ON THE COVER

We return to the traditional cover picture—from a non-traditional angle—to announce the designation of Old West as a national historic shrine. It was dedicated by the U. S. Department of Interior at ceremonies held at the College on April 25.

Dickinson College,
Nov 4th 1860.

Dear Pa,

I have written once around to near all the family, and hoped by this to have had a letter from you, but I suppose for good reasons
I have not. I have not
I have not but at
I have not this week,
I thought like to hear of your university affairs, I will tell you

ROBERT L. MORRIS

The College Has Changed—Have the Students?

LETTERS FROM the Waitman T. Willey Collection at West Virginia University Library reveal that although Dickinson College has changed a great deal in the past century students are changeless in many respects.

William P. Willey, son of one of West Virginia's first Senators—Waitman T. Willey, was a student at Dickinson during the early years of the Civil War. Some of the student's letters home have been preserved among the Senator's papers at West Virginia University Library. The letters, written during William P. Willey's Junior and Senior years, give interesting glimpses of life at Dickinson College a century ago and demonstrate that students are the same in every generation.

One subject is common to all of Willey's letters to his father—money. In every letter extant he eventually gets around to the subject dearest—or at least nearest—to the heart of any college student. In one letter he begins: "I have not much to write you, but as I have to write to some one this week. I thought perhaps you would like to hear something about my pecuniary affairs, as you wished me to tell you a short time before I would need any money." On that occasion he needed $30.

In one of the last letters William Willey wrote to his father from Dickinson, he discussed his plans upon graduation. It was a fourteen page letter, and on page one was a postscript to Senator Willey to be sure to read pages twelve through fourteen if he did not have time to read the whole letter. On page twelve, the boy revealed his desire to study law but said that he was willing to teach school for awhile if his father could not support him as a law student. He said he did not want to settle in his hometown, Morgantown, West Virginia, which he referred to as "repugnant." On page fourteen of that letter? You guessed it! He asked for money.

In another letter he had listed his expenses as:

- 37.50 for tuition
- 3.00 modern language fee
- 1.00 library fee
- 2.50 for use of recitation rooms
- 2.00 janitorial services
- 5.17 room rent

He explained that he realized the expenses were greater than expected but that:

The principle they go on here, is, that each student pays for all he gets, or that all combined pay the expenses of the college. The students rent the college, pay the teachers their salaries, and repair all the damages. Beside the faculty have arranged various ways by which they make a little extra. They procure all the books and stationary (sic) which the students use, and by extending the credit system to those who have no patrons, and obliging those who have patrons to buy of them, they get near all the students to buy of them, and they lay on the price. They also charge 1.50 (sic) per year for the use of the library, and I believe there is not a half doz books taken out in a month, by the students.

Later in his letter, April of 1860, Willey complained about the charge for the library. "I have not been in yet," he wrote, "but I see he had included it in my account."

PERHAPS WILLEY'S references to the infrequent use of the library gives us some clue to the subject discussed with almost the same frequency as money—and that was how difficult it was to be a student at Dickinson.

He wrote his father preparing him for a bad report:

I am doing as well in college as ever, and I think better than ever, at least I study more, but as I told you before leaving home, you need not expect as good reports, for it keeps a Junior in Dickinson College working day and night to be even passed in his studies. It is now a great question among the members of our class whether one half will be advanced at the end of the year.

And then he wrote explaining why the report was not better:

My last report did not pay me for a months hard study. I expected to get at least one 4 mark. But I have come to the conclusion, that it next to the hardest thing in this world. A person has to keep his mind as bright as a new cent at all time, for if he is called up to the chair to recite, especially upon a memory lesson, and feels a little dull, he is sure to forget the points in the lesson, and then ask the prof. to give you a start and he will tell you to start to your seat. This answer I have often thought from what I have seen to be very deleterious to the nervous system, though I have not yet received it, yet I can judge of its effects from those that have. It is a continual tug from week to week. We have no day of rest to look forward to, one day's work is about as hard as another, and we can only distinguish the days of the week by this little change in the studies. Sometimes I think I would

Robert L. Morris is an associate professor of Russian History at Indiana State College, Indiana, Pa. He was a magna cum laude graduate of Lycoming College in 1955 and received a master's degree in 1960 from Columbia University. It was while working on his Ph.D. dissertation that Professor Morris came across the information about William P. Willey which provided the background for this story.

The Dickinson Alumnus is indeed indebted to Professor Morris and his wife, whom Morris confesses found the Willey letters and prevailed upon her husband to do the article which you have just read.

about as soon be in a penitentiary, but then I know that there must something result from all this labor, as a reward for my labor I expect to come out a schollar (sic) and am certain that I will if my life and health are spared. As for my reports, I know that they are all by which you have to judge of my progress, and for this reason I try to make them as creditable as I can, but I cannot always have them good, even when I do my utmost towards it, for I assure you it is an exceedingly hard thing to merit a good one, beside running the risk of not getting it when it is merited, but while I stand as well as any in my class I am content, and only while this is so.

Frequently the professors were to blame for poor reports—especially the mathematics instructor who introduced a new study (Olmstead's mechanics) and expected his students to remember a great deal of minutiae. Everyone had just about given up, but not William P. Willey! He wrote his father that he was convinced it was "Sink or swim, survive or perish."

Actually, despite Willey's concern about his health, it appears that the professors had a greater "mortality rate." One language professor evidently gave his all. Willey described how the pressure had done it.

We lost our professor of modern languages some few weeks since. He was a very hard student, in fact broke himself down by hard study, and some think from the way he left that he was a little out of his mind. He went off without saying anything to anyone and without anyone knowing where he was. They heard from him in about a week after, he said he was in New York, that his nervous system was very much debilitated (sic) and that he would not be able to attend his duties here any longer. They will have his place filled by next session. Our recitations which we had to him are now divided among the other professors.

No letup for the students, take note!

Another professor was blamed for an unexcused absence from recitation. Apparently Senator Willey had asked his son about the "cut" and his son replied:

I received this together with all the class at the time Browning came in and tore up the room etc., which I wrote about before, You must not be surprised if you find an occasional absence from recitations marked on my report, for sometimes the recitations are so difficult that there will be one or a part of one that I cannot have time to get very well, and I make a poor recitation. This happens to all the students more or less, when they have duties to perform in the Lit Societies, but you must remember that one mark does not signify absence for one day, but one absence from one recitation.

This did not explain the unexcused absence from prayers however. The report of his grades, also found in his father's correspondence, reveal that William P. Willey had six unexcused absences from prayers as well as one from class. Nevertheless, evidently Willey was a good student. He had a 4 (exemplary) in habits and deportment and another 4 in ethics from Professor Collins—probably the same Collins who was then President of Dickinson. Willey's grade report for the year ending in June, 1860, also carried 3's in philosophy, mathematics, and natural science with a 3½ in ancient language.

