then provide these militants with the means for doing what came naturally.

"It wasn't much more devious or sinister than that. Because the government supported rather than commanded certain academic groups, it was in the position of an anxious Broadway angel to the cast of a new theatrical production."

Davies was of the opinion that this relationship between the academic community and foreign policy was not an abridgement of academic freedom or a corrupter of students and professors.

Said he, "Those persons underwritten by the CIA surely found fulfillment in a high-minded, even lofty cause. And if they lost interest or changed their minds, they could drop out without being shipped off to Siberia. They were free to attack American foreign policy. They did so, and continued to receive government support.

"It doesn't look to me as if the academic community has been wronged in this relationship."

The diplomatist's subject was "The Academic Community and Foreign Policy." He made an interesting comparison of criticism of foreign policy by the academic community in underdeveloped countries on one hand and in the United States or Britain on the other.

"In underdeveloped countries, the attacks on foreign policy are usually on the grounds that the government is yielding to foreign influence, that it is not nationalistic enough.

"In our country, the reverse is the case. Most of the campus criticism seems to be that our foreign policy is too nationalistic, that it should be more internationalized, that more account should be taken of foreign wishes."

The dinner was a faculty tribute to the college's better students, especially Edwards Phillips, Havertown, a senior, and Esther Friedman, Glen Burnie, Md., and Stephen A. Marini, Springfield, juniors, who led their classes in scholarship and bear the title of Sophister, and also to three seniors who were initiated into Phi Beta Kappa just before the dinner—Alan D. Kieser, Philadelphia; Kathleen Kelley, Baltimore, and Susan C. Stover, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Lee MacPhail, New York Yankee Vice-President And General Manager, Addresses "D" Dinner

Leland (Lee) MacPhail, executive vice-president and general manager of the New York Yankees, whose son, Allan, was captain and a varsity lacrosse star at Dickinson the past three seasons, as well as the Red Devils captain, until an injury sidelined him during the 1967 season, told more than 200 athletes, college officials and sports writers and radio broadcasters that "There is no conflict between baseball and professional football, even though professional football has made great strides, but not at the expense of baseball."

Speaking to the assemblage of more than 200 in the Holland Student Union at a dinner sponsored by the "D" Club in recognition of Red and White spring sports team, MacPhail declared that "baseball had its greatest ever in 1965-66."

MacPhail, a graduate of Swarthmore said that the National Football League, the American Football League, the National Basketball Association and the National Hockey League drew only one-half the attendance baseball attracted in 1966.

MacPhail pointed out that baseball's drawing power comes a great deal from the fact that it is a game of personalities and skill, then congratulated Dickinson's spring sports teams on its fine 27 won, 12 lost record this season.

"The experience gained in athletics, at the intercollegiate level, has no substitute," MacPhail said, pointing out that "I'm one who believes in education at the small-college level, and the development of an athletic program, which lends poise and leadership."

In conclusion, MacPhail said "Sports has contributed greatly to our leadership," then emphasized that baseball's greatest achievement is the fact it has proven that our two races can get along and work together.

on the basketball and baseball team this season, was named the year's outstanding athlete, for which he received the MacAndrews Trophy, which was presented to Fedok by Wib Gobrecht, the football and lacrosse coach.

Fedok, co-captain of both the basketball and baseball teams, was one of the top hitters on the Red Devils, for which he was named the Most Valuable Player for 1967.

Also receiving Most Valuable Player Awards were Steve Hopper, Camp Hill, in golf; Peter Hanley, Sparks, Md., in lacrosse; Dick Hollinshead, Leonia, N. J. in tennis, and Charles Smith, Washington, D. C., and Jerry Weiner, Chevy Chase, Md., in track. Smith rewrote Dickinson's records in the mile and one-half mile this spring as a member of Joe DuCharme's Red and White track team.

Dave Eavenson, athletic director and swimming coach, presented the Kronenberg Trophy to Sigma Chi Fraternity for the most students participating in athletics.

Paul Hanley eludes a Pittsburgh Lacrosse Club defenseman and prepares to score one of his three goals in the 18-7 Dickinson victory. The Red Devils ended the season with five wins and three losses under coach Wilbur (Wib) Gobrecht, '52.

Two thousand four hundred and ninety-one formal applications for the Class of 1970 were processed down to 398. Of this number, 65 were alumni children. 46 were accepted and 23 entered as witnessed herewith. The percentage of alumni children accepted (71%) was a considerable increase in percentage from last year. This percentage is quite high when compared to the percent of the total applicant group accepted (18%) but is the result of College policy to, whenever possible, give preference to alumni children.

Legion of Merit to Lt. Col. Richard Kim, '52

A U.S. intelligence officer who distinguished himself during the turbulent period of the demise of the Diem regime in South Vietnam has been awarded the Legion of Merit Medal.

Lt. Col. Richard Kim, '52 USA, of Alexandria (Va.), now assigned to the Defense Communications Planning Group, was presented the medal by Lt. Gen. Alfred D. Starbird, USA, Director, Defense Communications Agency (DCA), at a recent ceremony.

According to the Citation, signed by Secretary of the Army Stanley R. Resor, Kim, then a major, during the Diem demise and the subsequent succession of coups within South Vietnam, "meticulously" supervised the intelligence activities of 44 Special Forces Detachments spread throughout Vietnam in over 50 cities.

