BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Horatio Collins King was born on December 22, 1837 in Portland, Maine, to Horatio and Anne (Collins) King. Horatio King served as Postmaster General in the Cabinet of James Buchanan. Horatio Collins King was prepared at Emory and Henry College. In 1854 he commenced his education at Dickinson College, where his uncle Charles Collins was President. While at Dickinson, he was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity and the Union Philosophical Society. He earned a bachelor's degree in 1858, and would receive Phi Beta Kappa recognition following the establishment of Dickinson's chapter in the 1880s. Following his graduation, Horatio Collins King studied law with Edwin M. Stanton for two years and in 1861 moved to New York City. He was admitted to the New York State Bar that same year.

Once the nation went to war, King actively sought a commission in the Union Army and in 1862 commenced his military service. He was appointed, by then Secretary of War Edwin M. Stanton, Assistant Quartermaster of Volunteers under General Casey of the Army of the Potomac with the rank of Captain. Soon after, King was given more active duty under the command of General Sheridan as Chief Quartermaster of the First Cavalry Division of the Army of the Shenandoah. He took part in five battles following this appointment, and for gallantry at the Battle of Five Forks he was recommended for promotion by General Devin and made Brevet Colonel of Volunteers. King was honorably discharged in October 1866 with the brevets of major, lieutenant colonel and colonel.

Following his discharge from the Army, King returned to his law practice in New York City and continued in this profession until 1871, when he assumed the associate editor's position at the New York Star. Soon after, King assumed the role of publisher of the Christian Union with his close friend, Reverend Henry Ward Beecher, as editor. He also helped to edit the Christian at Work. In 1874, Horatio Collins King returned to his law practice and remained active in the profession for the remainder of his life.

King was invited to join the National Guard of New York in 1876 and was elected Major of the Thirteenth Regiment. He was appointed Judge Advocate for the Eleventh Brigade in 1880 and, in 1883, King was appointed by Governor Grover Cleveland to be Judge Advocate General, with the rank of Brigadier General, in the National Guard, State of New York. King served as Secretary of the Society of the Army of the Potomac from 1877 to 1904 and as President of the organization in 1904. He was a member of the Order of Elks, a Mason, and a charter member of the New York Commandery of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. King was also an active member of the Grand Army of the Republic, serving two years as Post Commander and one year as Department Judge Advocate General. King served for ten years as a member of the Brooklyn Board of Education and a member of the New York Monuments' Commission. King ran for Secretary of State of New York in 1895 on the Democratic ticket, but was defeated. He then ran for Congress in 1896 for the Sound Money Party, but was again defeated. When later nominated for office, King declined.

King served as a Trustee of Dickinson College from 1896 to 1918, and is perhaps best known by the college as the author of numerous school songs including Dickinson's Alma Mater, "Noble Dickinsonia." He received an Honorary Doctor of Laws degree from Allegheny College in 1897, and in the same year, Horatio Collins King was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for "conspicuous gallantry" while serving with the Cavalry in March of 1865 near Dinwiddie Court House.

King married Emma Carter Stebbins, daughter of New York merchant Russell Stebbins, in October 1862. Following Emma's death and the conclusion of the Civil War, he married Esther Augusta Howard (1845-1925), the daughter of Captain John T. Howard with whom King had served during the War, in June 1866. Horatio Collins and Esther A. Howard had nine children together and resided in Brooklyn, New York, for much of their life. King died on November 15, 1918 in Brooklyn, New York.

COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The Horatio Collins King Collection is housed in five document boxes, oversized folders, and one oversized box and is divided into six basic categories: Correspondence, Journals, Literary Productions, Military Documents, Newspaper Clippings, and Miscellaneous materials. A descendant of Horatio Collins King, Edward Gray donated this collection to Dickinson College in 1957.