ONLY ONE of the letters in the collection has any comment on the political situation and the Civil War. From that letter—March 17, 1862—it is clear that William P. Willey was sympathetic toward the South. (Senator Willey's family caused him considerable embarrassment during the War because of Southern sympathies. Senator Willey appears to be the lone Union supporter.) Among the Senator's papers there is a printed report from President Collins concerning the unrest among the student body due to the War. Collins asked the students to remain in school. Aside from his political comments, however, there is no sign of this unrest in Willey's letters.

The letters do reveal that students were pretty much the same one hundred years ago. And, despite the student gripes which constitute a great part of these letters, there is a note of satisfaction with the school throughout. Willey was glad that he would some day be a Dickinson alumnus. "I look for a time of great rejoicing when the task is accomplished," he wrote. And on another occasion he stopped his complaining about finances long enough to remark that he was glad he was enrolled at Dickinson saying: "As for my expenses, while I regret their being so great, yet if it were left to my choice, I would say that I was being better paid in giving $600 for the advantages here, than $200 for those at . . . (another 'prestige school')." "

William P. Willey was graduated with the class of 1862. He went on to become a lawyer, newspaper editor, and—finally—Professor of Law at West Virginia University in Morgantown, West Virginia—where, indubitably, he taught students who wrote home about their problems: financial, academic, and perhaps even an eccentric old professor or two.

Changes In The Administrative Lineup

A retirement, an election and two appointments brought three changes to the administrative lineup of the College in quick succession.

Sidney D. Kline '24 was elected to succeed Boyd Lee Spahr '00 as President of the Board of Trustees at the mid-winter meeting of the Board. The retirement of Dr. Spahr after 31 years as President was accepted by the Board with "regret and appreciation." The text of the resolution adopted by that group appears on the next page.

President of the Berks County Trust Company in Reading, Pennsylvania, Mr. Kline brings to the Presidency of the Board a wealth of experience in business and educational affairs. A 1924 graduate of the College, he received both a law degree and a master's degree from Dickinson's two institutions in 1926. In 1954 he received an honorary doctor of laws degree from Albright, which institution he serves as trustee. He also is a trustee of The Dickinson School of Law and the Reading Hospital and serves as a director of many industrial and business organizations. He has been a member of the College Board since 1945 and has served as chairman of both the finance and steering committees.

His wife is the former Leona Barkalow '27. All four of his children have attended Dickinson: Joan Kline Gingrich '51, Sidney, Jr. '54, Robert '58, and Susan, a member of the senior class. In addition, the three married children all married Dickinsonians.

A new administrative position has been filled by a person who is far from new to the Dickinson scene. Benjamin D. James '34, who has been a faculty member of the campus family since 1941, has been appointed Dean of Students. This position resulted from the report of the 1961 survey of the College by the University Senate of the Methodist Church and a re-evaluation of the duties of the Dean of the College. In his new job, Dean James will supervise all non-academic student affairs, including morale and discipline, extra-curricular activities, counselling, student housing, the health services, and the administration of the Student Activities Center when it is completed.

A 1934 graduate of the College, Dean James was a high school teacher and coach before returning to his alma mater in 1941 as an instructor in education and athletic coach. In 1948 he was appointed Dean of Admissions and in 1951 was named Chairman of the Department of Psychology and Education. He relinquished both these posts to take on his new duties. Dean James received a master's degree from Bucknell and in 1962 was awarded a PhD from the University of Pennsylvania.

Richard D. Cheshire, a Colgate graduate who spent the last two years as assistant to the Vice-President for Development at Colgate, was named to the position of Director of Development, effective January 1. In this position he relieves George Shuman, Jr. '37 who resigned as Director of Development to devote more time and energy to his duties as Financial Vice President and Treasurer. Mr. Shuman had served in the development capacity since 1955 and was largely responsible for much of the initial effort in the present development program.

Mr. Cheshire is a 1958 graduate of Colgate University and obtained a master's degree in education from the University of New Hampshire in 1959. He taught history and served as athletic coach at Chatham High School in Chatham, New Jersey for one year until he was appointed to his former position at Colgate in 1960. He is married and the father of a one-year-old daughter.

Recognizing that each man brings to his new office an abundance of talent and experience, The Dickinson Alumnus pledges its support and extends its best wishes to each.

BOYD LEE SPAHR

A native of the Cumberland Valley, Boyd Lee Spahr attended the Dickinson Preparatory School, entered the College in 1896 and graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors in 1900. He remained in Carlisle another year to teach in the old prep school before entering the Law School of the University of Pennsylvania where he graduated with honors in 1904.

As an undergraduate, he was Editor of the Dickinsonian, President of his fraternity, active in his Literary Society and early cast a shadow of his deep interest in the life of the College. Soon after his graduation, he wrote "Dickinson Doings."

He had been practicing law in Philadelphia only four years when he was elected a Trustee of the College in 1908. He was 28 years of age and became the youngest man named to the Board in the history of the College.

Until 1912, the President of the College was also the President of the Board. In that year Judge Edward W. Biddle was elected President of the Board and he served until his retirement in June 1931. Boyd Lee Spahr was elected to succeed him and has served with high devotion for more than thirty-one years. The affairs of the College have been as relaxing to him as a hobby and, at the same time, as deeply a personal concern as those of his own family. Since the founding of the College, he has given more of his talents, hours and means than anyone else has done.

Dr. Spahr is largely responsible for the fine collection of paintings adorning the College walls. For more than thirty years, he has made innumerable contributions of books, letters, pictures and other pieces of Dickinsonia for the College Library. Properly, the Boyd Lee Spahr Room in the Library bears his name. It is also enshrined in the endowment fund for the Spahr Chair of American History. Three volumes have been published containing the Boyd Lee Spahr Lectures in Americana.

With, perhaps, a primary interest in the Library, he recently paid for major alterations, adding a balcony level to the main reading room. Through the years, he has contributed and played a leading part in every campaign for funds.

Important as his gifts have been, equally important and continuous has been his leadership in the educational advancement of the College.

His is a Dickinson family. He sent his three sons to the College and his grandson is a member of the Senior Class. His eldest son, Boyd Lee Spahr, Jr. was elected a Trustee last June.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, on this fifteenth day of December, 1962, that a copy of this Citation be presented to him and inscribed in full on a page in the minutes of this meeting.

and

BY
MIKE SILVER '54

DRIVING ALONG the damp, dark road to Cape Canaveral before the Glenn, Carpenter and Schirra flights, I did not think of it. Passed through the floodlighted gates and led by Air Force escort past "Command Destruct," past the giant radar saucer, past "Hanger S," I never gave it a thought.

At the press position, the first thoughts are of the magnificent Buck Rogers sight before you—2,500 feet away. Orange gantry spotlighted like a Hollywood premiere against the black night, shielding the white, 11-story high bird. At its peak, a little black top that will carry a man you'd had a beer with a month before into outer space and, please God, back.

Before dawn the astronaut appears in shining silver, smiles, waves, and rides to his capsule. You ride with him via closed circuit television—which you are taping to show to the nation a half-hour before take-off. You watch him enter the tiny top, see him as he chats with the technicians. You wait for the dawn, for the sun, for the weather, for the fueling and the countdown—you pray, and then you cheer.

