“Fulbrighters Bring The World To Columbus”

OSU Fulbright students took part in a cultural enrichment seminar held at Geneva Hills, Ohio on October 13-14, 1989. The seminar was planned by the OISS with funding from a grant from the U.S. Information Agency.

The 20 participants, representing 14 countries including the U.S.A., were graduate students, OSU faculty, staff and administrators. Two teachers from the Columbus School District, and the executive director of the Columbus International Visitors Council also took part.

The two-day seminar covered a wide range of subjects and challenged the Fulbrighters to get involved in programs and organizations to share their cultural and special interests. Information was provided on the Ohio State University Columbian Quincentenary (the 500th anniversary of the voyage of Columbus); “Ameriflora”, the first-ever International Floral and Garden Exposition in the United States; the School Visit Program; and the United Nations Festival. There were also some discussions about increasing interaction between Americans and Fulbrighters both on campus and in the community.

Seminar participants enjoyed a colorful autumn weekend with limbering exercises, canoeing, identifying trees indigenous to this part of Ohio, and a wild hayride under bright moonlight. They also learned a lot from each other as they recounted ghost stories and folk tales, and dissected their various foreign languages.

The Cooperative Center for Study in Britain (CCSB) is a higher education interinstitutional effort providing joint planning, coordination, and implementation for programs of study in Britain. The Headquarters have moved this year from Western Kentucky University to Northern Kentucky University with Dr. Michael Kembara as the new director.

The CCSB will offer two summer terms in Britain in 1990. Term I is scheduled for June 7 to July 9, 1990. Eight courses in five subject fields are available in this term. Courses ranging in level from freshman to graduate are available. In addition, CCSB will offer two special courses of three week duration (nursing and education administration). These two courses are each designed for professional practitioners who are on a limited schedule.

Summer Term II is based at King's College of the University of London and will feature courses structured to take advantage of the British setting. This term is scheduled to run from July 5 to August 9, 1990. Twenty-six courses in fourteen subject fields are to be offered. Undergraduate and graduate courses are available.

This year CCSB has added special studio art program based at the Sunderland Polytechnic, Sunderland, England.

Students will have the opportunity to experience the techniques of drawing which are traditional in Britain, team taught by CCSB and Sunderland faculty. This course, which is independent of the other courses listed, is scheduled for July 5 to August 9, 1990.

In addition to the summer programs, CCSB offers the Fall 1990 Semester in Oxford, and an interim December-January program. The semester in Oxford Program is in its third year, having been successfully inaugurated in the fall Semester of 1988. Students are housed with British families in Oxford and take classes with CCSB faculty at Oxford.

The December-January Program (December 26-January 8) based in London, England offers courses in Business and Theatre. Students may earn three hours of credit by combining this study abroad program with special class sessions or independent study preceding and following the travel portion of the course.

National Honor for Two International Students

Dr. Giovanna Jackson of the Office of International Students Affairs is very pleased to announce that two of Kent State University international students were selected to participate in the International Student Leadership Workshop sponsored by the Foreign Student Service Council in Washington, D.C., which was established in 1956 in order “to promote international education, understanding and friendship among people from all parts of the globe.”

Only 20 international students throughout the United States are selected to participate in this workshop, thus it is a special honor to be one of the participants. Kent State University was represented by Hans Krabbendam from the Netherlands and Richard Mukisa from Uganda. Hans is about to graduate with an M.A. in American History while Richard is a doctoral candidate in Political Science. Hans graduated from the University of Leiden where he earned a Master's with Honors in American History. Since coming to Kent State University in 1983, Richard has earned a B.A. in Communication, an M.A. in Journalism and one in Political Science. Both are very active in the international endeavors on campus and are particularly promising leaders.
