College To Celebrate 175th Anniversary In April

PLANS are being completed for the celebration of the 175th Anniversary of the founding of the College and the launching of the Ten Year Development Program authorized by the Board of Trustees, in elaborate ceremonies and a convocation to be held during four-day sessions April 22-25. The complete program will be mailed to all alumni in March. Various committees of faculty, trustees, alumni and students are at work planning the program and promoting attendance.

Outstanding men from various walks of life are being invited to participate in the several meetings. The sessions of celebration will present the relationship of the College to Government, Business and Industry, Science, the Arts, and the Church. In addition to the principal speaker for each topic, there will be a panel composed of alumni, men and women from other colleges, and members of the student body.

Opening with an evening session on Thursday, April 22, the theme of the celebration will be "Toward A Richer American Culture." The ceremonies will close on Sunday afternoon, April 25, in a convocation at which honorary degrees will be conferred. Dean Luther A. Weigle, graduate of Conway Hall, and dean of the Yale Divinity School since 1926, will be the speaker at these exercises.

The principal speaker at the opening session in the Alumni Gymnasium on the evening of April 22 will be the Honorable Tom C. Clark, of Dallas, Tex., attorney general of the United States since June 1945.

There will be morning, afternoon and evening sessions on Friday, April 23, devoted to Business and Industry, Science and the Arts. The Honorable Wayne Chatfield Taylor, former Under-Secretary of Commerce and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, now associated with the committee on the Marshall Plan as advisor to the Secretary of State, will speak at the session on Business and Industry. Dr. Hugh Scott Taylor, dean of the Graduate School at Princeton University and chairman of the department of chemistry will speak to the session on science, and Dr. Harlow L. Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatory, will also address that session. Panel speakers for that meeting include Rear Admiral William M. Thomas and Rear Admiral Theodore C. Lonquest, assistant chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics for Research and Engineering. Other speakers have been invited and their names will be announced in the program to be mailed in March.

Saturday, April 24, will be an Alumni Day with an Alumni College in the morning, a luncheon in the Alumni Gymnasium at noon, a baseball game in the afternoon, and a dance at night.

Boyd Lee Spahr, '00, president of the Board of Trustees, is serving as chairman of the Executive Committee of the Ten Year Development Program and the 175th Anniversary is the first step in the launching of that plan. Frank E. Masland, Jr., '18, is vice-chairman. The other members of the Executive Committee are Dr. Harry F. Babcock, '47h; Bishop Fred P. Corson, '17; S. M. Drayer, '02; William L. Eshelman, '15; Bishop Charles W. Flint; Paul L. Hutchison, '18; Sidney D. Kline, '24; Dr. Roy W. Mohler, '17; Dr. Andrew H. Phelps, '45h; Dr. William C. Sampson, '02; and Clinton DeWitt VanSiclen, '14. Presi-

Commencement Dates

The dates for the 1948 Commencement are Friday, Saturday and Sunday, June 4, 5 and 6.

Saturday, June 5, will be Alumni Day with the Alumni Luncheon at noon.

Baccalaureate Services will be held Sunday morning, June 6 and the Commencement Exercises in the afternoon. Class Reunion dinners will be held at noon on that day.

dent William W. Edel and Vice-President Gilbert Malcolm are members of the committee ex officio.

Administrative offices of the Ten Year Development Program have been opened in the McCauley Room on the first floor of Old West with Harold A. Lumsden, of the firm of Marts & Lundy of New York, as resident director. Within a short time, announcement will be made of the appointment of a director of the Development Program.

The Anniversary celebration will mark the conveying of a plot of ground in the deed of Thomas and John Penn to nine trustees in March 1773 for the purpose of establishing a grammar school, which was the forerunner of Dickinson College. For the next 10 years, these trustees struggled to found a college and on September 9, 1783, they received the charter for Dickinson College from the Pennsylvania legislature. Those 10 years, during which Dickinson was being created, were also the creative years of the United States in America. The Ten Year Development Program will liken the next 10 years between 1948 and 1958 to those original creative years, and hold before the Trustees, faculty, alumni and friends a challenge to strengthen the College, during the coming 10 year period in which a new world will be struggling to be created.

Present Missionary A New Key

Rev. M. Mosser Smyser, '00, whose Phi Beta Kappa key was taken from him during the war by the Japanese government for its gold, was formally presented with a new key to replace it in ceremonies held in the College chapel on February 24.

Mr. Smyser, who has been an independent Christian missionary in Japan for more than 40 years, reached the United States in December after an absence of 14 years. It was his third visit home since he went to Japan, and he expects it will be his last, for when he returns to Japan in April, he intends to spend the remaining years of his life there. He hopes to raise enough money to buy a jeep to use in his religious work in rural Japan.

It was during the Japanese government's wartime calling in of all gold that Mr. Smyser lost his Phi Beta Kappa key. He also turned in his gold watch, but this was returned to him. During the war, he was interned in his own house, but was otherwise unmolested.

Mr. Smyser spoke before the student body at the time his new Phi Beta Kappa key was presented. While in this country, he has been staying with Rev. Dr. Harry B. Stock, '91, pastor emeritus of St. Paul's Lutheran Church in Carlisle.

Students Raise "Campus Chest"

That Dickinson undergraduates recognize their community obligation is evidenced by organization of a "Campus Chest" campaign to be held early this year under the sponsorship of the Student Senate. Allotments include items ranging from $200 to $1,000 for the Carlisle Community Chest, American Red Cross, Salvation Army, World Student Service Fund, Cumberland County Tuberculosis & Health Society and the Save-a-Child Organization. Organizations represented in the Senate pass on the appeals.

To Receive Honorary Degrees At April Convocation

WATSON B. MILLER

WILLIAM S. CARLSON

NINE persons, three of them alumni, will receive honorary degrees from the College at the special convocation on April 25 which will bring to a close the four-day observance of the 175th anniversary of the College.

Two persons will be awarded the degree of doctor of laws, two the doctor of literature, three the doctor of science, one the doctor of sacred theology, and one the degree of doctor of divinity.

Watson B. Miller, commissioner of immigration of the United States since last August, is one of the two men who will receive the degree of doctor of laws. Prior to his appointment as commissioner of immigration, Mr. Miller headed the Federal Security Administration. Previously he had served as the American Legion's national director of rehabilitation. He served in World War I as a captain of artillery.

Dr. William S. Carlson, president of the University of Delaware since 1946, will also be a recipient of the doctor of laws degree. A graduate of the University of Michigan, where he also did his graduate work. Dr. Carlson taught geology at the Universities of Michigan and Minnesota and was professor of geology and dean at Minnesota when he was elected president of Delaware.

During the war he served with the Army Air Forces as a specialist in problems of arctic, desert, and tropical areas. He was leader of the University of Michigan's fourth Greenland Expedition in 1930, and is the author of a book entitled Greenland Lies North. He is a member of numerous educational and scientific bodies, including Sigma Xi and the Explorers Club of New York.

A degree of doctor of literature will be conferred on Colonel Edgar Erskine Hume, of the General Staff Corps of the United States Army. A graduate of Centre College in Kentucky, Colonel Hume was graduated from the Johns Hopkins University as a doctor in medicine and later as a doctor in public health. The Universities of Rome and Munich have also awarded him the degree of M.D., while more than a score of American and foreign universities have given him their honorary degrees. At present Colonel Hume is in charge of educational, religious, and cultural affairs for all American occupied territories, including Germany, Austria, Japan, and Korea.

Colonel Hume, who was commandant of Carlisle Barracks at the outbreak of World War II, has had a distinguished career in scholarship as well as in the army. He is the author of more than a score of volumes and more than 200 articles, ranging from studies of the Knights Hospitaller of the Middle Ages and of army medical men who contributed to ornithology to accounts of the medals conferred on army medical men, a history of the American Association of Military Surgeons, and an edition of George Washington's correspondence relating to the Order of the Cincinnati.

Dr. Frank Spencer Mead, editor of the Christian Herald, will also receive the degree of doctor of literature. A graduate of the University of Denver and of Union Theological Seminary, Dr. Mead served in several churches and then in 1934 became editor of the Homiletic Review. Later he was named editor of the Christian Herald, which has the largest circulation of any Protestant paper in the country. He is the author of several books, including The March of Eleven Men and The Ten Decisive Battles of Christianity.