And then you ask: What am I doing here?

And, for the specific purposes of this journal, what is a graduate of Dr. Rush's school doing here? Where does liberal arts fit into this new technology with its fantastic "here today, obsolete tomorrow" objects tearing holes through the stratosphere: with robots, Russians, chimps, Telstars, and guys from Ohio and

New Jersey on board. Venus is violated, Mars is next, and it's sixty hours to the moon.

What am I doing here with eight hours of science under my B.A.? I studied English and the things written in it—old and newer. I studied history and political science and art and philosophy. But most of all, I studied the language, and then went on to Columbia where they tried to prune and polish my writing of it. And here I am at Cape Canaveral, U.S.A., and—forgive me, Dr. Sloane—I will now explain how best to blast-off:

"Before you can quick-disconnect the lox and RP-4 lines, arm the squibs, actuate the firing relays, make ready emergency egress, (via the cherry-picker) roll back the gantry, and go to automatic sequencer, you have to get a go/no-go from the TC (test conductor) and he has to get it from the LD (launch director)—and only then can you commit the bird. On the other hand, if you're using the new eryogenic, hypergolic fuels, you'll get a light and a good fire in the tail much faster."

The new language of the spaceman has no respect for the gods of the past. Atlas who bore the vault of heaven on his shoulders now has 360,000 to 380,000 pounds of thrust, depending on the model. Apollo, once of poetry, music, purity and light, is now a triple troughed top designed to carry three Americans to the moon in 1968. Gemini, once Castor and Pollux,

Shakespeare and Schirra Can Mix

Nimbus . . . is a U.S. Weather Satellite will be Shepard and Neil Armstrong (or two other Americans in silver) by 1964.

No, Dickinson Art Department, nimbus is not a halo around the head of a painted saint, it is a U.S. weather satellite, No, Astronomy I, Saturn is not six planets from the sun, it is 1,500,000 pounds of thrust to lift 10 to 20 tons of payload into Earth orbit. No, Philosophy 15, celestial guidance is not something found in the Chapel, it is one way to navigate when you are the only man not in the world.

And, Sunday, brunchers, lox is now liquid oxygen fuel. And, hip Freshmen from the city, a pad is now a concrete platform from which rockets are launched.

And me, I help tell the story of what's going on in and out of the world to the American people. And the question answers itself easily for me: what I am doing here is being a human being participating, in however small a way, in one of man's great adventures, an adventure not necessarily to outrace the Russians but to gain knowledge.

A "liberal" education makes the adventure, any adventure of life, more complete. Shakespeare and Schirra can mix, for there is a truth to both of them: men striving to create something. The study of history and the watching of Alan Shepard make it are all one, and the former makes the present the more important.

Michael G. Silver, '54, is Press Representative of ABC News, Special Events and Public Affairs. He spent 60 days of 1962 at Cape Canaveral covering and publicizing the Glenn, Carpenter and Schirra flights of ABC-TV and Radio. He is 29, has an M.S. from the Columbia University Graduate School of Journalism, was a Theta Chi at Dickinson, and lives in New York City, his home town. Here he chats with Astronaut Wally Schirra at Cocoa Beach, Florida.

The historian will record man's new strivings, the artist will paint that gantry, the political scientist will hold the reins in the "race," the physician and the geologist will go along for the ride some day. And philosophy and religion, as John Glenn sincerely believed even before he was embarrassed by all the publicity about it, must guide even the most technical of men.

"It's a little bit like Columbus coming to the new world," he told our ABC News cameras. "To really make the new world mean anything, it has to be people and staffed." Colonel Glenn stressed that the space people had to be thinking, choice-making human beings with human memories and cultural values, not merely technicians trained to robots.

I've decided not to go to the moon—I'd just become a bore telling about it at Class of '54 reunions—but perhaps a Dickinsonian will someday. With a liberal education he will be a more complete human visiting in space: not a tourist with an American Express schedule and a camera but a man with a pursuit and a purpose, to learn and extend human knowledge.

John Glenn said the rest for me: "I just am very thankful that we are living in the day and age when we can be a part of all this."

AROUND THE CAMPUS

Dickinson Evaluated

Dickinson students enjoy the benefit of "great teaching," according to a team of 13 educators from Pennsylvania, New York, and Indiana, who visited Dickinson College recently to evaluate its teacher-training program. Dickinson was one of 28 colleges in a pilot study conducted by the Department of Public Instruction of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The study was intended to help resolve a proposal that colleges be allowed to certify their own teacher trainees without first consulting the department. At present, the department issues the certificates after reviewing reports from the colleges. According to the visitors, the College is making a "distinct contribution" to American education by the quality of its teaching and overall program. The high quality of the faculty impressed the entire team. Dean Margaret Devine of Mills College said that Dickinson students are extremely well prepared in the fields in which they plan to teach. The team was pleased to see Dickinson's concern with non-Western studies. As one of the spokesmen said, "In American colleges and universities, non-Western areas are traditionally neglected in the study of world history. Dickinson is far ahead of the vast majority of schools in its efforts to improve the situation."

Dr. William Gombar of the Department of Education, said that Dickinson has much to be proud of and that the nation's need for great teachers is best filled by the kind of teaching found at Dickinson.

Methodist Scholarship

President Rubendall announced a new competitive scholarship intended for Methodist students who show some promise of future usefulness in the work of the church. Set up by the College as an expression of its desire to help meet the national need for Christian leadership, it will be awarded annually to a student holding active membership in a Methodist Church in the Central Pennsylvania Conference. Other qualifications are high scholarship and the recommendation of the pastor. The amount will range from a minimum of $100 to the full cost of tuition, dependent on the recipient's financial need. The scholarships will be renewed each year provided the recipient maintains a satisfactory record.

Faculty Notes

At the mid-winter meeting of the Board of Trustees held on the campus on December 15, the Board granted refresher leaves of absence to Charles Coleman Sellers, librarian; Arthur Max Prinz, professor of economics; and Margaret M. Ramos, professor of modern languages. The leaves will start next June. Announcement was made of the retirement at the end of the present college year of William Drum Gould, chairman of the department of Philosophy and Religion, and Charles D. Kepner, chairman of the department of Sociology.

College Chaplain Samuel H. Magill participated in a consultation sponsored by the Council on Religion and International Affairs on the question of "Internationalism: Its Moral and Political Limits" held at the Cosmos Club in Washington, D. C. on November 14. Invited to the consultation were a number of government figures who are involved in foreign policy and defense questions, representatives of private research organizations and representatives from educational and religious institutions.

Members of the College faculty are participating in science seminars for high school science students sponsored by the Carlisle Area Science Advisory Committee and the South Middleton Township High School. Included in the series are Winthrop C. Difford, chairman of the geology department, H. Wade Seaford, Jr., sociology and anthropology, Frank Hartman, psychology, Carl E. Kerr, chairman of the mathematic department, and Frederick P. Ferre, philosophy and religion.

