ON THE COVER

The feature role in the recent Mermaid Players production of "Othello" was capably handled by Frederick Morsell, a senior from Brooklyn, N. Y. For more on "Othello" see page 9. Robert E. Young '59 supplied the only correct answer to the location of last issue's cover picture—the southeastern portion of Carlisle Square.

The Dickinson Alumnus is published quarterly in October, December, February and May. Entered as second class matter May 23, 1923, at the post office at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, under the Act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

THE ROGER BROOKE TANEY HOME

by EDWARD S. DELAPLAINE

DICKINSON COLLEGE is particularly proud of two alumni, Roger Brooke Taney, Class of 1795, and James Buchanan, Class of 1809. It is natural that Dickinsonians should look with pride not only on the careers of the famous graduates of Dickinson but also on the homes in which they dwelt.

There is a great contrast between "Wheatland," the spacious home of President Buchanan in Lancaster and the modest home of Taney in Frederick. Taney's home indicates the unpretentious mode of life that was led by the struggling lawyer who later became Chief Justice of the United States.

Taney was 24 when he opened his law office in Frederick in 1801. At 29 he married Anne Key, sister of Francis Scott Key. His first child, Anne, was born in 1808. Thereafter followed, at intervals averaging about two years, the births of Elizabeth, Ellen, Augustus, Sophia and Maria. Eight years later the youngest of the children, Alice, was born.

It was not until 1815 that Taney was able to own his own home. This is the house on South Bentz Street which is now preserved as a memorial to Chief Justice Taney and his brother-in-law, the author of The Star Spangled Banner.

The house has two stories with attic. Behind it are the slave quarters. It was an unpretentious dwelling in an unpretentious locality.

IN 1929 the restorer of the Barbara Fritchie House, Hammond Clary, who has been a friend of mine for many years, joined with me in acquiring the property to save it as a national shrine. We incorporated under the laws of Maryland by the name of Roger Brooke Taney Home, Inc. Governor Albert C. Ritchie and State Senator A. LeRoy McCardell cheerfully joined us as incorporators.

During the winter of 1929-1930, we cleaned the house and slave quarters and made the necessary repairs. Under the kitchen in the slave quarters our workmen dug out several cartloads of sand and dirt revealing a stone-walled room, one of Frederick's coolest spots, which evidently was a wine cellar in the 19th century.

In starting to gather furnishings for the home, we collected pictures of the Presidents who were sworn into office by Chief Justice Taney. We found that no other man had administered the oath to so many Presidents. Taney administered the Presidential oath to Martin Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, James Knox Polk, Zachary Taylor, Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan and Abraham Lincoln.

We decided to engage an artist to make a large oil painting of Chief Justice Taney administering the oath of office to Lincoln. We selected Henry Roben, a distinguished artist of Baltimore, for this assignment. This large canvas depicts Seward, Breckinridge, Taney, Edward D. Baker, Clerk of the Court Carroll, Buchanan, Lincoln, Salmon P. Chase, Stephen A. Douglas and Horace Greeley.

In the slave quarters we displayed photostatic copies of manumission papers which we found in the records of the Circuit Court for Frederick County. These documents show that Taney, who was bitterly denounced as a heartless believer in slavery, gave freedom to his own slaves. It is known that Taney was unusually kind to the slaves, inherited from his father; some of the older ones who were manumitted he supported by monthly allowances until they died.

Edward S. Delaplaine is a jurist, historian, and author. Born in Frederick, Maryland he has been caught up in the historical significance of this lovely Maryland town since childhood. A graduate of Washington and Lee and its law school, he has practiced law since 1915 and has served municipal, state and federal governments. He served in the Maryland House of Delegates from 1916-18, was the solicitor for Frederick from 1919-22, and served as Chief Judge of the Sixth Judicial Circuit and Associate Judge of the Maryland Court of Appeals from 1928 to 1957. A member of Omicron Delta Kappa, Delta Sigma Rho and Phi Beta Kappa, he has written the biographies of such historical figures as Roger B. Taney and Francis Scott Key.

Taney's bedroom contains authentic antique pieces of furniture.

The living room of the Taney Home contains a painting of the administration of the oath of office to Lincoln. History students should be able to recognize many of the historic faces, especially Taney and James Buchanan, Class of 1809.

TANEY had many hard blows in life. In 1855 he was overwhelmed by two staggering tragedies, the death of his wife and a few days later the death of his daughter, Alice, at Old Point Comfort, Virginia.

Then came the Dred Scott Case. It was a decree of Destiny that a graduate of Dickinson College should deliver the decision. It was held in that case by the United States Supreme Court that the framers of the Constitution did not contemplate that Negro slaves would be included within the meaning of the term "citizen," and therefore they had no right to sue in the Federal courts. Unfortunately the Court went on to say that, while under the Missouri Compromise Act the fact that Dred Scott had lived in the territory acquired by the Louisiana Purchase made him free, the Congress had no constitutional power to pass such a provision, because no slave owner could be deprived of his property without due process of law merely because he may have taken the property into free territory.

Taney acted with high-minded purpose in the hope of staving off the threatening holocaust of fratricidal war. But his opinion in the Dred Scott Case added fuel to the controversy. He handed down the decision two days after he administered the Presidential oath to James Buchanan. Senator Seward accused Taney and Buchanan of conspiracy, charging that Dred Scott had been used as a "dummy" in a political game.

Lincoln thought there had been collusion between the two Dickinson College alumni. In his House Divided Speech on June 16, 1858, wherein he declared that "this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free," the Illinois lawyer commented on the Dred Scott Case as follows:

Why was the court decision held up? Why even a Senator's individual opinion election? Plainly enough now, the speaking out then would have damaged the "perfectly free" argument upon which the election was to be carried.

Why the outgoing President's (Pierce's) felicitation on the indorsement? Why the delay of a re-argument? Why the incoming President's (Buchanan's) advance exhortation in favor of the decision?

These things look like the cautious patting and petting a spirited horse, preparatory to mounting him, when it is dreaded that he may give the rider a fall.

And why the hasty after indorsements of the decision by the President and others?

Taney, although not in complete sympathy with all of the measures of Lincoln's administration, remained in his high office until his death in his eighty-eighth year. In October 1864, when the thunder of battle was still resounding through the land, he had his wish fulfilled that his body be brought back to Frederick and laid to rest beside the grave of his mother.

TANEY'S home in Frederick was opened as a shrine on April 15, 1930. In 1930 the house was visited by more than 6,000 people, who came from most of the States of the Union and from Germany, Scotland, Denmark and China.

By 1935 the house had attracted more than 25,000 visitors. One of the visitors was Charles Evans Hughes, the eleventh Chief Justice of the United States. He made his visit on September 26, 1931, and on that day he delivered an address at the unveiling of a bust of Chief Justice Taney in front of the Court House in Frederick. In his address Chief Justice Hughes closed with these words: "With the passing of the years, and the softening of old asperities, the arduous service nobly rendered by Roger Brooke Taney has received its fitting recognition. He bore his wounds with the fortitude of an invincible spirit. He was a great Chief Justice."

On October 23, 1954, Chief Justice Earl Warren came to Frederick to deliver an address at the dedication of a monument at Taney's grave. On this day the fourteenth Chief Justice added his praise for the Maryland jurist whose greatness had been eclipsed by the passions of the age. In this address Chief Justice Warren said: "In a manner of speaking, today's tribute helps redress an old wrong—helps erase the calumny which Taney's enemies had hurled at him during his lifetime and which superficial historians preserved as gospel truth for a time after his death. Few men in American life—and surely no Justice of the Supreme Court—have been so grossly misrepresented as Taney."

In 1946 the Roger Brooke Taney Home, Inc., presented the Taney home and its furnishings, portraits and exhibits as a gift to the Historical Society of Frederick County. It was understood that the historical society would keep the home open to the public in the summer months.

The historical society was founded in 1892 and is an incorporated body. But like many other organizations, it has its problems and needs. At the end of 1957, the society, finding that it was difficult to attend to the property as it had promised to do, entered into a contract authorizing the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Frederick to use the building in return for a promise to keep the premises clean, to whitewash the slave quarters and the fences, and to reopen the property.

For several years, however, the house has been closed to visitors, except occasionally by appointment; and efforts are now being made by the historical society, the Frederick Chamber of Commerce, and the Junior Chamber of Commerce to revive interest in the shrine.

Our (Sob) Orthography

By William R. Bowden

The following is adapted from a talk Professor Bowden delivered at an assembly during this school year. It was so well received by the students, the editors felt it should be made available to our alumni.

THERE ARE probably some of you to whom it will come as no surprise that English is hard to spell. Perhaps I ought to hesitate to go into detail on just how hard, for fear of disheartening you altogether—but perhaps it will work the other way and give you self-assurance to realize that you navigate as skillfully as you do through a sea as full of rocks and shoals as English orthography.

Ideally, spelling should be based on a 1-to-1 relationship between phoneme and grapheme. That is merely a technical way of saying that each separate meaningful sound should be represented by one and only one letter. You see how efficient such a language would be in terms of spelling: if you heard the word clearly, you would know exactly how to spell it, and if you saw the word, you would know exactly how to pronounce it—you couldn't make a mistake.

The built-in difficulty with English spelling is that we have an alphabet of only 26 letters to represent a minimum of 33 separate meaningful sounds—24 consonants and 9 vowel sounds, according to the Trager-Smith system. In other words, we are short 7 letters of what we need. But actually, it's worse than that, because 3 of the letters we do have are dead wood. These letters are c, q, and x, none of which has a sound of its own. C stands for the same sounds as s and k; k also, with kw, could represent the sound of q; and x might more logically be written ks or gz. This cuts us down to 23 useful letters for 33 distinct sounds.