Dr. Constantine P. Faller, specialist in internal medicine and cardiology of Harrisburg, Pa., is one of three who will be awarded the degree of doctor of science. Dr. Faller was graduated in 1912 from Conway Hall and is at present president of the Conway Hall Alumni Association. He was graduated from the Medical and Chirurgical College of Philadelphia in 1916. He has served as president of the Dauphin County Medical Association and of the Harrisburg Academy of Medicine, whose Siebert Prize he was awarded some years ago.

Dr. Faller is now chairman of the medical directorate, cardiologist, and chief of medical service of the Harrisburg Hospital. He is a fellow and life fellow of the American College of physicians, a diplomat of the American Board of Internal Medicine, a fellow of the American Heart Association, and a fellow of the American Diabetes Association.

Rev. Dr. Elbert Moore Conover, '08, specialist in church architecture, will also receive the degree of doctor of science. After leaving Dickinson, he entered Drew Theological Seminary, graduating in 1913. Now a lecturer on religious art and church administration and a contributor to religious and architectural journals, Dr. Conover in 1926 and in 1932 went to Europe where privately he studied church architecture. Two years after his second visit he was named director of the Interdenominational Bureau of Church Architecture and since 1940 he has been president of the North American Conference on Church Architecture.

Widely considered as one of the foremost general authorities on church architecture in this country, Dr. Conover is the author of several books on that subject, notably Building the House of God, a handbook many theological seminaries require their students to read.

The third science degree will be conferred on Dr. Charles Clinton Bramble, '12, since 1917 professor of mathematics and mechanics in the post-graduate school of the United States Naval Academy. Dr. Bramble was graduated from Dickinson with Phi Beta Kappa honors; he received his doctorate from the Johns Hopkins University in 1917. Prior to going to the Naval Academy he taught mathematics at Montclair Academy and at Bryn Mawr College.

He is a member of the Mathematical Association of America and the American Mathematical Association. His specialty is ballistics, and at present Dr. Bramble is ballistics expert and mathematician at the Naval Proving Ground at Dahlgren, Va.

Rev. Charles Leslie Glenn, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., will receive the degree of doctor of sacred theology. Mr. Glenn was graduated from the Stevens Institute of Technology in 1921 but after a brief service as a construction engineer and an instructor in mathematics, he entered the Virginia Theological Seminary, from which he was graduated in 1926. Until 1930 he was secretary for college work for the National Council of the Episcopal Church, and from 1930 to 1940 he was rector of Christ Church, Cambridge, Mass. He went to Washington in 1940. During the war he was chaplain at the Navy's Midshipmen's School at Columbia University, and in the South Pacific. He is a member of the board of trustees of Berea College and vice-president of the Church Council for College Work of the Episcopal Church.

The degree of doctor of divinity will be conferred on Rev. Everett F. Hallock, '30, since 1940 pastor of the Methodist Church in Rutherford, N. J. Mr. Hallock was graduated from Drew Theological Seminary in 1933 and has served churches in Maplewood and Orange, N. J. He is a past president of the Essex County Council of the Religious Education Society and past president of the Newark Conference Board of Education and of the Conference Board of Ministerial Training. He is president of the Dickinson Alumni Club of Northern New Jersey.

Gives Editorial Advice

William H. Cheesman, '04, a civil service employee of the federal government since 1905 and technical editor for the Bureau of Plant Industry, Soils, and Agricultural Engineering in the Department of Agriculture, was cited last fall for superior accomplishment in his work.

Modern Edition on Rush

The first modern edition of some of the writings of Dr. Benjamin Rush, founder of the College, edited by Dagobert D. Runes, has been published by the Philosophical Library of New York.

A tireless correspondent and pamphleteer, Dr. Rush wrote countless letters and tracts on temperance, world peace, education of women, the usefulness of Latin and Greek, and physical exercise which are sprightly and interesting reading even after the lapse of a century and a half.

Mr. Runes has gathered many of the more significant of these writings together to form the present volume. One of the reviews of the book, published in the Hartford, Conn., Courant, was written by Richard N. Boulton, '37.

New South College is Nearing Completion

A new South College has risen on the campus not far from the site of Old South College which was razed 20 years ago to make way for the Alumni Gymnasium.

The new building is a combination of classroom and student recreation building. It is two stories high. On the second floor are four well-lighted medium-sized classrooms, with four offices for faculty members. The first floor will be used as a recreation hall and, if necessary, as a large lecture room.

The building was obtained from the Federal Works Agency through the United States Office of Education. It was originally an administration building at the Susquehanna Ordnance Depot near Williamsport. The building and its transportation to Carlisle cost the College nothing. Costs of reconstruction, including the installation of lighting, plumbing, and classroom equipment, will come to about $35,000. It has been estimated that the building will be worth $90,000.

With the building the College obtained 26 tarpaulins. These have been hung over the scaffolding and have permitted work on the building to continue in all weathers. In addition, the building has been heated, so that work on the interior has not been interrupted by the cold weather of the last two months. The second floor will be ready for occupancy early next month. The first floor is expected to be completed by the end of March, and the stone-work in which the building is being encased will be completed by mid-April.

The architect's drawing which was published in the January Bulletin showed how the building will conform to the Federal style of West College, Bosler Hall, and the Alumni Gymnasium. When costs are lower a slate roof will be substituted for the asphalt shingle roof now being laid. A cupola, called for in the architect's drawing, will be added at some later time.

Although considered a "temporary" structure by the Army, the building has been rebuilt at Dickinson to last for a number of years. For all purposes it is a "permanent" addition to the campus. Raymond Mowery, Carlisle contractor, has done the work on building, under the direction of George Shuman, Jr., '37, superintendent of grounds and buildings.

New Student Worship Center

A worship center for the use of students of all faiths will be installed in Old West. Authorization to recondition and refurnish a room on the ground floor of the historic old building has been made by the Board of Trustees. When the remodeling has been completed, the small chapel will be used for individual worship and meditation, religious services of small student groups, and meetings of college organizations devoted to religious and social service activities.

Fifty Printers Marks

Dr. Edwin E. Willoughby, '22, chief bibliographer of the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, is the author of a small, handsomely printed book entitled Fifty Printers Marks, just published by the Book Arts Club of the University of California at Berkeley.

A printers mark is a kind of trademark which printers attach to their work to identify it as theirs. For many years The Library Quarterly has printed on its front cover reproductions of these old printers marks and since 1932 Dr. Willoughby has written the brief description that accompanies each one.

In this book, Dr. Willoughby has selected 50 of the most interesting or striking printers marks and has reprinted, with revisions, the accompanying notes. He has added a brief account of the origin of printers marks. All the marks are from the fifteenth, sixteenth, and early seventeenth centuries.

To Receive Honorary Degree

RAYMOND DUDLEY

Rev. Raymond Dudley, pastor of the Durham Street Methodist Church of Christchurch, New Zealand, and a distinguished representative of the Methodist Church in New Zealand, will receive the degree of doctor of divinity from the College at a special convocation to be held this spring.

The degree has been voted by the faculty and directed to be conferred by the Board of Trustees, but the date of the actual conferring has not been fixed. Mr. Dudley will be in Carlisle in April or May, en route to England and Europe, where he will be attending the meetings of the World Council of Churches.

Mr. Dudley was born of Hindu parents in the Fijian Islands. On the death of his parents he was raised as a ward of the Methodist Mission of Fiji. Because of his unusual intellectual promise, he was sent to school in New Zealand, where he was graduated with honors from the University of New Zealand at Wellington, and where he subsequently received his master's degree. He is also a graduate of the Methodist Theological College at Auckland, N. Z.

Heads Relief Agency

Newton E. Randolph, '24, who was European director for CARE, is now director of a new relief agency called Save A Friend in Europe, or SAFE, with headquarters at 40 Exchange Place, New York.

The principle of SAFE is speed of delivery. American purchasers of food parcels receive a voucher which they send by air mail to the beneficiary. The beneficiary then presents this voucher at any one of a large number of distribution points abroad and receives his package of food. The whole operation may require only a week.