Professor emeritus Herbert Wing, Jr. is serving as visiting professor of history at Rhode Island College in Providence, R. I. He is teaching three sections of introductory history and one of Greek history. He also will work with the college history department on an experimental use of Greek history as an introduction to the study of history in the junior high schools.

Paul F. Angiolillo, chairman of the department of modern languages, addressed the Cumberland Valley chapter of the Alliance Francaise. His paper, delivered in French, dealt with the life and work of Jean Jacques Rousseau, the French philosophy and social theorist of the 18th century. The Alliance Francaise is a world organization which seeks to increase interest in the French language and culture. Dr. Angiolillo has studied and taught in France and has twice been decorated by the French government for service to education in France.

An experiment in reading training in industry was conducted by Donald T. Graffam, acting chairman of the department of psychology and education, for the Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers' Association in Harrisburg. Dr. Graffam conducted training sessions for professional readers of the Mid-Atlantic Press Clipping Service to improve their on-the-job reading efficiency. The association made a contribution to Dickinson College in support of this research in industrial reader training. Dr. Graffam announced that this program recognizes that the college can offer knowledge and skills that can contribute directly to industry and the community.

George J. Edberg, professor of modern languages, is the newly elected editor of the Bulletin of the Pennsylvania State Modern Language Association. Diane I. Dewis, also a professor in the modern languages department, is the business manager. At the October meeting of the PSMLA, both were named to the executive council of that association. Professor Edberg was also named to the executive committee of the National Federation of Modern Language Teachers Associations and was elected to serve as the official delegate to the NFMLTA.

At the fall meeting of the American Chemical Society, M. Benton Naff, chemistry department, was appointed co-editor of the 1963 American Chemical Society Co-operative Test in Organic Chemistry. He will serve with Dr. William J. Sheppard of Swarthmore College.

Arthur M. Prinz, professor of economics, discussed the new crisis in the European Common Market on Lancaster's television channel, WGAL, on February 3. He was questioned by former Congressman Guy J. Swope and four other persons and discussed the extent of the crisis brought about by France's Kenneth Sanborn Pitzer, President of Rice University, Houston, Texas, was the recipient of the 12th annual Joseph Priestly Memorial Award on March 14. An outstanding chemist, Dr. Pitzer is a former research director of the United States Atomic Energy Commission. He pioneered the application of spectroscopic and statistical methods to the study of complex organic molecules and their reactions. The award of the portrait medallion of Joseph Priestly and a $1,000 prize was presented by Dr. Hugh Stott Taylor, first recipient of the Priestly Award in 1952, and now president of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation. With him is Sir Hugh Stott Taylor, first recipient of the award in 1952 and now president of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation.

Edward S. Noyes, vice president of the College Entrance Examination Board, was the guest speaker at the annual scholarship dinner held on February 26. The annual dinner honors the Dickinson College students who have attained an average of 3.5 or better during one or both of the last two semesters. In addition to honoring about 120 who attained this academic excellence, special recognition was given to the members of Phi Beta Kappa who were elected last June and to the class sophisters, John McClellan and Thomas Stretton of the senior class, and John Laszlo of the junior class.

John W. Findlay, deputy director of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory, was honored for distinguished service in a relatively new field of science—radio astronomy, when he received Dickinson's Glover Memorial Medal on February 7. The third recipient of the Glover Medal, which was established in 1959 by the late John D. Yeagley, '24, is a leading authority on radar and a pioneer in radio astronomy. Dr. Findlay has been deputy director of the Observatory since 1956. He is a native of Warwickshire, England and an honors graduate in physics of Cambridge University.

Ray H. Crist, '20, director of the Union Carbide Research Institute, Tarrytown, New York, made the official presentation of a $5,000 grant to the chemistry department from the Union Carbide Corporation Educational Fund. Dickinson was one of ten liberal arts colleges in the country to receive such a grant this year. Shown here with Crist are Dr. Rubendall and Horace Rogers, '24, chairman of the chemistry department.

veto of British membership in the Common Market. The program was the first in a series of four topics suggested by the Foreign Policy Association of Harrisburg.

Development

Dickinson received $96,339 in cash and securities in the settlement of the estate of Mrs. Mabel L. Sieber Kline, of Atlantic City, who left approximately half of her estate to the college to help needy students. Her will directed that the bequest be used by the college to establish a permanent scholarship fund to assist deserving students who might not be able to obtain a college education without such assistance. Mrs. Kline's husband and her brother were both Dickinson alumni. Her husband, Irvin E. Kline, who was assistant principal of the Atlantic City High School, was graduated 1901. Her brother, D. Ralph Sieber, '15, was associated with General Refractories in Pittsburgh before his death in 1959. The bequest established the David Ralph Sieber-Irvin Eugene Kline-Mabel Sieber Kline Scholarship Fund.

Class of 1962 Gift

The Class of 1962 designated that its class gift be three-fold. The allocation is as follows: (1) furnishings for a room in the new women's dormitory in honor of Gilbert Malcolm, $2,500; (2) chairs for the Donald Moser Room in Reed Hall, $200; and (3) stereophonic equipment for the new Student Activities Center, $1,150.

More Room

A tract of land originally owned by John Montgomery, a charter member and treasurer of the Board of Trustees of Dickinson College, has been acquired by the College from the estate of Justin Perrine to provide additional recreation space. The property which was called "Happy Retreat" by Montgomery is located to the west of Biddle Field just off West High Street.

Students

Operation: Crossroads Africa

Dickinson students have raised $900 to send sophomore co-ed Judy Rogers from East Orange, New Jersey to Africa this summer to participate in Operations Crossroads. The operation is a work-study project entered into by 20 African countries. Two hundred sixty American students work and study with the same number of African students in the villages of these countries. The main source of funds was a dance held on November 17. Other sources of income have been from community churches. Although Miss Rogers' application has been accepted by Operations: Crossroads Africa, her assignment has not been made known to her. She will spend two months in Africa during the summer.

Mermaid Players

Continuing to prove that they can overcome the limitations of their theater in the Belle Lettres room in Denny Hall, the Mermaid Players recently completed a record breaking five "standing room only" performances of Arthur Miller's The Crucible as their mid-winter production. The Players are now devoting their efforts toward a May 1 and 2 presentation of James Thurber's Carnival.

Sports

Football

Senior captain Reno DiOrio was named most valuable player in the Southern Division of the Middle Atlantic Conference to provide a bright spot in an otherwise dismal season which saw the Red Devils win three of eight games. In addition, Reno was named quarterback on the All Star Conference Team. Also recognized for outstanding play were senior guard and line-backer, Millard "Sonny" Shoaf and junior end, Pete Zuyus. In addition to outgaining and outscoring its opponents, the 1962 Dickinson eleven recorded two modern era Dickinson College football records. A pass from DiOrio to junior half-back Dan Shaver in the Franklin and Marshall game covered 86 yards to set a new record for the longest touchdown pass. Senior tackle John Harper kicked three field goals during the season, and combined with his two from last season set a modern football record for the most field goals in a career. Highlighting the season were victories over Haverford, before a Homecoming crowd, by a score of 26-0, Franklin and Marshall, and Johns Hopkins. Junior guard William Smith has been elected captain for next year's team. Bill will lead six junior lettermen and six freshmen lettermen against the same eight opponents.