As we would expect, then, we have to use a single spelling to represent more than one sound. Thus we use the spelling th to represent both the voiced sound as in then and the unvoiced sound as in thin. Also, we use the spelling ch for both /č/ and /š/, as in much and machine.

But we complicate our spelling troubles unnecessarily when we represent a single phoneme or sound by more than one spelling. For instance, there are at least 9 different ways to spell the simple vowel sound /i/:

ie as in	sieve	ia as in	carriage
e	pretty	u	busy
ui	build	ee	been
o	women	i	circuit
ai	mountain

And there are at least fourteen ways of spelling the consonant sound /s/:

sh	fish	si	tension	ti	notion
ch	chemise	ssi	mission	ce	ocean
che	cache	ss	issue	se	nausea
sch	schnappes	s	sugar	chsi	fuchsia
sci	luscious	ci	vicious

When you come right down to it, there is not a single example of a strict 1-to-1 correspondence between sound and letter in the whole system of English spelling. This lack of correspondence is what makes possible such freak spellings as Shaw's famous one for fish:

gh as in rough
ti notion gh-o-ti = fish

It isn't bad enough that our sounds and our letters don't correspond in English; we have to make it worse by using a vast number of silent letters to clutter up our spelling of otherwise simple words. It has been estimated that two-thirds of all our words have at least one silent letter. Falk Johnson gives a partial alphabet, which you could complete without much trouble:

head	of	salmon
lamb	gnaw	mnemonics
indict	shepherd	condemn
handsome	weird	too
love	knee	psychology

Only j, q, v, and y are not used as silent letters. The extremes we go to in silent letters are perhaps best illustrated in the almost incredible word kñickkñack, which has four silent k's in it.

WELL, there is our situation. Now how on earth did we get into it? Most other languages are not nearly so chaotic as ours in their spelling, and so we'll have to try to discover what makes ours different. There are at least four important influences on spelling; of these, the one completely peculiar to English is the history of the language.

English was originally a Germanic language; it was brought to the British Isles from the area around the base of Denmark some 1500 years ago—the traditional date is 449. When England was Christianized not too long afterward, it was the Christian monks, trained in Latin, who did a great deal of the writing and preserving of literary manuscripts, and of written records in general. This brought about the use of the Roman alphabet for a non-Roman or non-Italic language, and the problems began. Latin did not have certain sounds in Old English, like

ð “edh”—either, then þ “thorn”—ether, thin
 ȝ /x/—a braw, bricht nicht

so the scribes borrowed runic symbols to represent them. Then, after the Norman conquest, professional scribes from France dropped these unfamiliar letters and substituted double letters—th, gh, and so on. In this way, our spelling th came to represent two different phonemes, and gh got started on the devious paths by which it came to represent four or five different ones.

During the years after 1066, the same French-trained professional scribes who had dropped the unfamiliar runic symbols introduced some French spelling rules. One of these was the use of u after g when g was pronounced /g/ as in guest, but e after g when it was pronounced /j/ as in gem or change. These French scribes applied this rule not only to words of French background like guard and guide but to native English words like guess and guilt. Again, the sound /kw/ had been spelled cw in Old English, but these French scribes substituted the spelling qu, so that Old English cwic became quick, and cwen became queen. And finally, they introduced the letter c to represent the /s/ sound, as in face. So on the basis of their giving us a silent letter, the u after g, and introducing the useless q, and giving the letter c an additional pronunciation, we'll have to classify the French scribes among the baddies in the story of spelling.

Another thing the scribes did was a mechanical matter that had nothing to do with their being French. In handwriting which has any tendency to be angular, a script u can easily be confused with an n, an m, an i, or even an r; and so many scribes adopted the practice of writing o for u whenever there was any danger of such confusion. This “scribal o” resulted in such spellings as son for Old English sunu and forces us to stop and think what kind of /sun/ we are talking about before we can write it down.

Even after the days of the scribes had passed and the printing press had taken their place, the accidents of history continued to leave their marks on our spelling. During the Reformation, for instance, much English printing of religious texts was done in Holland for safety's sake; moreover, many Dutch printers came over to England in the wake of the printing press. These people were used to the representation of the /g/ sound as gh in a word like gherkin, and so they carried this spelling over into such native English words as ghost, from the Old English gast. Their influence was still being felt two hundred years later when Dr. Johnson, in his famous dictionary, added the h to ghastly, which had not had it consistently before. So the Dutch complicated our already-existing troubles with the spelling of words beginning with /g/.

IN ADDITION to the effects of history there are three other major influences on our spelling that are equally clear; these are the processes of sound change, the results of borrowing words from other languages, and the results of just plain tinkering with the language.

We human beings are just naturally and congenitally lazy, and this laziness is nowhere more apparent than in our speech. We pronounce with as little physical effort as possible; very few of us move our lips and tongue as much as we should, and so we speak what Clifton Fadiman called “Slurvian.” Here are a few examples as transcribed by James Harvey:

Taykedeezy
 Lemawf
 Jeet

The first two are contributions from the subway guard. The first means “Take care when alighting from the train, ladies and gentlemen.” The second is a plea to the ladies and gentlemen on the platform to allow those on the train to leave it. And the last is a question you might hear almost anywhere; it means “Have you dined?”

These examples may impress you as ridiculous or appalling, depending on how seriously you take life, but the point of the demonstration is that these are perfectly legitimate examples of common linguistic processes which have been going on presumably as long as man has been talking, in all the languages he has invented. We won't worry here about the technical names for these processes, but we can see that in general they fall into two classes. Of these, one is our tendency to avoid or simply drop difficult consonant sounds. Try saying thrusts or desks to yourself, and you'll find yourself doing one of three things: saying the word distinctly by making a conscious effort—thrusts, desks; or leaving out one of those consonants—“When he gets mad he thruss his fiss through the windows”; or inserting a vowel sound to separate the consonants—thrustis, deskis. Clusters of three consonants together are particularly vulnerable in American English—look at handkerchief and grandfather.

The point we are making is that this kind of slipshod pronunciation, if it goes on long enough, results in silent letters and so in unphonetic spelling. An example is the difficult /x/ sound represented by the gh in words like light and knight—a sound we still have in a Scottish accent. The kn sound is difficult, too, and so we have dropped the /k/ part. Chaucer starts his description of the first Canterbury pilgrim by saying “A knicht there was . . .” We still spell the word about the same way as he did, but our pronunciation no longer reflects the spelling.

The other major process of sound change resulting from human laziness has to do with vowels. We have a strong tendency not to pronounce unaccented vowels carefully, but to level them all off into the schwa or neutral vowel /ə/. The result is that we have almost innumerable spellings for this sound. Just for example, look at a series like summary, memory, tottery, where that middle vowel sound is about the same in each case but the spelling is different; you simply can't tell from the sound of the word which way it ought to be spelled. Sometimes this process continues: once the vowel has been leveled to /ə/, we stress it less and less until it disappears altogether, so that we pronounce the word sumry or memry, and the spelling and pronunciation are still farther apart. If this loss of the vowel happens to bring three consonants together, then the first process goes into action again to drop one of them out, so that a long word may be worn right down to a nub.

William R. Bowden, a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Haverford College, who holds a master's degree from Duke and his Ph.D. from Yale, has been a Dickinson teacher since 1948. He is the author of The English Dramatic Lyric, 1603-1642, published in 1951 by Yale University Press as part of the Yale Studies in English. His articles have appeared in the Shakespeare Quarterly, Explicator, College English, which is a publication of the National Council of Teachers of English, and other journals. He frequently serves as a reader for the Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J.

This loss of vowels was the means by which most of the old inflectional endings became lost from the English language. Old English had as many case endings as Latin or German, but they leveled out and disappeared, leaving their traces only in the spelling problems raised by a very large number of silent final e's as in words like love and in the distinction in spelling between long and short vowels as in din and dine—one of the stickiest aspects of our whole spelling problem. Probably the average young man knows whether he wants to win a girl or wine her, but I suspect half the people in the United States aren't sure whether they have been in the dinning room or the dining room, at least so far as spelling is concerned.

And then English experienced something that has never been satisfactorily explained: the Great Vowel Shift. Between the time of Chaucer and that of Shakespeare, the pronunciation of most of our vowels changed. They lost the so-called continental values that they have in Latin or French or German, and took on their modern English values. And since this happened at about the same time as the introduction of the printing press, it meant that English spelling was fixed or made permanent out of line with English pronunciation and the pronunciation of all the other European languages.

SO MUCH for spelling problems arising from sound shifts. Those arising from the borrowing of words from other languages are equally important but a little simpler to explain. Most languages do borrow words from their neighbors as the need arises, but English has always done more of this than the others. In fact, one of the qualities that are supposed to make English potentially a world language is the fact that no matter what nationality a person is, he will find enough words from his own language in English to make him feel at home. Now, all this borrowing has been an excellent thing for the language; it has given us a vocabulary of tremendous range and flexibility. But it has caused problems in spelling.

The biggest of these problems is that if we retain the original or foreign spelling, we come up with multiple spellings for a single sound, depending on the language from which the word is borrowed. For instance, compare unique, bisque, and quay with synecdoche and chaos. The words of French background spell the /k/ sound with that qu we mentioned before, the Greek words with the ch. Look at the series folk (Germanic), physical (Greek), and folio (Latin)—or, more striking, the series cow, count, sauerkraut, where we spell the same vowel sound three different ways in words from three different language backgrounds.