For the past two years Randolph had been with CARE in Europe. He began as head of the mission to Belgium, opening up operations in that country. Subsequently he moved to Bremen to organize the distribution of parcels in the British Zone and American enclave. Subsequently he was assigned all of Germany, which included the four zones in Berlin. Germany accounted for about 70% of CARE's work. Five hundred warehouses were established, and these were controlled from four central offices.

A year ago Randolph was made European director for all CARE's activities, and made his headquarters in Switzerland, which is centrally located and has good air communication to all the 17 countries covered by CARE's operations.

The SAFE packages are now stockpiled in Germany and Austria, and negotiations are under way to enable the agency to extend its operations to include England, France, Italy, and the Russian Zone of Germany. Each package contains 21 pounds of food, with a caloric value in excess of 40,000, and costs ten dollars.

Theological Society President

Edgar C. Hersh, '49, of Allentown, Pa., is the new president of the Dickinson College Theological Society. He was literary editor of The Microcosm.

A Candidate for Vice President of the United States

DALE H. LEARN, '20, '22L, prominent Methodist layman, realtor, and insurance man of East Stroudsburg, is the nominee of the Prohibition Party for Vice-President of the United States in the 1948 elections.

For some years Mr. Learn has been active in temperance affairs and is at present secretary of the Board of Temperance of the Philadelphia Conference of the Methodist Church. He was also chairman of the Temperance Committee of the 1944 Northeastern Jurisdictional Conference. He is the lay leader in the North District of the Philadelphia Conference and will be a delegate to the 1948 Jurisdictional Conference and a reserve delegate to the 1948 General Conference. He is a member of the Philadelphia Conference Board of Evangelism and of the Peace Commission.

He was born December 8, 1897, and raised on a Pocono Mountain farm, and he now lives on his own farm near East Stroudsburg. He is married and has three children. Prior to entering the College he graduated from East Stroudsburg Normal School. He received his A.B. degree from the College upon his graduation in 1920 and an A.M. in 1922 when he graduated with an LL.B. degree from the Dickinson School of Law.

For 24 years he has been an active realtor and he also handles all types of fire and casualty insurance. He has served as president of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association, as trustee of East Stroudsburg Teachers College, as president of the Monroe County School Directors Association, as secretary of the East Stroudsburg Borough, and executive secretary of the Monroe County Chamber of Commerce.

At the present time he is director of the Pennsylvania Real Estate Association, Councilor of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce, president of the Monroe County Sunday School

Association, president of the Alumni Association of the State Teachers College, secretary-treasurer of the Monroe County Real Estate Board, vice president of the Monroe County Insurance Association, and president of the Lehigh Valley Laymen's Association.

At the College he became a member of Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity. He is also a Mason and a member of Keystone Consistory; P.O.S. of A.; Kiwanis; the Grange and a director of the Monroe County Chamber of Commerce.

While a student of the College he was president of the Y.M.C.A., president of the Dramatic Club, president of the Belles Lettres Literary Society, and president of the Student Volunteers. He also served on the Dickinsonian Board and on the Microcosm and sang with the Glee Club.

Serves Entomological Society

Dr. Milton W. Eddy, head of the department of biology, has been elected vice-chairman of the Entomological Society of Pennsylvania, of which he has been a member for the past 22 years.

Spotlight Turns on Department of History

TO many of the older alumni the history department of Dickinson College is Leon Prince painting unforgettable word pictures of the great ones of the American democracy. To many of the younger alumni it is those revealing and sometimes hilarious anecdotes by which Professor Stough makes Franklin and Jackson and long Tom Jefferson come alive. But to everyone, young and old alike, for more than 30 years history at Dickinson College has been inseparably associated with Professor Wing's History A, later History 1-2, forever Freshman History.

History at Dickinson has changed and grown in 30 years, but Freshman History, with its maps, quizzes, and three-by-five cards is still there. Once it was required of all students; it is still required of all majors and minors in the department. The description of the course which first appeared in College catalogues 25 years ago is an understatement (as what freshman completing one of those fantastic term papers on the philosophy of Kant, the personality of Hitler, or Babylonian business methods, won't recognize!), but is valid nonetheless: "Less attention is given to the political and military history than to the economic, social, artistic, and intellectual phases of civilian life. The course aims to give some acquaintance with proper methods of historical study as well as with the facts of history."

Methods and facts, indeed! These are the very heart of the course; and if the freshman is more than a little bewildered when he is directed to answer a question on Greek democracy after consulting the World Almanac and a photograph of the statue of Venus de Milo, he comes ultimately on reflection to see what it was all about. He may come to see that history is indeed everything that men have thought and done and that there is nothing that is not grist to the historian's mill. There can hardly be an aspect of history or a type of historical source treated in an advanced course that was not mentioned in Freshman History, unless it be the philosophy of history. For Freshman History is facts—and no nonsense.

Whatever else the course does, students are inclined to feel, it gets them into the library; and bringing one student and one book together for fifteen minutes at a time has been reckoned the whole purpose of a college. Freshman scour the library searching "corroboration" for someone's statement that in Edinburgh the tenements were ten stories high and the castles one. Days before the Freshman Essay is due the reference room is fairly torn apart by students searching the biographical dictionaries for data on some forgotten nineteenth century scholar, better to judge what confidence to place in his book. They do use the library.

Using the library, in fact, lies at the heart of good history teaching. More than this, the library is the heart of college instruction. No textbook or lecture, however full, can provide the knowledge or provoke the emotions which great books, especially contemporary works, can do. Twenty-five years ago it was chiefly Professor Wing's students in Freshman History that used the library. "Upperclassmen," a senior once seriously assured a new instructor, "upperclassmen should not be expected to use the library."

Into this atmosphere, in 1925, fresh from his graduate studies at the University of Pennsylvania, came Mulford Stough. He brought with him from the University—striking illustration of how the great schools fertilize the smaller—the idea of weekly collateral reading assignments in advanced courses, the idea of term papers, the system of reserve books in the library. On the first day he met his classes he announced their assignments for the next week. There was a near riot. Someone sent him a warning note printed in red ink: "If you value your popularity, you will let up on those assignments." Stough read the note to all his classes and went on with the assignments as planned. As much as any single person, it was Professor Stough who put the library to work as an integral part of the history courses and, ultimately, of all the other arts courses in the College.

More than this, Stough had a large hand in building the library when it began to grow after Miss May Morris' coming in 1927. There were few books in American history, almost none of modern date. When he wanted to assign work to his classes, he had to borrow sometimes a hundred books at a time from the State Library at Harrisburg. But year after year, his wise selections and Miss Morris' careful buying put more history on the shelves. In the last year Stough has not had to borrow a single volume. The Library has them all.

Before Professor Stough joined the faculty in 1925, Leon Prince taught all the history except Freshman History, which Dr. Wing, who was professor of Greek, handled. Prince taught Civilization in Europe, which his father had taught before him, using as a text Guizot's lectures originally delivered at the Sorbonne in 1828; he also taught modern European history, English history, American history, and his own special course, inspired by the American imperialism of his youth, "Nations of the South and East." Professor Stough took over the European, English, and early American history; later he added his course in the British Empire. Between 1931 and 1935 Robert L. Brunhouse, '30, now of Drew University, taught American colonial history and European history in the period of the Renaissance and Reformation. A few years after Professor Prince's death in 1937, Dr. Wing was made professor of history and head of the department. He continued to teach Freshman History, now extended to a three-hour course for the year and covering everything, as Dr. Wing himself once jokingly observed, "from the amoeba to the Marshall Plan." He taught also courses in Hellenistic and Roman history, and, after 1941, a course in World War II. Dr. Bell joined the department in 1941; after the war, in 1946, three more men were added, so that now the department has six full-time men.

These six men represent a wide variety of training, experience and points of view. There is no single pattern in the Dickinson history department. Dr. Wing and Mr. Smith are Harvard undergraduates, and Professor Kellogg did graduate work at Harvard. Professor Pflaum did undergraduate work at the University of Pennsylvania, and there Pflaum, Stough, and Bell all did graduate work. Stough was graduated from Washington and Lee College in Virginia; Kellogg, from Bard College of Columbia University; and Bell is a Dickinsonian of the class of 1935. Professor Wing received his doctorate from Wisconsin; Smith and Kellogg are working for theirs at Johns Hopkins. And during the war Smith studied at Yale and Michigan.