The Correspondence section largely contains letters sent and received by Horatio C. King and his wife Esther A. Howard. These letters are organized according to whether the letters were sent or received, and then arranged chronologically. Additional correspondence not directly related to King or his wife are arranged at the end of the category as miscellaneous correspondence, and are listed alphabetically by author, and thereafter chronologically. A sizeable number of the letters are between Henry Ward Beecher and Horatio C. King. Other notable correspondents include Grover Cleveland, Ulysses S. Grant, Theodore Roosevelt, William Tecumseh Sherman, Edwin M. Stanton, and Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The Journals section of the collection includes four diaries kept by Horatio C. King, arranged chronologically. Most notable among these is the diary from King's student days at Dickinson College between 1854 and 1858. A full typescript of this diary follows the original in the collection. This student diary chronicles, often in great detail, academics, professors, social organizations such as the Union Philosophical Society and Phi Kappa Sigma, student life, campus buildings, the College's relationship with Carlisle, Carlisle businesses and general popular culture. King also kept a journal from 1858 to 1859 while traveling through New England, Canada and New York. (He met and fell in love with his first wife, Emma Stebbins, during this period.) King discusses social life and studying law with Edwin Stanton in New York City throughout this diary. King's third diary includes his last year of service with the Union Army from 1864 to 1865. King diary between 1865 and 1869 details his life while practicing law in New York City. During these years, he married Esther A. Howard and socialized with Harriet Beecher Stowe.

The Literary Productions section is organized alphabetically by author of individual pieces of writing, and included are such things as speeches, printed essays, poems, and songs. Horatio C. King's writings comprise the bulk of this section. Included are two bound volumes of addresses by King. Various writings of Henry Ward Beecher, Newell Dwight Hillis, Esther A. Howard, William F. Kettle and Horatio King are also represented. Due to their size, a few printed items by Horatio C. King are housed with the oversized materials, including one article about Gettysburg and one about Ulysses S. Grant.

Horatio Collins King's papers from his term as a Union Army soldier and his term as an officer in the National Guard of the State of New York are contained in the section titled Military Documents. These documents are arranged chronologically. Most of the papers in this section consist of duty orders and letters sent to King by his superiors. Of note among these papers are letters with regard to King's receipt of the Congressional Medal of Honor and his commission as Assistant Quartermaster of Volunteers, signed by Abraham Lincoln and Edwin M. Stanton. (The latter is housed among the oversized materials.) Horatio Collins King served as Assistant Quartermaster of Volunteers; Colonel of Volunteers; Brevet Lieutenant Colonel and Major in the Union Army; and Colonel, Major, and Brigadier General in the National Guard of New York.

The Newspaper Clippings are arranged chronologically. The clippings appear to have been collected by King and his family members. This section features an article from the Christian At Work, writings on the Civil War, an obituary for Horatio Collins King, several illustrations, and other various items. Among the oversized materials is a scrapbook with 158 pages of newspaper clippings dating from 1858 to 1881. The pages of this album have been photocopied for sake of preservation. This album includes clippings of Horatio King, Plymouth Church in Brooklyn, New York, Horatio Collins King's hymns, and biographies of King.

The Miscellaneous section contains various invitations, certificates, souvenirs, and programs. This section includes materials relating to Henry Ward Beecher, Esther A. Howard, Ethel King, Horatio C. King and Emma Stebbins. Items of note include King's souvenir from Grover Cleveland's Presidential Inaugural Ball (March, 1885), a copyright certificate for a song, the certificate for King's admission to the New York State Bar, biographical notes from The Cyclopedia of American Biography, memorials for King after his death, and a certificate of King's marriage to Esther A. Howard along with a "Bridal Souvenir."

Fourteen folders and one box of oversized materials, designated OC 1999.9, include newspaper clippings, a few military documents, some printed writings, and miscellaneous materials. These oversized items are described briefly above under the appropriate section under which they are listed.

Throughout the collection inventory, Horatio Collins King is listed as Horatio C. King.