Now, obviously we could compromise here by respelling borrowed words to conform to English patterns:

pholk	fysical	pholio
cow	cownt	sowerkrowt

but the result would look pretty funny until we got used to it—we might wonder what we were gaining. Besides, we have always attached prestige value to the foreign spellings and have imputed culture to the people who can pronounce these borrowed words in the foreign way; we are hardly likely to change our minds about this. Thus one British writer has offered the spelling orderve for hors d'oeuvres. This is both logical and simple; but it just isn't likely to be accepted. We shall probably continue to keep borrowed words as we find them, no matter how illogical their spelling is according to English standards, if we had standards.

FINALLY, we spoke of the effects of just plain tinkering with the language. Some of these are the result of unfortunate scholarship. Thus, the Latin word superanus went into Old French as soverain, and probably should have kept much the same form in English except that people apparently thought the word was related to reign; this led them to put that useless and illogical g into sovereign. Again, the Old English igland should have become iland, but people confused it with the unrelated French isle, and so we got our illogical island.

However, the effects of tinkering have been very slight. Why, then, in defiance of all the principles of emphasis we insist on "freshman English, have I treated them last? Well, chiefly because they offer a transition of sorts into the subject of what effect tinkering is likely to have in the future. In other words, is there a way out of this jungle?

You all know that the problems raised by our chaotic spelling have been recognized for a long time, and that the roster of those who have suggested reforms includes a great many famous names: Noah Webster, Benjamin Franklin, George Bernard Shaw, Andrew Carnegie, and Theodore Roosevelt. But the story of these past attempts at spelling reforms is too long and too unhappy to go into here. Let us turn our eyes to the future.

There seem to be three possible ways of approaching spelling reform. First, there is simplified spelling:

He said zat muni kud be put tu infinitli mor praktikl us if it wer devoted tu rel edukashn. (he said that money could be put to infinitely more practical use if it were devoted to real education).

Second, there is phonetic spelling:

רז און שטח, זיך צו פארקלערן.
 שפילן, פארקלערן קען עס
 זיך צו פארקלערן קען עס.

This translates into the Lord's Prayer

And third, there is the possibility of leaving our spelling as it is and changing our pronunciation to conform to the spelling. This is not likely to happen, because, among other disadvantages, it would mean that literate people would no longer be able to talk to illiterate people.

The principal argument for spelling reform is that it would bring about enormous savings in time and money. Dr. Godfrey Dewey of the Simplified Spelling Board has estimated that the equivalent of a full year of every child's school time goes into trying to learn to spell. He estimates further that we spend a billion dollars a year in trying to teach spelling. And finally, he argues that this process results in the complete atrophy of the child's logical faculties. For example, little Johnny learns to spell coal and foal; by a perfectly logical analogy, when he is asked to spell mole he spells it moal and gets it wrong. Then he comes up against /bol/, which can be bole if it is the trunk of a tree, but when he spells it this way it turns out that the teacher was talking about a cereal dish and that it should have been spelled bowl. Rowl is wrong for what the bowling ball does, however; that is roll. A laboratory rat that had been treated this way would become psychotic. Little Johnny is made of sterner stuff; his reaction is to forswear the use of logic. And little Ivan and little Fidel, who don't have to learn English spelling, leave little Johnny away behind.

Well, this is part of it. Other arguments start from a word like though. If we spelled it tho, we would be saving three letters out of six. It would take a writer only half as long to write it, a typesetter only half as long to set it up. It would take only half as much wood-pulp for the paper, which would mean that half the trees could remain standing to prevent floods and save lives. If all the words were reduced by half in this way, twice as many could go on a page; a book would need to be only half as thick to say the same thing, and therefore a reader could read it in half the time, thereby gaining time to read another book that he might not otherwise have read at all. Of course I'm exaggerating the argument, but you get the idea.

On the other side of the argument, the opponents of spelling reform point out that phonetic spelling would make it difficult to distinguish between homophones. If we spelled according to pronunciation, how could we tell, for instance, whether the girl in the circus was riding bareback or bearback? Moreover, there is an advantage to being able to look at a word like zealous and see by its spelling that it is apparently an adjective formed from zeal; this advantage would be lost if we spelled zealous as we pronounce it.

Then there is the rationalistic argument that human beings are apathetic about things that don't bother them directly; they are innately conservative and resist any kind of change; and they all hold the delusion that the familiar is beautiful, whereas the unfamiliar is ugly, or at least comical. Many a proposal for spelling reform has died an untimely death as soon as people have seen how a printed page would look following its rules. Or for a more specific example, someone has suggested that a knight might not mind too much being called a nite, but that he certainly would never endure being called a nit.

Finally, there is the objection that a thoroughgoing spelling reform would mean that all our books, magazines, newspapers, all our libraries, even all our diaries, would immediately be in a foreign language, virtually. Everyone would have to learn to read all over again, and everything now in print would have to be reprinted. Besides, as we have seen, pronunciation is constantly changing. Under a logical spelling reform, spelling would have to change constantly to keep up with pronunciation. But the value of writing and printing is that they are permanent. English spelling became more or less fixed around 1650, and we have no difficulty in reading anything printed in English since then. Phonetic spelling would destroy this quality of permanence and uniformity.

What is likely to happen? Your guess is as good as mine. On the one hand, human inertia has always been an almost insuperable force. We are creatures of habit. We could probably eliminate both sinus trouble and dislocated sacroiliacs merely by walking on all fours—but we'll keep on walking on our hind legs. How likely, then, are we to undergo anything as troublesome as learning to read all over again?

On the other hand, we might conceivably have an intellectual breakthrough as far-reaching in scope as the industrial revolution of the 19th century or the scientific revolution of the 20th. It's hard to see these things coming.

There may be a shadow of things to come in advertising spelling—maybe we hear the sound of the future in Kix, Trix, and Gleem. Maybe the wave of the future will be a wave of phonetic Nehi rather than of unphonetic orange phosphate. But I can offer one word of advice. If the wave of phonetic spelling is on the way, it won't reach freshman English for a while.

A Visit To Nisbet's Church

Henry Logan, Esq. '10

IN COMPANY with Mrs. Logan and Professor Thomson this summer, I visited the Parish Church of Montrose, Scotland. This is the church where Dr. Nisbet preached at the time he was called to the Presidency of Dickinson.

This is a very old historical church. Apparently there were services in Montrose from almost the beginning of Christianity in Scotland. The present records appear to date from the middle of the Twelfth Century and are, of course, fragmentary.

Dr. Nisbet preached in what is referred to as the Pre-Reformation Church. The present edifice has been entirely rebuilt since his time and only a part of the wall and some of the old gravestones were there at the time he served this congregation.

Dr. Nisbet entered the University of Edinburgh in 1752 and appears to have been graduated in 1754 when he entered Divinity School. He supported himself by engagements as an editor of a popular periodical publication. He continued in the Divinity School for six years when he was called to supply the Gorbals "Chapel of Ease" in Glasgow.

This congregation had stipulated that they would furnish him with a house as well as pay his salary. They failed to provide the house, and the context of Dr. Nisbet's farewell sermon of January 25, 1764, when he resigned to accept the call to Montrose, was taken from Acts 28-30 "And Paul dwelt two whole years in his own hired house and received all that came in unto him."

Mr. Couper, the regular Minister at Montrose, needed an assistant and Dr. Nisbet was recommended. He was called at a salary of 50 pounds sterling yearly, to be paid at Whitsunday and Martinmas, and the call provided that he was to succeed when the Senior Minister retired. In accordance with the Laws of Scotland this call had to be approved by the King and the royal consent of King George was given at the Court of St. James on November 25, 1763.

Dr. Nisbet was married to Annie Tweedie at Montrose on June 18, 1766.

According to the church-history, in 1766, on the death of the Reverend Dr. Finlay, president of the College of New Jersey (Princeton), Dr. Nisbet was offered this position on the recommendation of Dr. Witherspoon, who had been offered the appointment and refused. It is my understanding that the records of Princeton do not show that Dr. Nisbet was ever actually offered the presidency. It does appear that Dr. Benjamin Rush, who was studying in Edinburgh at the time, was asked to recommend a successor to Dr. Finlay, that Dr. Rush discussed the matter with Dr. Witherspoon, and Dr. Witherspoon withdrew his refusal and became one of the most famous presidents of Princeton and a signer of the Declaration of Independence.

In any event, Dr. Nisbet remained in Montrose until 1784, when he was elected president of Dickinson.

There are many interesting stories of Dr. Nisbet's pastorate at Montrose. He was regarded as a walking library. When plans were being made for a lunatic asylum a question arose as to how far the walls were to extend, and Dr. Nisbet suggested that they be made around the whole town. At another time he was disappointed with the election of the Town Council and chose for his text: "Is there not a wise man among you that you have chosen a fool to rule over you?" On another occasion he rode into the town on horseback. The Magistrates met him and said: "Oh, Mr. Nisbet, you are on a high horse today—your Master rode on an ass." Dr. Nisbet replied: "Yes, but all the asses were made into Councillors yesterday."

While in England, if you visit old Carlisle and stop at the Crown and Mitre you will find a picture of Dr. Edell being introduced to Princess Margaret.

The author received both bachelor's and master's degrees from Dickinson. In 1917 he received a law degree from Brooklyn Law School and has been in the private practice of law since that time. He was elected to the Board of Trustees of Dickinson in 1953 and is presently a member of the Finance Committee. A member of Theta Chi and a Mason, he has been secretary of the Lawyer's Club of Brooklyn for over 25 years.

Backstage at

Othello

OTHELLO was the 31st major production of The Mermaid Players, an extra-curricular activity organized by Prof. Irvine Smith in 1952. Since its inception the Players has grown to become the most active student program with more than ten per cent of the student body active in each of the major productions. Under the direction of David Brubaker, the drama professor for the past six years, this group has taken on increasingly more ambitious productions, with their recent performance of Othello an outstanding example of the depth which The Mermaid Players have achieved.