In background, too, the members of the department follow no pattern. Although four have been teachers all their lives, Professor Stough was in business with his father, manufacturing buggies at Shippensburg, Pa., until the horseless carriage closed the buggy factories. Then he was an orchardist before, a mature man of 35, he dropped business and returned to his undergraduate love of history. Kellogg went from undergraduate school to Harvard, where he took his master's degree in history, then studied theology, and for eight years was a rector of Episcopalian churches in New York and Washington. In 1944 he returned to teaching as assistant headmaster and teacher of history at St. Peter's Preparatory School at Peekskill, N. Y., from which he came to Dickinson two years later.

Nor is there much similarity in their points of view or methods of teaching history. Professor Wing very correctly insists that no generalizations in history are valid unless based on facts; and his courses are overflowing with names, dates, places, facts, facts, and facts. Smith and Bell, on the other hand, equally correctly, hold that facts are like beads, which are useful only if strung together on some sort of thread, even if the thread later proves weak and falls apart. Professor Stough is a reservoir of odd bits of information which defy cataloguing, but prove better than a thousand pages of philosophy do, that men determine what happens in history; and so Professor Stough's classes are filled with aching teeth and missed trains and unhappy marriages which, through a chain of circumstances, like the nail and the horse and the rider in Poor Richard's verse, brought about the loss of battles and overthrow of empires. Pflaum talks biography and Kellogg never fails to tie history firmly down to the present. When, for example, a local criminal of some notoriety was arraigned the other day before the local squire, Kellogg had a point of departure ready-made for English history class to lecture on the eighteenth century squirearchy of England, the J. P.'s and knights of the shire who were the roast beef and plum pudding of Old England.

In one thing only, it seems, are the members of the history department reasonably alike. None of them has a hobby, certainly not a hobby that is at all different from the work they earn their living by. Pflaum enjoys tennis and is an inveterate traveller, who thought nothing last year of flying to Costa Rica to visit a friend during the Christmas recess. Stough is a canny son of old Izaak Walton and students know from long experience that they must not expect a lecture from Stough the first day of fishing season. But not one of them goes in for breeding dogs, or builds model ships in empty bottles, or carpenters, or even gardens. Each one of the department was asked this question, and each made a mumbling, half-apologetic answer, that he guessed he liked reading best, or that research was his chief joy. Smith ventured to say he was interested in music and American humor, and Bell collects books on George Washington and is a devotee of Sherlock Holmes; but, in general, if any of them has any avocation, it is like the postman's who went walking on his day off. What all this means, if hobbling is evidence of maladjustment to the day's work, is that the members of the history department at Dickinson are the happiest, best integrated, and least neurotic men anywhere to be found.

All belong to the usual professional societies, the American, Pennsylvania, and similar historical associations. Professor Stough has been a member of the council of the Pennsylvania Historical Association for many years; Professor Wing is a member of the board of editors of Social Studies magazine; and Professor Bell is a member of the committee of the American Association of the History of Medicine which prepares an annual bibliography of American medical history. Before he was engrossed by a host of administrative tasks, Professor Wing wrote several scholarly articles on aspects of Greek history. Professor Stough was a contributor to the Dictionary of American History and is the author of an account of the yellow fever in Philadelphia in 1793 and of book reviews in Pennsylvania historical publications. Bell is the author of a number of articles, chiefly on eighteenth century cultural and medical history, and is now writing a biography of Dr.

John Morgan, who founded the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and was director of medical services in Washington's army.

Presiding over this assortment of individualists—"characters" one of the students has called them—is Herbert Wing, Jr., not an old man, yet by virtue of 33 years of service, already the senior member of the faculty. He is a New Englander, a New Bedford man, son of a man who took to farming when the whaling ships began to rot at their wharfs. He went through Harvard in three years, graduating in 1909, taught in a high school in Missouri for a year, then entered the University of Wisconsin as a student in classics and ancient history under Westermann. He was an assistant in European history for three years at Wisconsin, where he received both his master's and doctor's degrees, the latter in 1915. In 1913-14 he studied at the American School of Classical Studies at Athens, an experience he puts to good use when, lecturing on the buildings of the Acropolis, he makes scale drawings. He came to Dickinson in 1915 as associate professor of Greek language and literature; five years later he was advanced to full professorship.

In addition to his teaching, Professor Wing has done such an unusual amount of administrative work as to make one believe that no faculty member has ever given so much of his time and thought to non-academic matters. Until a few years ago he was coach of the debating team; for 27 years he managed the College bookstore; for two years he was secretary of the faculty; since 1944 he has been dean of the junior class. He has been a member of the Board of Athletic Control; he was secretary of the Committee of Eight, which drew up the curriculum for Dickinson College which was interrupted by the war; he was assistant director of the 32nd College Training Detachment (Air Crew), known locally as "the War College." There must be few faculty committees of any importance appointed in the last 25 years on which Dr. Wing has not served a greater or less length of time.

Sophomores who take Professor Stough's course in American History often bestow on it the highest encomium they know: "Why, it doesn't seem like a history course at all!" For Stough has the happy faculty of all good teachers of making his subject seem alive and of presenting curious and understandable facts by which to measure the great events and personages of the past. Already a Stough legend is forming. "Now if it rains tomorrow," he will draw to a class, "we might just have a little quiz." He will ask his classes why the French didn't attack Albany in the French and Indian War, reject every answer his students can think of, and make them worry the library and his colleagues in the department for three days on end until they find the single, determining, obvious fact he wants. But his stories are incomparable. Told by another, they are dull and flat; in Stough's genuine drawl, they stand squarely in the tradition of American humor.

Professor Stough was graduated from Washington and Lee in 1911. He received his master's degree in history from the University of Pennsylvania in 1925 and has been at Dickinson ever since that time. His master at the University was St. George L. Sioussat, now holder of the chair of American history and head of the division of manuscripts of the Library of Congress; and Stough's general course in American history owes not a little to Sioussat's great course on Westward Expansion. In addition to three sections of American history, Stough teaches one of modern European history and another in the history of the British Empire.

Another section of modern European history as well as some of the English and American history is taught by Professor Pflaum. John Pflaum came to Dickinson in 1946, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, where he continued his graduate work under Professor William E. Lingelbach, now librarian of the American Philosophical Society. Almost without interruption, from 1926 to 1942 Pflaum was an instructor in history either at Temple University or at Pennsylvania. With the outbreak of war, he was connected with the Signal Corps training program, supervising trainees at several eastern colleges including Princeton, Rutgers, and Lafayette. From 1943 to 1946 he taught at Western Reserve Academy in Ohio.

As might be expected of a student of Lingelbach's, Pflaum is interested in European history, especially in the background of the first World War. At least two summers were spent in research on this subject in the British Museum. There is never a dull moment in Pflaum's class, nor is there ever a quiet one, for Pflaum's lecture voice is a great booming drum, and students in nearby classrooms claim that when Pflaum is lecturing, they get two courses for the price of one.

Perhaps Joseph Smith has the most unusual interests of all the department; certainly his graduate studies promise to take him into fields scarcely cultivated as yet by many college teachers. As an army trainee, Smith spent 11 months at Yale and another year at Michigan with a selected group of specialists studying Japanese, Japan, and the Pacific area. Now enrolled in the Walter Hines Page School of Diplomacy of Johns Hopkins University, working on Korean materials, he is studying the Korean nationalist movement since 1910. He teaches the course in the Far East, as well as work in American history.

At Harvard, where he was graduated in 1943, with honors in history for a paper on Andrew Jackson's concept of the presidency, Smith held a succession of three competitive scholarships in as many years. He was assistant editorial chairman of the Harvard Crimson, a post President Conant of Harvard once held, one of the six men who ran the Crimson his year. For his work on the Crimson and in the Harvard Radio Workshop and for his interest in literary matters, he was made a member of Harvard's honorary Signet Society.