These detachments controlled and directed over 20,000 para-military personnel in an area containing the upper highlands, the Delta, and 750 miles of Cambodian-

Laotian border which extended from the 17th Parallel to the Cao Mau Peninsula.

All operations were conducted under the alternating wet and dry seasons of an oppressive tropical climate and penetrating sun.

Col. Kim, the citation said, conceived and developed a border control proposal for the Cambodian border, which was accepted by the U. S. Embassy in Saigon for use in the UN by the US Ambassador.

Kim's ability to penetrate Viet Cong infiltration teams and identify known communists undoubtedly saved many lives among the para-military and American personnel of U.S. Special Forces, the citation declared.

Kim is the son of Mrs. C. S. Kim, 533 Kekepua St., Honolulu, Hawaii. At left are Kim's family and (l-r) Maj. Gen. Milton B. Adams, USAF; and Col. Donald Blackburn, USA, both of the Planning Group.

First WAVE in Vietnam

A recent Washington Post carried the headline "New WAVE Splashes Forth." In a less literary piece, one might have written the head "New WAVE Splashes First" in order to properly salute the first WAVE assigned to Vietnam. She is Lt. Elizabeth G. Wylie, '61, who is a carefully contained bundle of excitement about her new orders.

At this time "Betsy" Wylie knows only that her job will be "some sort of logistical support billet," likely one in which she will replace a male officer ending his overseas tour.

Presently she is assigned as legal and training officer at the Service School Command in Bainbridge, Maryland. The Post article by-lined by Beth Resler contained interesting quotes.

"I guess I always wanted to be a WAVE," says Navy junior Lt. Wylie. Graduating from Woodrow Wilson High School while her father was stationed at the Pentagon in 1956-57, she enlisted in 1961 right after graduating from DICKINSON.

After graduation from OCS and from Navy Justice School at Newport, R. I., and duty there, she went to London with the Military Sea Transportation Service Command for the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean. When MSTS was moved to Bremerhaven, Germany, she went along and spent a year in Europe.

"But other than London and Germany, I haven't traveled overseas," she said. "It seems that while I was growing up, my father was in the United States."

She plans to travel in Southeast Asia, however, and is counting on leave in Australia on her way home. "My grandmother was born in Australia and I still have relatives there."

Lt. Wylie plans family visits before leaving in June. Recently friends were celebrating her assignment in Norfolk.

Elizabeth G. Wylie, '61

Said a WAVE friend in the Pentagon, "They just couldn't have picked a better WAVE. Betsy's great. Well, if you know what I mean, they aren't sending a shrinking violet."

Special Mention

Former Dickinson Professor Named Chief Executive Officer of AAUP

Dr. Bertram H. Davis, nationally recognized scholar and educational leader, has been appointed to succeed William P. Fidler as chief executive officer of the American Association of University Professors, according to an announcement made today by Professor Clark Byse of the Harvard Law School, President of the Association. The AAUP, with over 80,000 members, 1,000 chapters, and 48 state and regional affiliates, is the largest professional organization of teaching and research professors in American education.

In announcing this appointment, Professor Byse stated, "Dr. Davis brings youth, vigor, and outstanding credentials to his new position. He is a gifted teacher, a well known scholar in English literature, and an educational officer with a decade of experience in the AAUP's Washington Office. He has served as Deputy General Secretary of the organization since 1962. In terms of ability, temperament, and background, Dr. Davis is uniquely qualified to lead the Association in the challenging years ahead."

The appointment of Dr. Davis, approved by the Council of the Association and effective April 3, concludes a four-month national search conducted by a committee consisting of Professors David Fellman of the University of Wisconsin (chairman), Seymour S. Block of the University of Florida, John P. Dawson of Harvard University, Fritz Machlup of Princeton University, and Joseph C. Pray of the University of Oklahoma. The outgoing General Secretary announced last October that health considerations have prompted him to relinquish his current post; Dr. Fidler will continue to serve on the Washington Office staff of AAUP in a key position.

Born in Queens, New York, in 1918, Dr. Davis spent his early years in Hasbrouck Heights, New Jersey. He received his early schooling in that city and later attended Phillips Academy, Andover. He went to Hamilton College for two years and completed his undergraduate work at Columbia College in New York City in 1941. Upon graduation, he entered the army as a private. He spent forty-six months overseas during World War II, serving in Australia and New Guinea, and gaining a commission.

He returned to New York after the war, married Ruth Benedict, the daughter of a Brooklyn College biology professor, and enrolled in the Faculty of Philosophy of Columbia University, where he earned his M.A. and Ph.D. degrees in English. He was a lecturer at Hunter College in 1947-48, and, from 1948 to 1957, served on the Dickinson faculty. While at Dickinson, Dr. Davis served as Vice-President and President of the local AAUP chapter.

His publications include two books: Johnson Before Boswell (Yale, 1960), a work of literary criticism; and an abridged and annotated edition of Hawkins' Life of Samuel Johnson (Macmillan, 1961). His third book, a full-length biography of Sir John Hawkins, is now nearing completion. He has published a large number of articles and reviews in scholarly and educational journals.

After joining the Association's Washington Office as a staff associate in 1957, Dr. Davis discharged a broad succession of responsibilities. He was in charge of national membership and chapter and conference relations for several years, and later rendered staff service to the Association's programs in the areas of teaching, research, publication, and accrediting, and especially in the important area of academic freedom and tenure. He was Editor of the AAUP Bulletin from 1960 to 1966.

His daughter will enter the College with next Fall's Freshman class.