The success of Othello depends largely upon the actor playing the title role. In their production, the Mermaid Players had an impressive Othello in the person of Fred Morsell, a senior from Brooklyn, N. Y. The excellent speaking voice, the distinguished personality, and the commanding personality which Mr. Morsell brought to the role resulted in a genuinely effective performance. He was ably backed by a supporting cast which evidenced a real skill in the dramatic arts and a production crew which did justice to its cast.

The truly amazing feat in the production was that it was staged in the Belles Lettres Hall in Denny. The staging and performances were so effectively executed that the audience was scarcely aware of the location of the theatre. As the following pictures are designed to portray, this production was all the more remarkable because of the limitations under which the play was staged. The presentation of Othello reveals what a group of nearly 100 students can do with their interest and enthusiasm, their work and their will despite the extra effort and discipline demanded by a lack of facilities.

Dear Fellow Alumni:

Personal solicitation for the 1962 Dickinson College Alumni Fund is now underway. An opportunity will be presented to each alumnus to give direct and immediate support to Alma Mater as the College strives to maintain its independent, liberal arts education for today's young men and women.

A gift to Dickinson is in fact more than aid to a college. It is also a vote in support of one of the bulwarks of American liberty: the free giving of our citizens to free institutions.

The response of Dickinson alumni to the Annual Fund has been a notable one. It is more important than ever before that it continue to be notable. Those institutions where alumni loyalty speaks in large numbers of contributors and in a significant total of dollar support are the only independent institutions which will survive to keep alive for future generations the best in liberal arts education. Furthermore, of timely importance is the fact that foundations and corporate supporters look to the figures for alumni support when considering grants to colleges. Dickinson deserves to continue to be a college whose story tells of strong and widespread alumni participation. I urge your generous participation in the Fund this year.

The Dickinsonian who communicates with you about the Fund is a volunteer. We are proud of the loyal band of men and women who are giving time to help you strengthen your College. I am confident that your response to your fellow alumnus will be a generous one.

Mrs. Rubendall and I extend to you a cordial invitation to return to the campus for Commencement weekend, June 1, 2, and 3. Nothing takes the place of a "refresher" visit to the scenes and personalities of one's college years.

Faithfully yours,

Howard L. Rubendall

THE MERMAID BECKONS

THE loveliness of the campus in its finest season, the joy of renewed friendships, the opportunity to learn what course Dickinson will take under its new administration, and the festive atmosphere of the Commencement season will combine to lure alumni from all over the land to Carlisle on June 1, 2 and 3.

The superintendent of grounds and buildings and his loyal crew are working hard to insure the loveliness of the most beautiful campus in the country. The Alumni Council, the reunion chairmen, and many others are at work on plans for your enjoyment. The President is readying himself for the onslaught of questions at the General Alumni Association meeting. The festive atmosphere will come to life by your presence.

The meeting of the General Alumni Association on Saturday morning at 11:00 in Memorial Hall is expected to bring the same enthusiasm that was evident at the Homecoming meeting. As at that meeting, a panel will be present to answer any alumni questions and to explain what is in the future for Dickinson. At the Alumni Luncheon the Class of 1912, celebrating its fiftieth reunion, will be welcomed into the newly formed "Senior Alumni" by chairman Lydia M. Gooding, '10. Following the luncheon Professors Emeriti Herbert Wing, Jr. and Ralph Schecter will preside at a reunion lecture designed to return all alumni to the days they spent at the feet of these outstanding teachers. An opportunity to greet the President and his Lady will be provided at an afternoon reception at the President's Home. In the evening, following the fraternity and sorority banquets, the alumni will be able to enjoy the peacefulness of the campus mingled with the martial offerings of the Carlisle Band. It will be a week-end you will not want to miss.

FOUR HONORARY DEGREES TO BE GRANTED AT THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

James Morgan Read

Richard Cunningham
Patterson, Jr.

Alvin Blocksom Biscoe

Frank Withington Montgomery

JAMES MORGAN READ, '29, president of Wilmington College, will receive the degree of Doctor of Laws. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Dickinson, Dr. Read served as United Nations Deputy High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva, Switzerland, from 1951 until his appointment as the 13th president of Wilmington College in October, 1960.

He received a doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Marburg, Germany, in 1932 and served on the faculties of the Dickinson Junior College, Williamsport and the University of Louisville until he joined the Civilian Public Service in 1943. In 1946, he was appointed a representative of the American Friends Service Committee and was sent to Germany to carry on negotiations regarding relief shipments to Germany. He served with the American Friends Committee in various capacities until 1950 when he was appointed by the United States Department of State to become Chief of the Division of Education and Cultural Relations in the Office of the U. S. High Commissioner for Germany, which job he held until his appointment with the United Nations in 1951.

RICHARD CUNNINGHAM PATTERSON, JR., the son of Richard C. Patterson of the Class of 1880, who is Commissioner of the Department of Commerce and Public Events in New York City, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. A graduate of the Columbia University's School of Mines in 1912, he began his career in the gold mines of South Dakota. He became assistant to the President of the J. G. White Engineering Corporation in 1920. He later joined E. I. duPont de Nemours and represented this firm in China. He was Executive Vice President and Director of the National Broadcasting Company from 1932 to 1936 and Chairman of the Board of RKO from 1940 to 1944.

In public service, he served as Commissioner of Correction for New York City and was also a Commissioner of the City Parole Board. He was assistant Secretary of Commerce of the United States during 1938-39. He was appointed Ambassador to Yugoslavia in 1944. He served in this capacity until 1947 when he was named Ambassador to Guatemala. He became Minister to Switzerland in 1951 and resigned in 1953. He has been Commissioner of the Department of Commerce and Public Events since 1954.

He served in World War I as a Captain and later Major with the Engineers. He has been decorated by 32 foreign countries and has received two honorary degrees—an honorary LL.D. from Wagner in 1958 and a Doctor of Civil Law in 1959 from Pace. A director of twelve companies, he is a member of the American Legion, Beta Theta Pi, the Pilgrims, the Business Council, the Executive Council of the World's Fair and the Council of Foreign Relations.

ALVIN B. BISCOE, who will celebrate the 35th reunion of his Class of 1927, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Science. He received a master's degree from Duke University in 1928 and a Ph.D. from Virginia in 1932. He served as a professor of Economics at the University of Virginia and Bucknell University until his appointment in 1945 as Dean of the College of Business Administration at the University of Georgia in 1945. He was appointed Dean of Faculties and Professor of Economics in 1947. He serves also as coordinator of the Army and Air Force ROTC programs at Georgia. From 1958 to 1961, he was chairman of the Southern Conference of Academic Vice Presidents and Deans. During World War II, he served on the War Labor Board, and as a private arbitrator, he has been chairman of many arbitration panels. A member of Phi Beta Kappa at Dickinson, he was a charter member of Omicron Delta Kappa and first president of Dickinson's Circle.

FRANK W. MONTGOMERY, superintendent of the Sunbury District of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the Methodist Church, will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. A graduate of Juniata College, he received his S.T.B. from Boston University School of Theology in 1933. He held charges in Vermont and Massachusetts before moving to the Central Pennsylvania Conference in 1933, where he served for 14 years before his appointment in 1947 to St. Paul's Church and the Wesley Foundation at the Pennsylvania State University. In the ten years he served at State College, he saw two new educational buildings erected. In 1957, he was appointed to his present position as District Superintendent of the Sunbury District. He has served two terms on the Conference Board of Trustees and has represented the Conference on several occasions at general church conferences.

JOHN W. McCONNELL, '29, Dean of Cornell University's School of Industrial Labor Relations, will be the Commencement speaker. Dr. McConnell received the honorary degree of Doctor of Science from his alma mater in 1959. A Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Dickinson, he is also a member of Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Kappa Sigma. Upon his graduation he taught at the American University at Cairo, Egypt until 1932. He returned to this country and was a research assistant in the Institute of Human Relations at Yale while a graduate student. He received a Ph.D. degree in 1932 and taught economics and sociology at American and New York Universities until he went to Cornell in 1946. He was named Dean of the Graduate School of Cornell in 1955 and was appointed to his present position in 1961. A recognized authority in the field of industrial relations, he has served on numerous state and federal boards, is the author of several books and is a frequent contributor to professional journals.

The Baccalaureate address will be delivered by Howard L. Rubendall '31, President of Dickinson College.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"When men differ in opinion, both sides ought equally to have the advantage of being heard by the public."

—BENJAMIN FRANKLIN

To the Editor:

. . . To me, the most discouraging development at Dickinson over the past fifteen years has been the gradual emergence of religious affiliation as a dominant factor in the Dickinson program. When I entered Dickinson in 1947, my impression was that it was a good, liberal, secular, small college and I attended because I wanted education, not conversion. Recently I notice increasing references to "Christian education" or the like in our alumni publications. Whatever one's feeling about the importance of religion in life, it should not be confused with the educational process; undue stress on religion as an educational platform may not necessarily be antithetical to free discussion in say, a sociology or a contemporary religious class, but it sometimes is. Moreover, I think this kind of orientation and the printed manifestations of it must certainly be offensive to our many loyal alumni who are not Christians but who come from equally valid ethical or religious systems.

FREDERICK K. SPIES '50

Fayetteville, Arkansas

To The Editor:

Thank you for an advance copy of THE ALUMNUS. It's good to get a pre-look at a magazine that is ingratiating itself with one who in early years toiled on the staff.