Kellogg is working at Johns Hopkins now too, studying Southern history since Reconstruction with Vann Woodward. His graduate work was begun at Harvard, where he worked with the elder Schlesinger and, more especially, in diplomatic history with James Phinney Baxter III. But his excursion into the ministry brought him an unusual experience. While a divinity student at the General Theological Seminary, he held scholarships from the Graduate School of Applied Religion and the Council for Clinical Training of Theological Students for the study of psychiatry and personality problems. One summer he worked in the mental ward of the Cincinnati General Hospital, the next in the Worcester, Mass., State Hospital for Mental Diseases. For a year he was assistant rector, then for six years rector of the Church of the Mediator in New York, and in 1943 went to Washington, D. C., as rector of St. Stephen Incarnation. In 1944 he resumed teaching, at St. Peter's Academy at Peekskill on the Hudson.

At Dickinson Professor Kellogg teaches one section of the general course in American history, one section of English history, and the course in Russian history.

Held Emeritus Rank

The December number of the DICKINSON ALUMNUS reported that Professor F. E. Craver had been named professor emeritus of physical education and Professor Charles L. Swift, associate professor emeritus of English. The article also stated that in recent years only Dr. Bradford O. McIntire, who retired in 1929, was made professor emeritus. The article should also have reported that the Trustees in June 1939 conferred the rank of professor emeritus upon Professor Gaylard H. Patterson, who retired that year after 25 years of active teaching service in the College.

Another Gold Star

Donald E. Parker, Jr., '43, was killed in action in Belgium on December 29, 1944, according to word recently received from his family and from Wesleyan University, to which Parker transferred.

He was a tank commander, in the 19th Tank Battalion, Ninth Armored Division, attached to the First Army. Inducted into the army in November, 1942, Parker was sent to Fort Riley, Kans., for training, then to Needles, Calif., and finally to Camp Polk, La. He was promoted to private, first class, then to corporal, and finally in August, just before going overseas, to sergeant. He received the Purple Heart Medal posthumously.

Born at New Haven, Conn., on June 27, 1920, he prepared for college at Lyman Hall High School, entered Dickinson, but withdrew to enter Wesleyan University, of which his father was a graduate. He was graduated from Wesleyan in 1942 and worked for a short time as an accountant in the mechanical department of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad at New Haven. He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald E. Parker, and a sister, of Wallingford, Conn.

New I. R. C. Advisor

Dr. William Lonsdale Tayler, head of the Political Science Department, has been appointed advisor of the International Relations Club by President Edel. He succeeds Dr. William D. Gould, professor of philosophy and religion, who resigned after serving ten years. Dr. Tayler has served in a similar capacity at the American University, Queens College and Syracuse University.

Sixteen New Lifers Raise Total to 725

JANUARY proved a banner month for the Life Membership roll for it brought 14 new subscriptions to add to the one which came in late in December, making 15 since the last number of THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS was published, and raising the total to 725.

As directed by the Alumni Council, the complete roster of the Lemuel Towers Appold Life Membership Roll will be printed in the May number of THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS. Any new subscribers should send in their payments at once to be included in that list. Life membership costs $40 and may be paid in $10 to $20 installments. It carries life membership in the General Alumni Association and a life subscription to THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS. It is not a contribution to the Alumni Fund. Checks should be made payable to Dickinson College and mailed to THE DICKINSON ALUMNUS, Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa.

The first subscription in the new series came from Clinton DeWitt Van Siden, '14, attorney of New York City and member of the Alumni Council. His subscription arrived on the last day of the old year.

Three subscriptions came early in January. The first was from Robert B. Haigh, '35, of Stroudsburg, and on the same day one was received from Dr. Ralph E. Goodall, '19, physician of New York City. The next morning a $40 check was received from Richard R. Wolfrom, '34, attorney of Shippensburg.

The next subscription came from Donald E. Jefferson, '15, of Federalsburg, Md. That same day a subscription was received from James E. Skillington, '40, who is assistant professor of government and assistant to the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at American University, Washington, D. C. The last number of the ALUMNUS erroneously stated that his wife was Dean of Women at the University where her husband was a student.

The next day a check of $40 was received from Mrs. John B. Gates, '39, the former Mary Helen Person, of Thompson Street, Curwensville.

Two members of the Class of 1919 were added to the roll when W. Miller Cook sent in a check to cover his subscription and that of his wife, the former Harriet E. Brokaw. They reside in Cleveland where "Cookie" is head of W. Miller Cook Associates, Inc., dealers in rubber.

The next subscription came from Miss Mildred Straka, '38, former member of the library staff of the College, who is now doing graduate work and has a position in the library at Columbia University.

Two subscriptions came the same day when one was received from Dr. Herbert L. Davis, '21, former member of the faculty, who now resides in Highland Park, N. J. The other came from Dr. Herman W. Rannels, '34, practicing physician of Lancaster.

The next subscription came from Newton E. Randolph, '24, former European Director of CARE who is now with SAFE (Save a Friend in Europe) at the New York Offices, 40 Exchange Place.

A few days later a subscription arrived from J. Murray Buterbaugh, '27, an attorney of Indiana, Pa.

The next subscription came from Mrs. Mary Evans Brasaemle, '25, of R. D. 2, Norristown.

The final name added to the roll is that of Mrs. Ralph Bassler, the former Mary W. Mosser, '06, who lives at 4314 S. La Salle Ave., Los Angeles, Calif.

Heads "Dickinsonian"

Robert Streger, '49, of New Rochelle N. Y., was unanimously elected editor-and-chief of The Dickinsonian by the editorial board in January. He succeeds Edgar L. Owens, '48, of Bellefonte, and will serve for one year.

New York Club Holds Annual Dinner Meeting

WITH 90 present, the annual dinner of the Dickinson Club of New York was held at the Midston House on Friday, February 13. For some years the club has established the practice of holding its annual dinner on the second Friday night of February and Dr. Irving A. Marsland, '14, president of the club, who acted as toastmaster, announced that this would be the date of 1949 dinner.

Only one change was made in the election of the officers. Harold G. Oerther, '30, was elected secretary-treasurer to succeed Clayton G. Going, '37. Dr. Marsland was re-elected president and Henry Logan, '10, was re-elected vice president, while Going, Mervin G. Eppley, '17 and Dr. John P. Milligan, '26, were named to the executive committee.

The meeting opened with an invocation offered by the Rev. E. F. Hallock, '30, pastor of the Methodist Church in Rutherford, N. J. Before the speaking program, group singing was led by Dr. Milligan with Mrs. E. F. Hallock, '30, at the piano.

President William W. Edel was the first speaker and after giving some news about the enrollment and improvements in the College plant, he explained the reevaluation survey which has been underway at the College for more than a year. He also told of the launching of the Ten Year Development Program and of his desire and hope "to make Dickinson one of the finest small colleges in the country."

Paul L. Hutchison, '18, president of the General Alumni Association and Gilbert Malcolm, vice president of the College, were the other speakers.

Many of those who were present at the dinner were also spectators on the previous afternoon at the 69th Regiment Armory where C.C.N.Y. defeated the Dickinson basketball team. Among those at the dinner were Douglas Rehor, '48, forward-passing star of the football team in recent years, who completed his requirements for graduation at mid-year, and is now employed by the General Foods Company.

Mrs. Edel was guest of honor and remained in New York over the weekend with President Edel. On Sunday morning, February 15, President Edel preached in the Mamaroneck Methodist Church and in the evening at the Hanson Place Methodist Church in Brooklyn. Many Dickinsonians attended both of these services.

Chicago and Cleveland Clubs Meet

MEETINGS of the Dickinson Club of Chicago and the Dickinson Club of Cleveland were held on January 12 and 13 to coincide with a trip which President William W. Edel made to the West at that time. From Cleveland he went on to Cincinnati to attend a session of the American College Presidents.

There were 34 present at the annual dinner of the Dickinson Club of Chicago which was held in the University Club on the night of January 12. All present felt that it was the best meeting the club had had since its organization three years ago.

J. Leeds Clarkson, '11, acted as toastmaster, and Samuel W. Witwer, Jr., '30, attorney, was reelected president and Mrs. William G. Gray, '27, was elected secretary-treasurer. Laurence Dibble, '28, was elected vice president succeeding Dr. Pierce Butler, '06, and the executive committee was chosen consisting of Messrs. Clarkson, Butler, W. B. L. Drawbaugh, '07, and Paul C. BeHanna, '27.