Cross Country

Maintaining the winning ways which have become almost routine since the sport was reinstated as a varsity activity in 1957, the cross country team won 7 of its 11 contests this year. Leading the harriers was sophomore Gordon Faulkner who twice set new school records over the Camp Shand course.

Basketball

Victories over Ursinus, Washington College, and Swarthmore were the only consolation in a long season during which the youth-laden hoopsters of Coach Joe DuCharme had a string of 12 straight losses. The starting lineup consisted of senior captain William Schantzenbach, a junior, two sophomores, and one freshman. The highlight of the season was not one of the victories, but the spirit shown by the Devils in coming to the brink of the major upset of the year—a 36-35 loss to Susquehanna, a major power in the Middle Atlantic Conference. The season was full of squeakers which could have gone either way—but always went to the opponent—a 1 point loss to Western Maryland, an 82-80 overtime loss to Penn Miliary College, and an 89-85 defeat at the hands of Lycoming.

The Junior Varsity, lead by former Pennsylvania All State transfer student David Thomas, galloped to an 11-4 record and brought joy to the campus as it looked forward to next year.

Swimming

With the first losing season in his Dickinson career, Coach David Eavenson contented himself with the records set by two of his swimmers—freshman James Freeman who set a new mark in the 200 yard backstroke, and Gus Bird, junior co-captain who set a new mark in the individual medley. With largely an underclassmen squad to return next year, Eavenson looks to bettering his 3-6 record of this year.

Wrestling

Continuing the winning ways which have become second nature to wrestling coach Glenn Flegal and his grapplers, the team finished the year with three straight wins and a 6-4 record. The biggest accomplishment was a 22-8 upset win over Moravian—the first Red Devil victory in wrestling over this perennially strong wrestling team.

Squash

Led by five seniors, the most successful winter sport squad finished a long season against some major opponents with a 7-3 record. Competing against nationally ranked University of Pittsburgh and other larger schools, the newest addition to the winter sports teams rose to the occasion with impressive showings in each match. Captain Whitney Smyth who culminated a four year career with a 24-11 record was selected as the Most Valuable Player.

ALUMNI CLUB ACTIVITIES

Washington, D. C.

The Washington Alumni Club held their annual fall dinner meeting on October 9 at O'Donnell's Restaurant in Bethesda, Md. The highlight of the evening was an address by President Rubendall in which he outlined for the alumni and parents in attendance the progress that had been made at Dickinson during his more than one year in office. Club president David Theall, '56, presented the Washington Alumni Club Scholarship to Harry Packard, '63, of Takoma Park, Md., a senior member of the football team and president of Theta Chi fraternity. Following a question and answer period, during which questions about the development program and other aspects of college life were raised by the alumni, assistant football coach Wilbur Gobrecht, '52, showed films of Dickinson's 26-0 victory over Haverford. Also in attendance from Carlisle were the President's wife and Alumni Secretary, Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53.

West Branch Valley

The Susquehanna Room of the Hotel Lycoming in Williamsport was the scene of the first meeting of the Alumni Club of the West Branch Valley in more than two years. Retiring club president, J. Neafie Mitchell, '41 presided over the meeting which 43 alumni and friends attended. Following a short business meeting at which Frank W. Ake, '31, was elected president; Katherine Smith Carpenter, '25, vice president; and R. Max Gingrich, '48, secretary-treasurer, Mitchell introduced the Alumni Secretary, Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53, who in turn introduced two members of the senior class. Ann Conser, of Williamsport, Pa., described for the alumni the Religious Affairs Committee, the Dickinsonian and the role of sororities on the campus at the present time. Albert Miller, from West Chester, Pa., talked about the honors program at Dickinson in which he is participating, the enlarged foreign student program, and fall sports picture. President Howard Rubendall, '31, then described the challenge Dickinson faces today as not unlike the challenge she faced at the time of her founding. Dr. Rubendall also talked about a "refounding" of Dickinson College in which everyone connected with her must take an active part.

Connecticut

Club President DeLancey Pelgrift, '10, presided

over the October 24th meeting of the Connecticut Club of Dickinson College, which was attended by 24 alumni and parents in Hartford's University Club. Executive Assistant to the President Arthur Platt and Alumni Secretary Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53, were the Dickinson representatives who outlined to the alumni the plans for the development program at Dickinson and also highlights of the past year on the Campus. A unanimous resolution to endorse enthusiastically the development plans of the College was the result of a very thorough discussion of these plans. At a short business meeting following the discussion, Howard J. Maxwell, '48, was elected president to succeed DeLancey Pelgrift, who was the founder and first president of the Connecticut Club. Henry Blank, '41, was elected vice-president; Ruth Ferguson Findlay, '33, was re-elected secretary, and Stephen Davis, '60, was elected treasurer.

Reading

Twenty-five persons were in attendance for the November 13th meeting of the Reading-Berks County Alumni Club held at the Crystal Restaurant in Reading. Following a business meeting presided over by retiring club president Alvin Woerle, '45, at which Sidney D. Kline, Jr., '54, was elected president, and Mary Lou Houck Speidel, '45, was re-elected secretary-treasurer, Dr. Samuel Magill, College Chaplain, addressed the group on the present religious affairs at Dickinson College and compared them with yesteryear. His talk was followed by several questions from the alumni concerning chapel attendance and the interdenominational committees on the campus. Alumni Secretary Thomas Young then presented the plans of the College for its development program. His talk was illustrated by slides and was concluded by questions from the floor.

Wilmington

George C. Hering, III, '53, was elected president of the Delaware Alumni Club at its November 16th meeting held at the Kent Manor Inn in Wilmington. Elected along with him were William Lynam, '56, vice-president, and Robert High, '53, treasurer. In an attempt to attract alumni from the Southern end of Delaware, the nomination of Elinor Betts as a second vice-president for the down-state area was approved. Retiring club president James Mackie, Jr., '53, presided over the meeting at which Arthur D. Platt, executive assistant to Dr. Rubendall, spoke on the "rebirth of Dickinson" and Weston C. Overholt, Jr., '50, president of the Alumni Association and Alumni Secretary Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53, spoke about the alumni body's responsibility in this rebirth. Assistant football coach, Wilbur Gobrecht, '52, showed films of the Dickinson-Lebanon Valley game and spoke encouragingly of the game the following day with Drexel.