From what I learn all quarters of the alumni globe seem pleased with the new order of things. Perhaps it takes some of us oldsters a little more time to accommodate ourselves to change than for the beardless generations, but the accommodation progresses.

I still think much emphasis should continue to go on NEWS of alumni either in personal or more extensive form. Anything that makes a Dickinsonian proud that he is a Dickinsonian is a great stimulant of interest and loyalty and a great morale builder. But why should I preach to one who needs it not?

I sometimes wonder if my name on the masthead has any point or value. In other days perhaps the name belonged there. If the name is helpful in any way, let it stay; if not this is your permit to cast it aside without ceremony or ritual.

DEAN HOFFMAN, '02

St. Petersburg, Florida

Ed. Note: In answer to Dean Hoffman's last paragraph and for the edification of all of our alumni, his name appears on the masthead for a very good reason. The retired editor and general manager of the Harrisburg Patriot, Dean Hoffman, with Gilbert Malcolm, was instrumental in publishing the first Dickinson ALUMNUS in May 1923. As associate editor, he helped to bring the infant publication to full maturity. The editors are grateful for his gracious comments on our endeavors. We will continue to depend upon his experienced counsel as well as that of the other honorary editor, Gilbert Malcolm.

THE ALUMNI CLUB SEASON OPENS

Gulf Coast

The Florida Gulf Coast Club of Dickinson held its 1962 annual dinner meeting on Friday, February 23, at the Imperial House, near Madeira Beach, west of St. Petersburg. Thirty-two attended the dinner.

Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Malcolm were the honored guests. Dr. Malcolm entertained the group with an interesting speech in his usual jovial manner. Following his talk on developments at the College, everyone enjoyed singing campus songs.

Dean Hoffman, II, '41, presided at a short business meeting. A new slate of officers was elected for the ensuing two-year period: president, Dr. Donald H. Foster, '49; vice president, William F. Depp, '40; secretary, Louise Summalt Richards, '24, and treasurer, Florence Everhart Kidder, '22.

Miami

Twenty-two enthusiastic alumni and friends of the College attended the annual dinner meeting of the Miami Club. Following dinner, Dr. Gilbert Malcolm treated the guests with his usual entertaining address, as he brought those in attendance up to date on developments at Dickinson.

Following a short business meeting at which Howard Crabtree, '35, was elected president and Elizabeth Townsend Jacobs, '42, was elected secretary-treasurer, the group was led in singing by Gilbert Malcolm, who was accompanied by Dorothy Heck Houlberg, '50, on her accordion.

New York Alumnae Club

Twenty-five members and friends of the Dickinson Alumnae Club of New York met on March 3 for the club's annual theater party. The group lunched at Schrafft's on Times Square and then went to the Majestic Theater to see "Camelot." Although the theater party was essentially a social occasion and no business meeting as such was held, tentative plans were made to hold the club's fall luncheon in Summit, New Jersey.

Members who attended the affair were: Mildred Masonheimer Long, '21; Ethel Riker Rickenbacher, '21; Mildred Weir Woodward, '20; Edna Moyer Hand, '20; Ruth Cain Conner, '30; Elinor Green Spencer, '30; Linette Lee, '09; Marcia Mathews Knapp, '43; Carolyn Snyder Turk, '46; Matilda Chubb, '46; Christine Keown Kahn, '36; Mildred Conklin Page, '20, and Pauline Bloser Gibson, '40.

The contemporary club tries to keep alive the original purposes of the group—"to unite alumnae living in or near New York City, to further pleasant social communications, to keep alive memories and ideals of their college days, to emphasize and make more effective the culture and training afforded them at the venerable institution, and to welcome and befriend any of the same Alma Mater who find themselves strangers in the metropolitan area."

All alumnae in the New York area may belong to this club and are welcome to attend the fall luncheon which is usually held in New Jersey and the theater party which takes place in New York City in February or March. Any interested alumnae should contact the secretary for further information.

Chicago

On March 6, thirty-eight alumni and spouses accepted the kind invitation of Mary Sharp Foucht to be her guests at the South Shore Country Club in Chicago for a meeting of the Dickinson Club of Chicago. Dr. Rubendall and Alumni Secretary Thomas Young represented the College and brought those in attendance up to date on developments on the campus. Dr. Rubendall's talk on the present day purposes of a liberal arts college, such as Dickinson, was enthusiastically received by the alumni.

Club president, John W. Garrett, '19, presided over a short business meeting in which a new slate of officers was elected. The following are the newly installed officers: Charles W. Naylor, '54, president; William Ragolio, '35, vice president; Elsie Burkhard BeHanna, '27, secretary, and Mary Romach Gray, '27, treasurer. Toastmaster John L. Clarkson, '11, gave Trustee Samuel W. Witwer, '30, parent Sidney Gorham, Professor Emeritus Mary B. Taintor, and hostess Mary Sharp Foucht an opportunity to say a few words.

Del-Mar-Va

The annual summer meeting of the Dickinson Club of the Del-Mar-Va Peninsula will be held on Friday, August 3.

Philadelphia

Theodore H. Ely, '51, vice president of the Philadelphia Club has organized a luncheon club for alumni in the Philadelphia area. The first luncheon was held on April 25 in the Coffee Shop of the Bellevue Stratford Hotel and subsequent luncheons will be held every Wednesday. Interested alumni are to contact the club's vice president Theodore H. Ely, 3 Madeline Drive, Malvern, Pa., for further details.

Washington

The executive committee of the Washington Club of Dickinson has initiated a monthly luncheon meeting. The first of these meetings was held on April 23. Subsequent meetings will be held each fourth Monday at O'Donnell's Restaurant, 1331 E St., near the Federal Triangle. At the first meeting, the club entertained the four Dickinson students who are spending a semester at American University under the Washington Semester program. Alumni who live in, near or visit Washington should contact David Theall, president of the Washington Club at 5904 Illinois Avenue, McLean, Va., for further details.

PHI BETA KAPPA CELEBRATES ITS

DIAMOND ANNIVERSARY

by Herbert Wing, Jr., Professor Emeritus

Professor Henry Clay Whiting, one of the founding fathers of Phi Beta Kappa at Dickinson.

THE Dickinson College Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, the Alpha of Pennsylvania, celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of its establishment on Thursday, April 26, 1962. The observance of a notable event in the history of the college was held in connection with the traditional program of Founder's Day of the college.

Professor Eugene Parker Chase of Lafayette College, a senator of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, spoke at the eleven o'clock assembly in Bosler Hall on "The United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa." Chase was the principal speaker in December, 1951, when Dickinson, like the other chapters, observed the founding of the original chapter at the College of William and Mary on December 5, 1776. The other chapters of the Society in Pennsylvania and nearly a dozen of the older institutions outside the state were invited to send delegates to participate in Dickinson's celebration.

At the luncheon following the assembly, Dr. William Sloane, president of the local chapter, presided. He introduced the participants and some of the visitors. All the living members of the Alpha chapter were invited to attend, as well as the faculty and trustees. Professor Herbert Wing, Jr. spoke briefly regarding the history of the college and its interest in Phi Beta Kappa.

The other events of the day included the traditional ceremonies at the grave of the first president of the college, Dr. Charles Nisbet, at which Professor Milton E. Flower spoke on the era of the founding of the college, and students laid a wreath on the grave. A tea in Bosler Hall at 3:30 was arranged by Professor Charles Sellers and his library staff. Visitors to Bosler were interested in the historical exhibits which were on display, including some portraits and the keys of early members of our chapter.

The Phi Beta Kappa charter granted to Dickinson College in 1887 was the first issued by the newly formed United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa. The Society was organized on December 5, 1776 at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia, and was comprised of some undergraduates who wished to foster the basic qualities of friendship, morality, and literature. Like other organizations of the eighteenth century, it was a combination of what we would call a social fraternity and a literary

Priestley and Glover Awards Presented

Robert B. Woodward of Harvard receives this year's Priestly Award

Edward U. Condon receives the Glover Medal from Dr. Rubendall

DICKINSON'S highly respected awards for scientific achievements—the Priestley Award and the John Glover Medal—have gone this year to a noted organic chemist at Harvard and to a leading physicist from St. Louis.

Robert B. Woodward, whose synthesis of chlorophyll and many other complex molecules has been described as one of the most spectacular features of organic chemistry in recent years, received the Priestley Award on March 31. Two weeks later Edward U. Condon, a former president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, who was an adviser on atomic energy to the 79th Congress, accepted the Glover Medal and delivered the Glover Lecture.

Dr. Woodward became the 11th recipient of the Priestley Award. The ceremony, which was conducted by President Rubendall, assisted by Dean Roger E. Nelson and Prof. Horace E. Rogers, was a feature of the annual Priestley Celebration and was witnessed by 500 persons in Bosler Hall, including 100 members of the Pennsylvania Association of College Chemistry Teachers who were on the campus for their annual two-day meeting, and by many members of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Section, American Chemical Society. In the award address, the scientist described how he and his assistants reconstructed the chlorophyll molecule.

Dr. Woodward, who has been honored many times for his achievements, was on the campus for two nights and a day and became the first of the Priestley recipients to spend a considerable time with the students. He spoke informally to several chemistry classes, visited a biology lab section and lunched with students and the science faculty.

On his departure for Harvard, where he is Donner Professor of Science, he said he took with him "a very fine impression" of the intellectual climate at Dickinson and its interest in science.

Dr. Condon, fourth winner of the Glover Award, was honored for his contributions to the science of physics. A former Princeton professor and since 1957 head of the physics department at Washington University, St. Louis, he was president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1953 and spent five years in Washington, D.C., as director of the U.S. Bureau of Standards.