After planning for an evening party, a conflict in dates caused the officers of the Dickinson Club of Cleveland to change their plans and about a dozen members met at a luncheon at the Mid-Day Club on January 13. John R. Milburn, '06, presided.

EDITORIAL

Federal Aid to Higher Education

MANY of the 700 college presidents and deans who attended the annual conference of the Association of American Colleges and Universities in Cincinnati last month spoke apprehensively of the financial future of their institutions. For, paradoxically, at the very time when the college enrolments are greater than they have ever been, the colleges' financial position is uncertain. With campuses swollen with students, many of the colleges are running into debt.

The reason for this unusual state of affairs is, on a moment's reflection, clear. No college student has ever paid his way. His education costs more than twice what he pays in the way of tuition. This means that the more students a college admits, the more endowment or other financial resources it must find. Over the protests of students Columbia University has recently raised its tuition rates, but despite this increased revenue, its budget for the next academic year will still be unbalanced by the amount of $600,000. And the task of college financing has been made more difficult by increased faculty salaries, necessary to keep good men in the profession, soaring building costs, and mounting operating expenses.

What appeared most strikingly in the educators' discussions of these questions at Cincinnati was the general acceptance in all quarters, by the large and small colleges, the public and private alike, that some kind of federal aid to higher education is necessary. The only serious division of opinion was on the question whether this aid should come as a direct subsidy to the institution or by way of scholarships provided on a nation-wide basis to deserving young men and women. Those who oppose the first alternative fear that federal subsidy will mean federal control, the creation of more bureaus, and the ultimate influencing of higher education by the state. In answer to this it is argued that safeguards can be erected against the sinister influence of the bureaucracy.

What is involved is the purpose of education in the American democracy. We are attempting to educate the entire population. For that task there is no limit to the educational equipment needed. At the same time, some thoughtful persons, prompted by nothing but distinterested motives, question whether mass education and superior education are not incompatible.

The argument is not likely to be settled for some few years. But it is not too early to think about it. The federal government is certain to go into higher education. On what terms it enters that field is a question that all college graduates everywhere should help to determine.

A Small College and Those Who Love Her

BEFORE the Trustees resolved to undertake the ten-year development program for Dickinson which is announced in this issue of the DICKINSON ALUMNUS, they made a survey of the constituency of the College to determine what the alumni and friends of Dickinson think of the institution and what they want it to be. The response to those queries must have been most encouraging to the Trustees and others who have a care for the College; and yet the response was not entirely unexpected. Of a sampling of 122 persons interviewed, 119 said they "approve" of the College; the other three confessed they really did not know enough of the actual situation to give an opinion. A 98% vote of approval is, needless to say, encouraging; but one had almost expected it from the fanatical loyalty of alumni to Dickinson demonstrated on every occasion when old grads gather, never more moving than on occasions like the last Commencement when Coach MacAndrews' portrait was presented.

What the alumni and friends of the College want for Dickinson in the future is also agreeable to the Trustees and administrators, and yet is no surprise. Dickinson, in the judgment of this sampling of the College constituency, should remain a small liberal arts college and the chief aim of the ten-year development program should be to make Dickinson an excellent small liberal arts college. Again and again the idea was expressed that the quality of instruction at the College must be improved, that teachers are more important than buildings, that high academic standards and a good educational product are the only justifications for a college's existence today. All this was said without criticism of the present instruction at the College, for most persons think that good. It is evidence that in the opinion of the alumni and friends of Dickinson the quality of instruction must be the primary thing.

These opinions are heartening and sensible. For they promise that Dickinson will remain an institution in which the relation of teachers and students is paramount. Whatever excellence small colleges have lies, it seems clear, in the opportunities for individual instruction and guidance. Indeed, were it not for this, the small colleges might better close, for in productive scholarship they can hardly hope to equal the great universities. There men are closer to the frontiers of knowledge; the student has opportunity to get new ideas and discoveries of fact sooner; the whole institution is geared to knowledge. But in the smaller schools, though learning cannot be slighted and scholarship be at a discount, opportunity exists carefully to train young men and women and to inspire them with a high ideal of their calling. This does not mean that all instructors will be Mr. Chips and all students old grads to-be. What the small college essays is a quality product.

It is just this quality educational product that the friends of Dickinson want the College to turn out. As Dickinson enters upon its development program, it is heartening to know that the alumni of the College want Dickinson to do for and with the undergraduates of future years what they believe it did for them—but do it better!

A Living Memorial

BEFORE her death Dr. Julia Morgan did a typically graceful and thoughtful thing: she requested that no flowers be sent to her funeral, but that instead friends make a small contribution to the medical work of Shantung Christian University in China where she had left so much of her heart. In response to that request a small purse has accumulated which will be sent to China.

What Dr. Julia asked some may feel was unnecessarily "practical." Unquestionably, it is. But it is more than that. To one who has labored long and lovingly for a cause, to any man or woman who has only done the day's work as well as he could, what finer memorial than a living gift that others may enjoy over and over again. A book to a library, the gift of a CARE package of food or clothing to a needy European family, or two weeks in fresh air for a poor city child is a tribute of respect the dead would prefer to flowers. Probably God would prefer it, too.

Advocates Revision of Constitution of Illinois

SAMUEL W. WITWER, JR., '30, attorney of Chicago, has been in the lime-light since the publication of the Autumn number of The University of Chicago Law Review in which his article "The Illinois Constitution and the Courts" appeared. It was one of four articles in that issue pointing out a need for revision of the 77-year-old Illinois constitution.

Newspapers throughout the state quickly picked up the proposals and editorials supported plans for revision of the document. One of the first editorials appeared in the Chicago Daily News, which quoted liberally from the article written by the president of the Dickinson Club of Chicago.

While newspapers pointed out that the constitution was written by farmers to serve the needs of an agricultural state and that today Illinois is one of the greatest industrial areas of the world, Mr. Witwer's article charges that the judicial system is not efficient and that "justice is neither speedy nor inexpensive."

While writers attack the 1870 constitution, Mr. Witwer avers that it was upon the adoption of the Constitution of 1848 that Illinois first chose the method of judicial selection and tenure and erected much of the court machinery utilized today in the administration of justice. He then attacks the method of popular election of judges and points to the flaws causing the inadequacy of the state's judicial machinery in meeting present-day needs.

Serving as chairman of the Committee on Constitutional Convention of the Chicago Bar Association, Mr. Witwer tells in his article part of the story of the Association's struggle for an improved judiciary and concludes that "what is needed is a frontal attack on the problem, a concerted and continuing effort to the end that Illinois may have its constitutional convention at the earliest date possible."

Writes on Insurance

Fred A. Lumb, '29, is the author of an article on insurance entitled "Let's Hit the Sawdust Trail" in the January issue of Life Insurance Selling, a national trade publication.

He did not enter the life insurance business until 1937 but has risen rapidly in that field. He acquired his C.L.U. designation in 1940 and joined the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company as associate general agent in Harrisburg, Pa. in 1942. During the next few years, he saw service with the navy in the North Pacific. In July, 1946, he was appointed general agent for Western Michigan with headquarters in Grand Rapids.

He is a past president of the Grand Rapids Chapter of C.L.U., and has been active in life insurance association work in Pennsylvania and Michigan.

To Deliver Spahr Lecture

Dr. John H. Powell, assistant librarian in charge of research of The Free Library of Philadelphia, will deliver the Boyd Lee Spahr Lecture on Americana at the College Library on the evening of March 5.

Dr. Powell, who is the author of a number of works on Pennsylvania colonial history and colonial worthies, is now preparing a biography of John Dickinson. He will speak on John Dickinson and his relations with the College.

The Spahr lectures were inaugurated last year, when Dr. Lyman H. Butterfield, of Princeton University, spoke on Benjamin Rush and his association with the College. Later in the spring a second lecture will be delivered by Mr. Joseph B. Smith of the history department on Dickinson College as a frontier institution.