Florida West Coast

The Florida West Coast Alumni Association of Dickinson College held its annual dinner meeting at one of the St. Petersburg restaurants on the evening of Friday, February 22nd. An enthusiastic group of between thirty and forty alumni met together for a most enjoyable time. The dinner was announced by Dr. Donald H. Foster (1949), president of the Association, who asked Dr. Edwin C. Keboch (1905), to offer the opening prayer. Following dinner the members of the group joined heartily in singing old Dickinson songs led by Louise Sumwalt Richards (1924). A letter from Mrs. Josephine B. Meredith (1901), expressed her regret at being unable to attend the meeting. She cordially invited all Dickinsonians who might be passing through her home town of DeLeon Springs, Florida, to drop in for a visit with her. Mr. Thomas H. Young, Jr., the Alumni Secretary for the College, was our special guest for the evening and brought a splendid message from the Campus. It made present-day events at Dickinson really live for us. The question and answer period which followed his talk was spirited and informing. All Dickinsonians present, together with their husbands and wives, happily look forward from the evening of February 22nd and the good fellowship enjoyed at that time to the 1964 "gathering of the clan."

Louise Sumwalt Richards '24, Club Secretary

Miami

The Miami Club of Dickinson met at the Coral Gables Country Club on February 15. Howard Crabtree, '35, president of the club presided at the gathering of 18 alumni and friends of the College. Alumni Secretary Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53, brought a message of the state of the College and plans for the future. Following his remarks there were many questions about current day activities on the campus. Following the singing of college songs, the meeting was adjourned with the suggestion by Robert Koltnow, '51, that the club should have more frequent gatherings. Plans were made to hold more meetings in the next year. The first one is to be held in June, with subsequent meetings held in October and February.

Philadelphia

Professor David Brubaker, director of dramatic arts at Dickinson, brought the theater to life on Friday, March 8, before 178 persons at the annual Spring dinner of the Philadelphia Alumni Club. His remarks on the Mermaid Players and their part in a liberal arts education highlighted an evening which climaxed a two-year tenure of office for club president, Helen Dickey Morris, '33. Elected president at this meeting was Theodore H. Ely, '50. Completing the slate were John C. Arndt, III, '31, as vice-president, and Louise Hauer Greenberg, '54, as secretary-treasurer. Also included on the program were a few words of greetings by President Rubendall, '31, the introduction of Richard D. Cheshire, the new Director of Development, and Wilbur Gobrecht, '52, and Frank Mueller, who accompanied Alumni Secretary, Thomas H. Young, Jr., '53, to the affair. The program was ended by several medlies sung by an octet from the College Men's Glee Club.

Football Game Parties

The Philadelphia Alumni Club sponsored a post-football game party on October 20 following the Penn Military College game at Chester. The party was held at the Springfield Inn in Springfield and was attended by well over 100 alumni.

The Austin Brizendines, '39, opened their home to alumni and parents following Dickinson's football game with Johns Hopkins University on November 10. Despite the rainy weather, which curtailed the crowd at the game, over 30 people were in attendance at the Brizendines open house.

Approximately 100 alumni were on hand as Dickinson closed out its football schedule in Philadelphia, losing to the co-champions of the Middle Atlantic Conference, which is Drexel, 10-7. Following the game which was played on a windy and damp day, the alumni found their way to the Sheraton Motor Inn and enjoyed a social hour sponsored by the Philadelphia Alumni Club.

ALUMNI AUTHORS

Mason, Alpheus T., '20, The Supreme Court, Palladium of Freedom, University of Michigan Press, Ann Arbor, Michigan, 1962.

Judicial review in the United States as asserted by the Supreme Court, and the guidance of that Court by Chief Justice John Marshall in the development of a new "political system without a model," properly provides the introduction to this short but concentrated work on the third branch of our Federal Government. Though Chief Justice Marshall instituted this authority in the Court, one other Chief Justice, Charles Evans Hughes, is held to rank second only to Marshall in his influence. Moreover, both of these jurists lived and served the court at times when determined Chief Executives headed the nation, Jefferson and Franklin Roosevelt.

Though they dealt with different situations and problems, under both Chief Justices judicial review pointed toward judicial supremacy. While many Judges and others see less success in the development of the Court under Hughes, some thought must be given to the position of substantial change in the political and economic life of his period.

However, though these two men tend to dominate this work as they did the development of the Court, there is much other material. The final chapter, particularly, is given to a smooth recital of the recent membership of the Court and the attitudes and work of present or recent justices.

However, be forewarned! The book is not simple reading. Much depends upon your knowledge of our history. There is also the ability on the part of the reader to put aside personal likes or dislikes which he may have developed over the recent history of the Court. All of this demands much careful thought. Possibly some of the significant decisions of the last several decades have gathered a slight coating of rust that needs be shaken off, unless you have worked over them recently.

The work is thoroughly documented, so that one who ventures further into any area of the material of the book, or seeks to read the pronouncements of a former justice, or searches for more detail relating to many opinions cited will not have difficulty finding a source.

It takes excellent ability and care to achieve great success with such material. Scholarship will supply the facts but only a discriminating and able author can add the literary form, the smooth-running flow of words that makes up this short work. There is not merely a readable style but a most remarkably fluent flow of thoughts to carry the reader along. Considerably less than 200 pages make up the book. It will add much to the library of anyone interested in government but particularly those whose interest lies in the law.

Barbour J. Murray, '18. The Church Music of William Billings. Michigan State University Press; East Lansing, Michigan; 1960.

Professor Barbour's slender yet copiously illustrated volume dealing with the music of one of the first and most important American composers is the product of research that engaged the author for more than a decade. The extent, and quality, of this book reflects the fact that the final work was preceded by a number of preparatory studies dealing with various aspects of Billings' style and by lectures on Billings and early American church music delivered by the author both in this country and in Vienna.

William Billings, who was a tanner by trade, was born in Boston in 1746—J. S. Bach, in Leipzig, had just completed the last of his cantatas and had yet to write The Musical Offering (1747) and The Art of Fugue (1749). Billings' musical training was informal, and gained largely through his own reading and observation, although he may have had some instruction by one of the local choir leaders. Billings' interest in composition was doubtless stimulated by his activities in organizing and conducting singing schools in various towns in the Boston area. The New England Psalm Singer, his first collection, appeared in print in 1770, when Billings was only 24. Five other collections of hymns and anthems were published during the following twenty-five years. It is ironic that, despite the widespread popularity during Billings' lifetime of the more than 250 different hymn tunes and nearly 50 anthems in these six collections, his wife and six children were left virtually penniless upon his death.

The greater part of Professor Barbour's introductory chapter is devoted to such apposite problems as Billings' alleged illiteracy—in this connection, the author speculates that Paul Revere, who engraved the plates for The New England Psalm Singer, was at least partly to blame for the many errors of notation in this collection, the extent to which contemporary English psalmody influenced Billings' music, his notational practice, and the performance of his anthems. In succeeding chapters, Professor Barbour discusses in great detail Billings' texts and their settings, his handling of rhythm and meter, melody, counterpoint and harmony, modality and tonality, and texture and form, illustrating his points with no less than 192 musical examples. The author has thoughtfully provided an alphabetical index to Billings' compositions in an Appendix, along with an extensive bibliography listing primary and secondary sources, as well as modern octavo editions of his works. Omitted inadvertently from the latter is Oliver Daniel's edition of the Easter anthem, The Lord is Risen Indeed (New York: Mercury, 1952); to the former should be added Hans Nathan's excellent edition of Billings' The Continental Harmony of 1794 (Cambridge, Mass.: The Belknap Press of the Harvard University Press, 1961), which appeared too late for inclusion in the present work.