In his lecture he reviewed the main lines of progress in the physics of the last half-century and made some predictions for the next 50 years. He thought it safe to predict that the social and political changes occurring in India, Indonesia, Africa and South America will soon make them contributors to the growing stream of scientific work. Another prediction was that ways will be found in the next decade to slow down the armaments race and eventually to achieve disarmament.

Dr. Condon was on the campus for a full day and spent most of it in the Tome Physics Building, speaking to classes, inspecting the various labs and conferring with the physics faculty. His host and guide was Prof. Henry L. Yeagley, department chairman, who arranged the 1962 Glover lecture and Award ceremony.

COLLEGE

■ The faculty has introduced a new and, as far as the College knows, original system of classroom auditing which encourages students to broaden and enrich their course of studies and to earn extra credits. Under the system, any student in good standing who carries at least 16 hours of regular work may register to audit up to six hours. If after six weeks he finds he is capable of the added work and if the instructor approves, he may convert his audit registration to regular registration for credit. He may choose to continue auditing or to drop out. An advantage of the plan is the opportunity it provides the student to test his ability to take work beyond the normal load and to make the test without incurring the risk of a failure. Gifted students will be able to accumulate up to 36 additional credits over the four years, the equivalent of a whole year of regular work. Introduced in January, the system has increased substantially the number of students taking extra work. The number is expected to grow.

■ By faculty action taken in March, Dickinson students can now work for majors in fine arts and music. The action was natural and inevitable in light of the steady growth of the two departments in student interest and course offerings since the departments were created a few years ago. The fine arts department, which will take on a new instructor next fall, will require 30 semester hours for a major; music will require 34 hours.

FACULTY

■ The fast-growing Department of Fine Arts has a new chairman in the person of Dr. Donald E. Gordon, a Harvard graduate, who came to the Dickinson faculty in 1960. His appointment to the chairmanship was announced in March by President Rubendall.

Professor Donald E. Gordon

A native of New York City, Dr. Gordon graduated in 1952 from Harvard where he obtained his master's degree in 1953 and his Ph.D. in 1960. A U.S. government scholarship enabled him to spend the 1953-54 term in Germany where he studied art history at the University of Hamburg and observed the work of modern Germany painters.

His doctoral work was in the field of the history of art with a specialization in 20th Century German art, primarily the graphic work of Ernest Kirchner. A painter whose medium is oils, he studied at the Art Students League, New York, in 1958-59.

The Fine Arts Department has had a remarkable growth since 1947 when it was established. About 175 students are taking one or more of its courses this term. Some of Dr. Gordon's classes are too large for the ordinary classroom and meet in the Bosler Hall auditorium. Studio courses with Prof. John Pusey, the muralist, who is the artist-in-residence, are quite popular. These are given in the Dickinson Art Center.

The department seeks to provide the student with objective methods of understanding the historical and aesthetic significance of the visual arts. Introductory courses are shaped to increase the student's visual perception, either through study of the art of major civilizations or through studio practice. In courses devoted to specific periods, the works of art are studied in relation to the historical and cultural background; problems of critical interpretation and evaluation are considered.

■ Prof. Nancy Lee Beaty of the English Department will teach in Greece during the 1962-1963 term under the State Department teacher exchange program. She will be assigned to a school by the Greek government following a month of orientation at Spetsai, beginning Aug. 1.

■ For the ninth consecutive year, Prof. Roberto Ruiz will teach at the Middlebury College Spanish School during the coming summer. The school offers advanced graduate courses only, and only native speakers are engaged for the faculty.

■ Assistant Professor Andrew Craig Houston of the Economics Depart-

Rapid progress has been made on the construction of the new women's dormitory since Feb. 8 when ground was broken by President Rubendall, Dean of Women Barbara Whismeyer, and several co-eds.

The four-story stone structure going up on the Rush campus between Drayer Hall and the Law School's Sadler Curtilage will house 125 women students and will cost approximately $1,000,000. The Federal government has provided a loan of $825,000, repayable over 35 years, for the building. The college will be responsible for certain furnishings and equipment which will cost an additional $150,000.

Completion is scheduled for August, 1963.

ment received his Doctor of Philosophy degree in March from Pennsylvania State University. His thesis was The Stockholm School, A Study of the Evolution of Economic Theory. Prof. Houston graduated with honors from Penn State in 1951 and spent the next three years in Sweden, where he earned a diploma at the University of Stockholm School for English Speaking Students and attended graduate seminars in economics at the university. He came to the Dickinson faculty in 1956.

Professors Daniel and Barbara McDonald

■ The high merit of the separate research projects of Dickinson biologists, Daniel and Barbara McDonald, continue to win support from government sources. Mrs. McDonald received a grant of $18,700 from the National Science Foundation in February, shortly after her husband was awarded one of $16,500 by the U.S. Public Health Service, his fifth since 1958. Mrs. McDonald's grant, her third in five years and one of the largest ever received at the College for independent research, extends her study of the components of the organism Tetrahymena for content of deoxyribonucleic acid, known as DNA, which is believed to transmit hereditary characteristics. Her husband's research, which was mentioned in the February number of THE ALUMNUS in the announcement of his latest grant, has to do with population and radiation genetics. Together the McDonalds have brought to Dickinson nearly $77,000 in research grants. They came to the faculty in 1957. Daniel is a graduate of Siena College, Barbara of Simmons College. Both have their doctorate from Columbia.

STUDENTS

■ Thirty-one seniors are doing honors work this academic year. Eighteen of them are men. The English Department leads with eight honors students, followed by chemistry with six, biology four, economics three and physics, history and sociology two each. Spanish, psychology, political science and philosophy have one each.

■ Carol E. Jones, the Senior Sophister, has received a Fulbright grant covering costs of travel, tuition, books and board for a year's study abroad. She plans to take the year at the Sorbonne under the Middlebury College Study Abroad program. Carol, a French major, lives in Hopewell, N. J.

■ Rod J. Pera, a Dickinson senior from Harrisburg, Pa., won the highest elective office when 400 students from Pennsylvania colleges held their annual model national Congress in April. Rod was their choice for speaker.

■ The opening of a student-operated radio station on the campus was imminent as this issue of THE DICKINSONIAN ALUMNUS went to press. New wiring waited to carry programs into dormitories, residence halls and fraternity houses. The broadcasting studio in the music building was at the ready. WDCV is the culmination of several years of planning by dedicated, enthusiastic students who overcame many obstacles. It is sponsored by the Student Senate, which has promised the necessary financial support.

SPORTS

■ Dickinson's four winter sports teams finished in the red for the first time in a good many years. They won 20 of their contests and lost 27. Only the wrestlers won more often than they lost. Their fourth successive winning season found them posting a 7-4 record. The swimmers broke even in four dual meets and lost their "Little Three" crown to F. and M. in the annual triangular meet with the Diplomats and Gettysburg Bullets. The squash record was 5-6 and that of basketball, 4-13.

■ Perhaps the best overall winter sports performance was turned in by Co-Capt. Joe Icenhower of the wrestling team who won eight of his 10 matches, four of them on falls. The sturdy sophomore now owns a glittering 17-3 record for his two varsity seasons. He was named the most valuable member of the team. But for injuries and academic troubles that robbed Coach Glenn Flegal of the services of two of its finest wrestlers, the team might have matched the fine 9-1 record of the previous season.

■ Gene Becker, captain of the basketball team, scored 279 points which brought his four-year career total to 1,004, making him the second player in Dickinson history to exceed 1,000. The team's only senior, he fell 19 short of equalling the school record of 1,023 held by Ray Weaver, '58, who played only three seasons because the freshman rule was in effect while he was in college. Becker and Bill Shantzenbach, a junior, shared the most valuable player award.

■ While the swimming team could not match the super achievements of the four previous seasons, it altered the records considerably. Lance Rogers in the 220 and 440 freestyle events, Gus Bird in the individual medley and Doug Shatto in the 200 butterfly all lowered school standards. The former 440 freestyle record was held by Jack Whitmore, '51, and was the oldest in the book. John Talley, captain of Coach Dave Eavenson's team, earned the most valuable member award for the second straight year. Bird and Shatto will captain the 1962-63 team.

Record-breaker Lance Rogers

■ The squash team, which included Pitt, Penn and Navy among its opponents, did well in its second season. Bob LeCron, a junior, had the best individual record on eight victories in the 10 matches in which he competed. Whitney Smyth, the captain, was voted the most valuable player.

THE COLLEGE BOOKSTORE OFFERS

This is the traditional Liberty Arm Chair with the Dickinson College Seal. Sturdy and comfortable, it is made of birch finished in black with maple arms. The seal and trim are gold. Each chair is hand rubbed to a fine satiny finish. The price is $30.00 plus $1.20 Pennsylvania Sales Tax. It will be delivered directly from the factory by Railway Express, f.o.b. Gardner, Massachusetts.

This is a live recording of the December 15, 1961 Christmas concert of the 24 voice Dickinson College Concert Chorale and the 64 voice College Choir which was presented in the College Chapel. Featuring Bach's most famous motet, "Jesus Priceless Treasure," the record contains a fine mixture of sacred music and Christmas carols. The price is $5.00 plus $0.20 Pennsylvania Sales Tax and will be mailed to you from the College Bookstore.

1917

At the annual dinner of the Summit, N. J., Y.M.C.A. on March 5, Robert W. Woodward was honored in recognition of his service to youth. Active in Boy Scouts, Sunday School and Youth work with the Y.M.C.A. over the years, Col. Woodward is principal of the Summit Junior High School. He will retire from this position in June.

The many gifts of Boyd Lee Spahr, '00, president of the Board of Trustees, to the College Library have been recognized by a Who's Who in America Citation for Library Philanthropy.