Reads Papers On Music

Dr. J. Murray Barbour, '18, of Michigan State College at East Lansing, read a paper entitled "Irregular Systems of Temperament" before the annual meeting of the American Musicological Society at Cambridge, Mass., on December 29. At the same meeting he was elected one of the four members-at-large of the executive board of the Society.

Last month Dr. Barbour also read a paper on a German musical publication at the annual meeting of the Music Library Association in Detroit. A paper on "Music and Ternary Continued Fractions," which was read to the Michigan section of the Mathematical Association of America, is shortly to be published in the American Mathematical Quarterly.

Dr. Barbour received the first doctorate ever granted by Cornell University in musicology and he is the author of a number of papers on various aspects of the science of music.

Going to Congo Mission Field

Mrs. Marjorie Stern Boyes, '41, and her husband will sail in April for Belgium to spend a few months studying French before setting out for the Belgian Congo to serve as missionaries under the Unevangelized Fields Mission of Philadelphia.

Mrs. Boyes, who has had five years' teaching experience, will conduct a school in the Congo while her husband will do evangelistic and pastoral work. They may be sent to a post where there are a girls' school and a boys' school and 115 surrounding villages which are presently being ministered to by only two young women.

Mrs. Boyes was married in the First Independent Church of Wilmington, Del., on January 25. Mr. Boyes is a graduate of Columbia, S. C., Bible College and of Faith Theological Seminary, Wilmington, Del.

Alumni Clubs To Meet

Four alumni clubs have set dates for dinner meetings and others are being planned. The Dickinson Club of Pittsburgh will hold a dinner meeting on Thursday evening, April 1 in the Emory Methodist Church, Highland Avenue and Ripley street, which will precede a concert in the church by the Dickinson College Glee Club.

The Dickinson Club of Baltimore will meet on Friday, April 9 and the Dickinson Club of Harrisburg will have a dinner meeting at the West Shore Country Club in Camp Hill on Thursday, April 15. The Dickinson Club of Northern New Jersey will gather in Bloomfield on Tuesday, May 4.

Officers of the clubs in Philadelphia, Trenton and Reading are also making arrangements for dinner meetings in the Spring. The Washington Club meets annually in May.

Honored on Retirement

When Frank C. Daniel, '01, retired as principal of McKinley High School in Washington, D. C., on October 31, he received four unusual gifts.

On his final day at the school, at an assembly program, Mr. Daniel received from various student organizations a model airplane, for traveling; a mouth organ, because he likes music; a set of water-wings, for safety in fishing; and a walkie-talkie, to keep in touch with the world as he putters about his workshop at his home at 3815 Jocelyn Street, N. W. From the student body as a whole he received the latest model FM radio.

Among other gifts was a huge cake baked by the home economics department and topped with 46 candles, one for each of the years Daniel has served in the public schools of Washington. For 36 of those years he was principal of McKinley High. A portrait of Daniel was also presented, to be hung in the high school building.

Death Claims Dr. Julia Morgan

DR. JULIA MORGAN, '11, professor of diagnosis and tropical medicine at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School and former professor at Shantung Medical School in China, died after a brief illness in Philadelphia on January 26. She was the daughter of the late Dr. James Henry Morgan, '78, former president of the College, and the late Mary Curran Morgan, '88, and was born in Carlisle on September 23, 1891.

She attended the Carlisle schools and then graduated from Conway Hall, and in 1911 from the College with Phi Beta Kappa honors. She then taught school in Spring City and the Carlisle High School until 1916, when she entered the University of Pennsylvania Medical School from which she received her M.D. degree in 1920. After an internship of two years in the University Hospital, she went to China as a medical missionary under the auspices of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Church. The first year in China was spent at the Language School at Peking; then in 1924 she was one of the five women doctors sent to Tsinan in Shantung to unite the Women's Medical College there with the Men's Medical School. That spring she began teaching medicine in Chinese, and then became a member of the staff of Cheeloo University Medical School at Tsinan serving as instructor, assistant professor and associate professor of internal medicine. Later she became a member of the faculty of the Shantung Medical School.

Dr. Morgan was home on furlough three times during her period of service and each time studied in various hospitals such as the University of Pennsylvania Hospital, Peter Bent Brigham Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, and Bellevue Hospital in New York. She also took graduate work in tuberculosis at the Trudeau School at Saranac Lake, N. Y., and in tropical medicine at the Calcutta School of Tropical Medicine.

Following the Japanese invasion of China in 1937 the school where she was then teaching was moved into the interior. After four harrowing years she returned to the United States in 1941 to take a post at the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. At commencement in June 1942 the College conferred upon her the honorary degree of doctor of science.

She was a member of Allison Methodist Church of Carlisle, of Pi Beta Phi sorority and also of Zeta Phi, a medical fraternity.

She was the author of various articles, some published in the Chinese medical journals and others dealing with tropical medicine in the medical journals of this country.

She is survived by a sister, Margaret, '14, the wife of R. C. McElfish, '14, of Edgewood, Pa., and a brother, Hugh C. Morgan, '15, of West Grove, Pa.

Following funeral services in Philadelphia, services were also held at the Shulenberg Funeral Home in Carlisle and burial was made in Ashland Cemetery. In conducting her funeral Dr. W. Emory Hartman, pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Harrisburg, and former pastor of Allison Church, delivered a beautiful eulogy. In the course of his message, he read a letter written by three Chinese children to Dr. Julia which reveals their love for her and mirrors the feeling all must have had whom she served, while also portraying her rich character and service. That letter is as follows:

Dr. Ma (The American Physician)
Cheeloo Hospital
Dear Dr:

We (three children) are your clients, and have been improving or recovering nicely at present.

Sorry to hear that you are laying on bed yourself now. We believe that you must have been exhausted your energy too much for the care of our disease. We feel it our duty to go to your house and serve you personally in order to show that you are our saviour and we are grateful to you for all our lives. We owe you too much. No words can be used to express the thankfulness of our hearts. Your kindness has been crept into the very corner of our hearts and it will be locked up there forever.

If you will allow us to go to see you, please let us know as soon as possible. We shall be willing to go to your house together with pleasure. We feel we are really your own children. It will be very sweet to us if you will allow us to call you "mother."

If you do not like us to visit you at your house, please let us know when you can come to our home together with Dr. Kao (your comrade the American Physician) for a sweet Chinese dinner. We have many good Chinese dishes here.

An early reply will be very much appreciated.

New York Alumnae Active

The officers of the Dickinson Alumnae Club of New York are carrying out a fine program for the former co-eds. The club held its annual theater party and dinner Saturday, February 7, when the members first saw Bernard Shaw's "Man and Superman" at the Alvin Theater, and then went to the Henry Hudson Hotel for dinner. There were about 30 at the theater and 15 at the dinner, where it was decided to send the College a gift of $15 for the Alumni Fund.

Last October the club held a fall meeting at the home of Mrs. Georgia Krall McMullen, '27, in Springfield, N. J., and plans are now being made for a spring meeting which will be held on Saturday, May 1, at the home of Mrs. Clinton DeWitt VanSiclen, '14, at 264 Park Lane, Douglaston, Long Island.

Miss Elma May Houseman, '19, 177 Liberty Street, Bloomfield, N. J., is secretary of the club and urges the alumnae in the New York area who have not been attending these meetings to do so, and if they desire to do so, to communicate with her.

Basketball Team A Winner

With 10 victories and three defeats in the 13 games played to February 18, the basketball team under Coach Charles H. B. Kennedy, is enjoying another banner season. Four games remained to be played in the season's schedule, two against F. & M. and single encounters with Ursinus and Bucknell.

Columbia was the winner in a thrilling game in the Alumni Gymnasium before a capacity throng by the close score of 48 to 46 in a game which was decided in the final minutes. In the first game after the Christmas vacation, Gettysburg trounced the Dickinson five 57 to 45 in the Battlefield gymnasium, though this defeat was avenged in the Alumni Gymnasium on February 18 when hundreds were turned away and the Dickinson won easily 58 to 51.

Journeying to the 69th Regiment Armory in New York City, Dickinson lost to C.C.N.Y., one of the country's great teams, 81 to 52. Victories have been registered over Elizabethtown, Juniata, Wagner, Johns Hopkins, Western Maryland, Lehigh, Lebanon Valley, W. & J. and Haverford.