Students of early American music doubtless have already found Professor Barbour's book useful, not only for the wealth of information it contains but also as a tool for further research (see Leonard Ellinwood's review in The Musical Quarterly XLVII, Jan., 1961, 111-113). It might be noted in closing that Professor Barbour has recently published an article on the prolific 18th-century Czech composer, Franz Xaver Pokorny, in the same journal (XLIX, Jan., 1963, 38-58).

Federal Aid—Federal Control?

Dear Editor

I would like to make just a couple of observations regarding Herbert Denlinger's letter on Federal Aid to education that appeared in the October Alumnus.

First of all, it is no surprise that Human Events, the publication which apparently triggered the letter, opposes Federal aid to education. Human Events is one of those journals of the right that consistently oppose all forms of social, political and economic innovation. Although intimations of guilt by association are usually specious, I think it is nevertheless an indication of the publication's outlook that it is highly recommended by Robert Welch of John Birch Society fame.

Perhaps Mr. Denlinger would like to enumerate some of the dire consequences of Federal aid. If, as I rather suspect, he fears some sort of "thought control," I suggest that he consider the Library of Congress—it is maintained entirely by Federal funds, and is just as free, if not more so, as the library of Dickinson College.

Last, I would like to commend George Shuman for his forthright reply to Mr. Denlinger.

Football Nostalgia

Dear Editor

It was interesting to read the Alumnus today. I was interested in the '98 football team as I knew all of them at the time. You asked if we knew any of the unknowns? The one standing with Bonner on the back row is Bill Sloan.

This was the first picture taken of the team. I have the second picture that was taken, because I happened to be in it. It is badly weather worn, after 64 years. I would gladly send it to you, if you are keeping any of the old relics in the museum.

I was not much of a player, mostly warmed the benches, but I did play against the Carlisle Indians. The beating we took . . . the score shows!

Daniel R. Peffer, Sr., '02

Daytona Beach, Florida

Dear Editor

A few days ago I received through the mail the Alumnus. It is read with great pleasure on my part, especially the athletic record of the years of 1902-03-04. During these years, games were played with such institutions as Army, Navy, Pennsylvania, Lehigh, Bucknell, and other smaller institutions. State College was one of our opponents, and the game was usually played in Williamsport, Pennsylvania. I have been under the impression for years that Dickinson won a 6-0 game in Williamsport in the last engagement between the schools.

You write of Davis, Williams, Craver, Thorpe, Mt. Pleasant, and Dr. Hutchins. I think you have forgotten Hoffman, Harry, Mes-sioner, Seely Salter, Creamer, Skeath, Robinson, Rippy Sadler, Klinestine, and Ammerman.

I have never lost my interest in Army and Navy schedules, Pennsylvania, Lehigh, and W & J. There is something about football that will make you want to play the game all of your life. I will be looking forward to more history.

Constitution and By-Laws of the General Alumni Association of Dickinson College

Revision Adopted October, 1962

Article I

Name

The name of this Association shall be: The General Alumni Association of Dickinson College.

Article II

Purpose

The object of this Association is to keep alive and stimulate the interest of the Alumni in their Alma Mater, and to secure their intelligent support of measures beneficial to the College.

Article III

Membership

The membership of this association shall consist of all graduates of Dickinson College and those former students who left the College in good standing.

Any member may become a Life Member by the payment of a sum established by the Alumni Council.

Article IV

Alumni Council

The governing board of the Association shall be known as the Alumni Council. It shall consist of 24 members who shall serve for a term of three years. 21 members shall be elected by the alumni. Three-designated class representatives, shall be elected by their respective classes during their senior years. The terms of 8 members shall expire each year. No member shall serve more than two consecutive terms.

Article V

Alumni Trustee

In accordance with a resolution of the Board of Trustees of Dickinson College one Alumni Trustee shall be elected each year to serve a four year term. This term shall begin at the next regular meeting of the Board following his election. No Alumni Trustee shall serve more than two consecutive terms.

Article VI

Elections

The Nominating Committee shall nominate two Life Members for each place to be filled on the Alumni Council and shall certify such nominations to the Alumni Secretary and the President of the Association by December 1st. At least four alumnae shall be nominated.

The Committee also shall nominate two Life Members for each interim vacancy, except for class representatives, which occurs with one or more years of membership remaining. These nominees shall serve the balance of the term. The two consecutive term restriction shall not apply to this interim term. In the case of a vacancy of a class representative, the Alumni Council shall appoint the class president or another member of the class to serve the balance of the remaining term. In either case should there be less than one year of membership remaining, there shall be no action taken in filling the vacancy.

The Nominating Committee shall name three Life Members for each place to be filled as Alumni Trustee on the Board of Trustees of Dickinson College. Such nominations shall be certified to the Secretary of the Board of Trustees, the Alumni Secretary and the President of the General Alumni Association by December 1st. In making nominations, consideration must be given to the Trustee resolution that one alumna trustee shall serve on the Board at all times.

In the event of a vacancy of an Alumni Trustee with one or more years of membership remaining, the Nominating Committee shall nominate three Life Members for each vacancy. These nominees shall be so designated on the ballot and the elected nominee shall serve the balance of the interim term.

Independent nominations for Alumni Trustee may be made by any Life Member forwarding to the Secretary of the Board, at least 30 days prior to December 1st, a nomination which carries the signatures of 75 members of the Association. In the case of more than one independent nomination, that nomination having the larger number of sponsors shall be certified for a position on the ballot. In the event of an independent nomination, the Nominating Committee shall make only two nominations for Alumni Trustee.

A ballot containing the names and appropriate biographic information of the nominees for Alumni Council and Alumni Trustee shall be mailed to each Life Member of the Association. The nominees shall be listed according to college class.

The ballot shall be returned in the self-addressed envelope accompanying it, with the voter's name written on the envelope, at least fifteen days before the Commencement meeting to the Tellers of Election, who shall be appointed by the Secretary of the Association. The Tellers shall destroy all envelopes not bearing the name of the voter.

The Tellers shall certify the result of the count of the ballots for Alumni Trustee to the President and the Secretary of the Board of Trustees, and the count for Alumni Council to the Secretary and the President of the Association and the Chairman of the

At its Homecoming meeting, the Alumni Council voted to adopt the following revised Constitution and By-Laws which had been prepared by a committee of that group. Essentially a more efficient and understandable document, the revision does have some substantive changes:

1. The elimination of annual dues to avoid competition with the annual Alumni Fund.
2. An increase in the size of the Alumni Council from 18 to 24 members to reflect the increase in the size of the alumni body.
3. The limiting of eligibility to hold office and to vote for candidates for Alumni Council and Alumni Trustee to Life Members of the Association to increase the stature of the designation "Life Member."
4. The limiting of the number of terms an officer of the Association may remain in office to give a greater number of alumni the opportunity to hold leadership positions.