The citation, which follows, appears in the 32nd biennial edition of Who's Who in America:

"A determined policy on the part of an individual to support and advance a college library is well exemplified in the amount and diversity of gifts by Dr. Boyd Lee Spahr, president of the Board of Trustees of Dickinson College, to this Carlisle, Pennsylvania, institution.

"He brought into being a large collection of archives, research materials, and works of art at a cost of over $40,000. Major gifts of $10,000 and $10,600 for building modernization and enlargement have been supplemented by many smaller amounts.

"The result has been the establishment of a library important not only to the college but to the entire surrounding Pennsylvania area, with an important collection of historical manuscripts numbering approximately 35,000."

Jackson Martindell, chairman of Marquis-Who's Who, Inc., publisher of Who's Who, said that the purpose of the citations is to encourage educational philanthropy in all its ramifications, as well as to honor the individual donor.

Twelve Dickinsonians have been named to the 32nd volume of Who's Who in America. In comparing the vocations of these new entrants with other liberal arts colleges, we have been impressed with the number that have been successful in the educational field. Generally speaking, it would seem that Dickinson is contributing generously to those areas in American life where service is a prime consideration.

In the state of Pennsylvania, Dickinson is preceded in number of new names by the Universities of Pennsylvania and Pittsburgh, Carnegie Institute of Technology, Lehigh, Swarthmore, Temple, Haverford, and Lafayette. In the nation, Dickinson stands 8th in the number of new names among co-educational, private, liberal arts colleges. We share this ranking with Grinnell, Beloit, and Pomona.

The Dickinson alumni named include: Milton J. Flower '31 and Benjamin D. James '34, both of the Dickinson faculty; Dr. Hugh B. Woodward '08, Newton E. Randolph '24, Dr. Norman N. Weisenfluh '24, W. Vernon Middleton '28, Dr. Paul E. Smith '30, Frederick A. Klemm '33, E. Donald Shapiro '53, Lawrence S. Pricher '39, David H. Jenkins, and Frederick M. Lange.

Special Mention

Adrian Zecha

A young man with a purpose is the description of a Dickinsonian who is outperforming his former employer at its own game—circulation of a magazine. With Time, Inc., for five years, Adrian Zecha, '52 left this company in December, 1961 to organize a new magazine. With only the idea of the need for a magazine to serve the increasingly important Asian market at that time, Adrian, in ten months, raised one and one-half million dollars, organized a staff of 99 employees, developed a circulation of three quarters of a million, and published the first issue of Asia Magazine in October 1961.

Very modest about his accomplishments, Adrian feels he filled a need—an outlet for advertising in the Asian market. Although 80 per cent of the capital was raised in Asia, three continents are represented with additional funds coming from the United States and Europe.

The greatest asset of any publication is talent. To obtain the talent needed for his venture he offered a unique stock participation plan which set aside 25 per cent of the entire company for the option of the employees. With the idea of a new magazine and this financial plan, Adrian was able to fill his staff with experienced men in the field. Six men were former fellow employees with Time, two came from Newsweek, and other magazines including Reader's Digest are represented also.

Distribution is Asia Magazine's greatest problem. The magnitude of the problem is demonstrated by the circulation figures for Time, Inc., which are 70,000, only one-tenth of the initial circulation of Asia Magazine. The magazine is printed in Tokyo and is shipped from Japan six weeks in advance of the dateline.

The Zecha "empire" has offices in seven cities. The headquarters are in Hong Kong. There are offices in Tokyo and Osaka, Japan, New York, Chicago, London, and Frankfurt, Germany.

The magazine which is patterned after the American "Sunday supplement" is carried by fifteen newspapers in fifteen different countries. Its international flavor is indicated by the fact that in these fifteen countries live fourteen nationalities. The magazine contains more meaningful articles than those found in the average Sunday supplement in the U. S. A., however. Among writing contributors are Nehru, and Menzis of Australia.

Presently an English language magazine, Adrian plans that it will be published in local languages within two years as the Asian standard of living increases. The optimistic outlook of the management is evidenced by the additional "s" the legal name for the enterprise, Asia Magazines, Ltd.

Lee H. Bristol, Jr.

Honorary Alumnus Lee H. Bristol, Jr., is the new president of Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N. J. He assumed office on March 1. The College, founded in 1926, is an interdenominational and interracial college whose main purpose is to prepare young men and women for positions of musical leadership in churches and schools.

A graduate of Hamilton College, Dr. Bristol was formerly Director of Public Relations for the Products Division of Bristol-Myers Company. He holds four honorary degrees including a Doctor of Music from Dickinson, awarded in 1959. Dr. Bristol wrote the music for the baccalaureate services in that year. He composed words and music for "King's Highway" and put "Here is the chapel, here my son . . ." to music. Also an author, he wrote Seed for a Song, the biography of Bishop Robert N. Spencer '02.

O B I T U A R I E S

1897—George W. Coles, of Philadelphia, died at his home on February 12 at the age of 84. A native Philadelphian, he attended the Philadelphia public schools. Following graduation from the College, he was graduated from the Dickinson School of Law in 1900. Active in municipal reform activities, he was a member of the committee which drafted the old Philadelphia City charter. He served as U. S. attorney in Philadelphia from 1921 until 1929 and was a deputy attorney general of the Commonwealth. In addition to his political activities, he was also a real estate developer in Norristown. He is survived by two brothers.

1900—Weldon B. Brubaker, of Dunmore, died on January 7 in the Monroe County General Hospital, Stroudsburg. He attended the Dickinson Preparatory School prior to matriculating at the College. He was a prominent investment and stock broker in the Scranton area. Surviving are his wife, the former Martha Coward; two daughters, Mrs. J. Paul Frantz, Clearfield, and Mrs. John Watt, Stroudsburg.

1900—Howard E. Gansworth. The Alumni Office has received word from Princeton University, from which Howard Gansworth graduated, of his death in May, 1956. No further information is available.

1900—Manfred L. Lower. The Alumni Office has received word of the death of Manfred L. Lower. No information is available.

1902—Harry E. Odgers died at his home in Frostburg, Md. on March 10, 1962, at the age of 81. Born in Frostburg, he attended local schools before matriculating at Dickinson. He received a master's degree from Columbia University. Mr. Odgers taught in Wheeling, W. Va. and was principal of Parkersburg, W. Va. High School before becoming superintendent of Parkersburg schools. He was made a superintendent of Fairmount City schools and then appointed assistant superintendent of Marion County schools. He retired in 1942, but returned to teaching during World War II, as a mathematics teacher at Beall High School, Frostburg. He is survived by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Mary Jane Iden, Frostburg; a granddaughter, Susan Treverton Odgers, College Park, and a sister, Mrs. J. Milton Patterson, Baltimore. Mr. Odgers was a member of Phi Kappa Sigma and Ravens Claw, served as president of the Union Philosophical Society, was manager of the Dickinson and participated in football and basketball.

1905—Andrew L. Bixler died at his home in Palmyra, Pa., on February 10, 1962, at the age of 82. Following his graduation from the College, he was graduated from Boston University Theological School in 1908. He retired from Ridge Avenue Methodist Church, Harrisburg in 1950 after 44 years as a clergyman. He served congregations in New England and Pennsylvania. He was at one time a director of Religious Education at Dickinson. During World War I, he served overseas as Y.M.C.A. secretary in France with the AEF. At Dickinson he was a member of Kappa Sigma, the Dickinsonian staff and served as president of the Union Philosophical Society. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Caroline M. Bixler; two sons, Andrew L. M., Miquon, Pa., and George W., Indianapolis, Ind.; a daughter, Miss Olive L. Bixler, Palmyra; five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

1911—Robert L. Imler died at his home in Tulsa, Okla., on July 30, 1961, at the age of 71. Born in Woodbury, Pa., he attended Conway Hall prior to entering the College. Following his graduation, he received an LL.B. from Michigan Law School. Upon finishing law school he went to Oklahoma and became interested in the oil business. He later went to Wyoming where he organized an oil company. In 1917 he served with the U. S. Army in the Pennsylvania Tank Corps under Dwight D. Eisenhower. Upon his discharge he became an attorney for the Sinclair Oil Co. He was employed by Sinclair for 42 years until his retirement in 1956. He is survived by his wife, Ruth T. Imler; a son, Dr. Robert L., and a daughter, Ruthann Imler Wood, Jackson, Fla. At Dickinson, he was a member of Sigma Chi Fraternity and participated in football.

1912—Lottie Lowe Myers Rasmussen died on January 5, 1960 in Regina, Saskatchewan. After receiving her bachelor's degree, she received her master's degree in 1913 and went to Riceton, Saskatchewan to teach school. In 1918 she married Enevold Rasmussen and with her husband, homesteaded in Peace River District, Saskatchewan. The Rasmussens returned to Regina in 1933 where she died. It was her pioneering efforts in beautifying home gardens in Regina that contributed in large measure to the beautification of Regina, which attracts many summer visitors. For five consecutive years, her garden was judged the best in Regina. She was a member of Eastern Star, White Shrine of Jerusalem, the American Women's Club and the Regina Horticultural Society. She is survived by her husband, six sons, and two daughters. One daughter predeceased her.

1913—Ralph S. Pomeroy, of St. Thomas, Pa., died on October 18, 1961. He was born in Chambersburg, Pa., and attended Chambersburg Academy before entering the College. He attended the Central Presbyterian Church, Chambersburg. Surviving are three sisters: Mrs. Rebecca Breerton, Chambersburg; Miss Katharine L. Pomeroy, Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Lewis V. Leggate, Pittsburgh.