OBITUARY

1878—Judge Walter Anderson Powell died at his home in Dover, Del., after a prolonged illness on February 6 in his 93rd year. He and the late President James H. Morgan came from Delaware to enter the College as students. They both graduated in 1878 were both members of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and life-long friends.

Judge Powell was born near Farmington, Del., on June 16, 1855, the son of James B. R. and Mary Ann Redden Powell. He was the last survivor of the first graduating class of five members of Wilmington Conference Academy where he graduated in 1875. Three years later he received his A.B. degree from the College. From 1881 to 1907 he practiced law in Kansas City, Mo., and was elected judge of the circuit court of Jackson County, Missouri, in November 1906. He retired about 30 years ago and returned to Dover where he made his home until his death.

He was the author of "The Pilgrims and Their Religious, Intellectual and Civic Life," published in 1923, and "A History of Delaware," published in 1928. He also did general character and historical writing.

He was a member of Wesley Methodist Church and was active in the work of his church and various societies of the church and conference. Interment was made in Lakeside Cemetery, Dover, following funeral services conducted by Dr. Thomas C. Mulligan, superintendent of the Dover Methodist District; Dr. O. A. Bartley, president of Wesley Junior College; the Rev. Roy T. Thawley, pastor of Wesley Methodist Church, and the Rev. John M. Kelso, '04, professor of languages at Wesley Junior College.

Less than 24 hours after her husband's funeral, Mrs. Ray Heydrick Powell, 73 years of age, died in the Kent General Hospital in Dover. In failing health, she was taken to the hospital the morning of her death. She was a native of Bridgeville, Del., a former president of the State Federation of Women's Clubs, president of the Board of Managers of the Palmer Home of Dover, a member of the Dover Century Club and the King's Daughters.

1884—Three days after the death of his wife, the Rev. Dr. Amos Alvin Arthur died on February 3 in the Methodist Hospital, Philadelphia, after a two weeks' illness. He had not been told of her death. They were buried in joint funeral services held on February 6 at the East Allegheny Methodist Church, Philadelphia, where Dr. Arthur formerly served as pastor.

Born in Reading, Pa., on December 3, 1859, he attended Dickinson Seminary, received his A.B. from the College in 1884, an A.M. in 1887, and a Ph.D. degree in 1897. Ordained in 1884, he served various charges in the Philadelphia Conference until his retirement in 1932. At one time he was a member of the Board of Examiners of the Philadelphia Conference and also taught philosophy and sociology in the Temple University Theological School. He was a member of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

His wife, who died January 31, was the former Laura E. Styer of Morgantown, Pa. They had two daughters who survive, Mrs. Earl B. Collmer, of Mount Airy, and Mrs. Fred K. Freehafer, of Pittsburgh.

Interment was made in Reading, Pa.

He successfully operated a dairy farm and was long active in Westmoreland County Democratic politics. He had been commissioner of the county for twelve years at the time of his death and served six years as tax collector of North Huntingdon township. He was president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Irwin and served on various historical committees and county boards. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church and of various fraternal organizations.

He is survived by his wife, the former Jean Barnes White, and the following children: Harry Barnes White of Columbus, Ohio; Mrs. Catherine Baker of Greensburg; Mrs. Julia Warden of Irwin, and Miss Emma Jean White at home.

1913—Dr. Earl S. Johnston, chief of the division of radiation and organisms of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., died at his home, 4409 Beechwood Rd., College Heights, Md., on December 17 after an illness of several months. His only survivor is his widow, Mrs. Virginia Andes Johnston.

Born in Quarryville, Pa., on February 5, 1889, he was the son of the Rev. Charles B. and Mrs. Annie Steinfeld Johnston. He entered the College in 1909 following his graduation from the Stroudsburg Normal School, graduated with a B.S. degree in 1913 and received his Ph.D. degree from Johns Hopkins University.

For a year following his graduation he taught at the Pennington School and from 1917 to 1931 was the plant physiologist at the Maryland Agriculture Experiment Station at the University of Maryland. He went to the Smithsonian Institution in 1931, continuing there until the time of his death.

While at the University of Maryland he collaborated with Prof. D. R. Hoagland of the University of California in 1926 and 1927 in the discovery that a minute portion of boron was essential for plant growth. He received a good bit of publicity when he grew tomatoes without soil.

At Dickinson he became a member of Theta Chi fraternity and he also held memberships in Gamma Alpha and Sigma Xi. He was a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and a past president of the Botanical Society of America. He was a member of the Methodist Church and of the Cosmos Club. He was past president of the Dickinson Club of Washington and served a term as a member of the Alumni Council of the General Alumni Association.

One of his hobbies was photography in color and he made a very exceptional collection of pictures of the College campus during his visits at Commencement and Homecoming.

1913—Robert Bruce Paterson died in the hospital at Clearfield, Pa. following a long illness on January 31.

Born on May 23, 1891 in Clearfield, he was the son of Alexander and Mary Wynn Paterson. He prepared for college at Conway Hall and received his A.B. from the College in 1913. As an undergraduate he became a member of Phi Delta Theta fraternity, Skull and Key, the Glee Club, and was one of the stars of the baseball team.

Upon his graduation from the College, he joined his father in the Paterson Fire Brick Company at Clearfield. A year later he was made plant superintendent, and in 1920 was elevated to the post of general manager. He became president of the company in 1928.

Long active in civic and social affairs, he served for several years as elder of the Presbyterian Church and was a member of Clearfield Lodge No. 314, F. and A. M. and the I.O.O.F. of Clearfield. He was also a member of St. Andrews Society of Philadelphia and for several years was president of the Clearfield Art Club.

On September 8, 1920, he married Alexandrina C. Logie, a native of Buckie, Scotland. She survives with their three children, Mrs. Flora McDonald of Pittsburgh, Mary Annie and William Logie Paterson, '43, both of Clearfield. He is also survived by a sister and three brothers, Mrs. Ruth Bishop, Richard S. and Alexander Paterson, Jr., all of Clearfield, and John Paterson of State College.

1925L—Joseph Parsons Hoerle, former assistant district attorney of Cambria County, Pa., who had been practicing in Passaic, N. J., died there at the age of 47 years on December 29. He was the son of Frank C. and Elizabeth Parsons Hoerle, both members of prominent families of Johnstown, Pa.

He was a graduate of the University of Michigan and the Dickinson School of Law. In 1941 he entered the Army as a private, attended O.C.S., and was discharged with the rank of first lieutenant.

He is survived by two sons, Joseph Parsons Hoerle, Jr., attending the University of Pennsylvania, and James R. Hoerle, Carlisle, and three brothers, Frank C. of New York City; Newton, Lima, Ohio, and Edward of Johnstown, and one sister, Ann, in Michigan.

1928—George Worthington Post, novelist and former editor of the Argosy Magazine, died in New York City on October 17 last of tuberculosis.

Born in New York City on June 28, 1907, he was a graduate of the Atlantic City High School. He graduated from the College with an A.B. degree in 1928 with Phi Beta Kappa honors. He graduated from the Columbia University School of Journalism with honors in 1930, and subsequently spent two years writing and studying in France on a Pulitzer Travelling Scholarship which he was awarded at Columbia. Returning to New York, he published a novel under the pen name of "Richard Worthington" and after a period of free lance writing, became associated with Ned Pines and later with Street & Smith, publishers of detective story magazines. During the pre-war heyday of that publication, Mr. Post was editor of Argosy Magazine, resigning to enter the field of radio writing. Several of his short plays which were heard on the Kate Smith hour received wide critical acclaim.

Carrying on his friendship with Robertson C. Cameron, '28, owner of the Gazette of Wellsboro, Pa., George Post wrote numerous movie reviews and feature articles from New York for that paper. He also assisted the publisher of the Potter Enterprise in the preparation of a special edition celebrating the natural gas developments in Potter County.

During his college days, he was active in the affairs of the Belles Lettres Literary Society, sang in the Glee Club and was on the staff of the Dickinsonian. He was a member of the Commons Club and of Alpha Sigma Gamma and the Christian Science Church. At Columbia University he became a member of Sigma Delta Chi fraternity. He was unmarried.