1914—Florence Strock Aalseth died on January 18 in a Madison, Wisconsin hospital. Born in Carlisle, she was a member of the Lutheran Memorial Church of Madison and the Daughters of the American Revolution. Surviving her are her husband, Almer Aalseth; a daughter, Mrs. Jean Houghton, Madison; two sons, John Bickley, Austin, Tex., and George Bickley, Chicago; and a brother, Rev. Dr. J. Roy Strock, '03, Jefferson City, Tenn.

1915—Fay A. Shaw. Through the diligent efforts of one of our alumni, we were able to determine the following information about Mr. Shaw: He died on October 22, 1957, at the York Hospital at the age of 64. At the time of his death, he was president and general manager of the Stewartstown Railroad. He had served as a station agent for the railroad for many years. He was a member of the Stewartstown Presbyterian Church and served as a teacher of the Young Men's Bible Class since its inception 35 years ago. Mr. Shaw was a member of the Shrewsbury Lodge 423 F. and A. M., the Stewartstown Lions Club and the Hopewell Fish and Game Association. Surviving are three children: Mrs. Charles Wood, Minneapolis; Mrs. Walter Duvall, St. Lake City, and John R., Stewartstown. His wife, the former Mamie Spatz, died on January 17, 1954.

1915—Bart E. Crites died on November 22, 1961 in St. Petersburg, Fla., at the age of 69. Born in Renovo, Pa., he was a graduate of Drew Theological Seminary. He was a teacher in the history department of the Williamsport High School from 1915 to 1924, except for two years when he served in World War I. He entered the ministry in 1924 and served in the Central Pennsylvania Conference until his retirement in 1957. He was a member of Lodge 106 F. and A. M., and the Williamsport Consistory. While at Dickinson he was a member of Alpha Chi Rho, the Belles Lettres Literary Society and the Glee Club. He is survived by his wife, the former Alma Dieffenderfer; two sons, John C., Waynesboro, and Robert E., Baltimore, Md., and six grandchildren.

1921—The Alumni Office has received word of the death of Margaret Beck Smith, of Mechanicsburg on December 16, 1961. There is no further information available.

1929—James A. Simons, superintendent of the Methodist Midtown Community Parish in Philadelphia, died on January 18, at the age of 54, while on a pastoral call. A native of Centralia, Pa., he did graduate work at the Boston University School of Theology and Harvard University following his graduation from the College. He was a member of the Dickinsonian and Microcosm Boards, editor-in-chief of the handbook, president of the Union Philosophical Society and a member of Beta Psi Fraternity. He held pastorates in New Jersey, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania, until he was named head of the Methodist Midtown Community Parish, a project of the Methodist City Missionary Society in 1956. A poet, he had published the "Blind Beggar" and other poems. Surviving are his wife, the former Katherine Pickering, four sons and a sister.

1929—J. Russell Baker died in Carlisle on May 12, 1961. He was a graduate of the Steelton High School. He was a restaurant owner, hotel manager and a club steward. A Mason, he was also a member of the Shrine, Elks Club, the Eagles and the American Legion. He was a bachelor.

1951—Betty Jane Lacher Wolfe, of Pittsburgh, Pa., died on August 4, 1961 as the result of a heart attack. Upon leaving Dickinson, she worked as a secretary for the Gulf Oil Corp. in Pittsburgh, prior to her marriage to Thomas S. Wolfe in 1958 in Sewickley, Pa. Her husband is her only survivor.

1959—Andrew Alexander Sheard, 3d, was one of the servicemen aboard the airliner that went down in the Western Pacific and was declared missing in early March. The search for the plane was officially ceased on March 24. Andrew was on his way back to join his unit, the 9th U. S. Army Security Field Station at Clark Air Force Base, near Manila. He had been on emergency leave to attend the funeral of his mother. A graduate of Springfield (Del. Co.) High School in 1955, he was a member of Theta Chi Fraternity. He entered the Army 18 months ago and had been serving with the Army Security Agency in the Philippines since 1961.

NECROLOGY

Honorary alumnus, Dr. Hu Shih, United States educated philosopher-statesman, and father of modern Chinese literature, died of a heart attack recently at the age of 70. Following his graduation from Cornell University and after receiving a doctorate from Columbia University, he returned to China where he gathered a following in his declaration on the use of the spoken language rather than the age-old, flowery and formal language then in vogue. An educator, he was an official of the Peiping University and president of the China National Institute of Woosung. In the 1930's, upon Japan's attack on China, he became ambassador to Washington. In 1942, he returned to China to become one of Chiang Kai-shek's chief advisors. Following the fall of the mainland to the Chinese communists, he turned down an offer to become president of Taiwan University and returned to the United States where he wrote and lectured for nine years. In 1958, he returned to Formosa to accept the presidency of Academia Sinica, a research center. He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from the College in June, 1941, at which time he was the Commencement speaker. He is survived by his wife and two sons, one in the United States and one in Communist China.

Alice B. Tawes, mother of Maryland Governor J. Millard Tawes, member of the Board of Trustees, and Marvin H. Tawes, '26, and A. Wellington Tawes, '12, died in the Bedford County Memorial Hospital, where she had been a patient following a stroke. Mrs. Tawes was 92 years of age.

F. Brown Smith, husband of Lillie Reese Smith, '09, died on January 15, 1962 at his home in Harrington, Del. Mr. Smith had been a Chevrolet dealer in Harrington for 27 years. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Gayle, and a son, Ralph C.

Frank P. Barnhart, husband of Gertrude Heller Barnhart, '05, died on November 26 in Windber, Pa. Hospital at the age of 88. A 1902 graduate of Princeton, he graduated from Dickinson School of Law with a bachelor of laws degree and from Dickinson College with a master of arts degree in 1905. He began his law practice in Johnstown in 1906 and retired in 1958 as the dean of the Cambria County Bar Association. In 1959 he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from the Dickinson School of Law, where he served as a member of the Board of Directors from 1929.

Phi Beta Kappa

society. It had then a secret form of initiation and some of the characteristics of the Masonic order. In 1779 Elisha Parmelee was authorized to establish chapters at Yale and Harvard. By 1830 chapters were established at Dartmouth, Union, Bowdoin, and Brown; and in the next half-century some dozen and a half others were chartered, usually by the Alpha of the appropriate state. When Harvard celebrated its centennial in 1881 it invited the other chapters to attend for the purpose of forming a national organization. Thus the United Chapters were organized in 1883 and three years later began the practice of issuing charters. Aaron Rittenhouse, Wesleyan 1861, Henry Clay Whiting, Union 1876, and Lahman Forest Bower, Wesleyan, 1879, were authorized to install the Dickinson Chapter as the Alpha Chapter in Pennsylvania. They met on April 13, 1887 and elected several members of the faculty and administration, and a month later eight undergraduates. During the following quarter century a considerable number of graduates was elected to alumnus membership. In 1888 two men undergraduates and two women undergraduates were elected, thus setting the pattern which the chapter has followed since, although the numbers depend upon the qualifications.

Between 1887 and 1912 the Dickinson chapter became interested in contributions to the intellectual life of the college through both indirect stimulus by the recognition of high academic achievement and many gifts to the college library. The trend toward the election of honorary and alumni members was regarded as unwise. A committee was created to decide on candidates and a limitation was put on the number who could be considered in any one year. In the same era one committee was appointed "to promote scholarship," and another appointed to consider recommendations for new charters. The policy of Dickinson generally has been conservative both in the selection of its own undergraduates and in expansion to other colleges; it has consistently favored the limitation of the granting of charters by the United Chapters to institutions emphasizing the liberal arts.

The second quarter century was marked with advances in many fields both within the chapter and the college. Among these may be mentioned: the stiffening of requirements for graduation and chapter membership; the establishment of honors work; the recognition of high achievement by students of all four academic classes at an annual scholarship dinner (which President Morgan said he was hopeful "would bring to the college students of high academic attainment at least as much recognition as was accorded athletes"); revival of the college literary societies; and the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Pennsylvania Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa with a notable address by Dean Christian Gauss of Princeton on "The Standard of Living of the Educated Man," on May 1, 1937.

Despite the problems and difficulties of the depression and the Second World War the Dickinson chapter has continued to maintain its leadership both locally and to some degree in the national organization. It has been represented at all the triennial councils; Dickinsonians have served as officers of the District organization and on committees appointed by the national Senate of Phi Beta Kappa. In 1947 it observed its sixtieth anniversary with an address by W. H. Hitchler, Dean of the Dickinson School of Law. Eight members of the faculty recommended basic changes in the curriculum in 1936-1938; all were members of Phi Beta Kappa. Some changes in eligibility to the holding of chapter offices were made in this period; and a new official, the historian, was added. The chapter has encouraged the membership to take the Society's magazine The American Scholar both through exhortation and through direct contributions both for the college library and for initiates, and it has participated in the Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar program each year since its establishment. This example has been followed in other departments of the college through the encouragement of visits in various fields of work; the formal recognition of top achievement through the annual appointment of "Sophisters," the best student in the junior and senior class; and the establishment of notable awards in science in honor of Joseph Priestley and in the humanities in honor of W. W. Edel. And this year, 1962, they observed the seventy-fifth anniversary in connection with the traditional exercises of Founder's Day.

The present officers of the Alpha Chapter of Phi Beta Kappa in Pennsylvania are: Professor William Sloane, president; Professor Charles D. Kepner, vice president; Professor Horace E. Rogers, secretary; Professor Nancy Lee Beaty, assistant secretary; Professor Charles C. Sellers, treasurer; Professor Herbert Wing, Jr., historian. The committee on arrangements for this celebration consisted of Provost Gilbert Malcolm, Professor H. E. Rogers, and Professor Herbert Wing, Jr., chairman.