Nominating Committee. At least two alumnae shall be elected to the Alumni Council at each election. In case of a tie vote, the decision shall be made by lot by the tellers.

Article VII

Officers

The Alumni Council shall elect from its number a president, a Vice President, and a Secretary. An Alumni Secretary shall be appointed by the Alumni Council after consultation with the President of the College. These officers shall constitute the Executive Committee, which shall act for the Council between meetings and shall delegate such authority as the Committee sees fit to the Alumni Secretary.

The terms of the elected officers shall be one year. No officer shall hold the same office for more than three terms. The terms of office shall begin upon adjournment of the Council Meeting at which they are elected.

The President shall be the executive as well as the presiding officer of both the Association and the Council and shall perform such duties as are generally exercised in accordance with these provisions.

The Vice President shall act in place of the President and shall perform such duties as are delegated to him by the President.

The Secretary shall act as secretary of the meetings of the Association, the Alumni Council and the Executive Committee. In addition, he shall appoint four members of the Association to serve as Tellers of Election and shall notify the successful nominees of their election to the Council and the Board of Trustees.

The Treasurer shall be the Treasurer of the College or his designated representative. He shall receive all funds accruing to the Association and all contributions from the alumni, and shall report to the Alumni Council at each meeting the status of such accounts.

A vacancy in any elective office shall be filled by a mail canvass of the Alumni Council following the recommendation of the Executive Committee.

Article VIII

Committees

There shall be the following standing committees:

1. Nominating. The Nominating Committee shall consist of three members of the Council from different classes. It shall be appointed by the President of the Association immediately following the Commencement meeting. The Dickinson Alumnus shall announce the appointment of the Committee and shall solicit suggested nominees from the roster of Life Members.

This committee also shall serve as the Nominating Committee for the election of the officers of the Council. They shall present the nominations to the Council at the Commencement meeting.

2. Alumni Events. The Committee on Alumni Events shall consist of not less than three members of the Association. The Committee shall be appointed by the President within 30 days after the Commencement meeting. It shall collaborate with the College in planning a program of activities for alumni gatherings at Homecoming and Commencement and at other events.

3. Alumni Publications. The Committee on Alumni Publications shall be appointed by the President and shall consist of not fewer than three members of the Association. It shall periodically review and evaluate all publications of the College and give advice and suggestions which it deems helpful in improving these publications.

Article IX

Meetings

There shall be two regular meetings of the Alumni Council. They shall be held in Carlisle before Homecoming and before Commencement. Special meetings may be called by the President. Fourteen members shall constitute a quorum.

The meetings of the Association shall be held at times and places designated by the Council. Fifty members shall constitute a quorum.

Article X

Amendments

This Constitution and By-Laws may be amended by a two-thirds vote of any meeting of the Alumni Council at which not fewer than 14 members are present, provided that a notice of the proposed amendment has been sent to each Council member not later than 30 days prior to the meeting at which it is to be voted upon.

Amendments may also be made at a regularly scheduled meeting of the Association by a simple majority vote of all members attending, and provided further that the proposed Amendments shall have been published not later than 30 days prior to the meeting in the Dickinson Alumnus.

ELECTION TIME

As provided for in the revised Constitution and By-Laws of the General Alumni Association (see page 16), the election for Alumni Trustee and members of the Alumni Council will be conducted by a mail ballot. Ballots will be mailed to all life members of the General Alumni Association on April 30. The information about the candidates found on this and the following pages is designed to give the electorate an opportunity to acquaint itself with the qualifications of each of the candidates and to make a wise selection when exercising its franchise. The candidates were selected by a Nominating Committee appointed by Weston C. Overholt, Jr., '50, President of the General Alumni Association, and chaired by Sidney D. Kline, Jr., '54. Any alumnus desiring to become a life member in order to vote in this election is required to make his payment of $50 or the first installment of $12.50 prior to April 30.

This year the dinner is expected to bring together some 1,000 top industrial officials from throughout the United States, including wholesalers, retailers, manufacturers, labor and other industry leaders.

The October issue of the Alumnus mentioned the poetry of George L. Kress, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, Athens, Alabama. Further contact with his family has revealed that he has had over two hundred poems published in periodicals in this country and Canada. One of his poems entitled, "The Liberty Bell," appeared in a reader published by Scott Foresman in 1959 entitled, Wide, Wide World. This reader was to be used especially in schools overseas to promote American ideals.

A citation which read in part, "For his many and varied activities as an individual, and as a judge, in which he has given freely and extensively of his time toward the establishment of a social order in which religious ideals of brotherhood and justice shall become the standards of human relationship," was presented to Charles F. Greevy, Lycoming County Common Pleas Court Judge as he was honored at the annual dinner of the Lycoming Chapter of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

Howard Crabtree, principal of the Redlands Junior High School, Dade County, Florida, has some advice for the parents of school children. In an article which appeared in the February 13 issue of the Miami News, Crabtree encouraged parents to develop in their children at an early age what he calls "attitude." "The ability to read is most important," says Crabtree. "A youngster who can read can learn." He points to lack of reading material in the home as evidence of a poor reader, and believes that interest in school is developed in the first grade, stating, "If you lose the child's interest then you may never get it back." He advises parents to condition children to do work on their own, but help them with good study habits.

The latest writing project of Lois Eddy McDonnell, Carlisle elementary school teacher, is to be used in the new publication scheduled to be ready for use for all elementary school age children in the Methodist Church schools in September 1964.

John J. Ketterer, chairman of the Department of Biology at Monmouth College, has been promoted to the rank of full professor, effective July 1, 1963.

Ben is one of the youngest ever to serve in this important office. Yet despite his youth, Ben is no stranger to the political scene. Following his graduation from Dickinson, Ben became active in the Monmouth County Young Republican Club. In 1955 he was elected to the governing body of Wall Township, followed by a term as Mayor. He was the youngest mayor in the history of the county. While in office, he displayed both foresight and leadership in initiating many programs designed to meet the needs of a growing community. It came as little surprise to any one when Ben received the nomination to run for Freeholder.

His early inclination toward public service was the extension of a family tradition, since his father, the late Benjamin S. Danskin, was President of the Monmouth County Tax Board and former Deputy Director of Taxation for the State.

In World War II, Ben served as an officer in the United States Air Force as a bombardier-navigator. Following the war, he attended Dickinson under the G. I. Bill. In addition to governmental experience, he is highly respected as a businessman. He is currently President of the real estate and insurance firm of Danskin, Brown, Conover, Inc., with offices in Spring Lake and Wall Township. He is married to the former Joan Slockblower of Interlaken, New Jersey, whom he married while at Dickinson. The couple have three daughters, Cathy, Nancy and Barbara. He is a member of St. Andrews Methodist Church in Spring Lake and he is a member of the Wall Township Kiwanis Club.

Dedicated to seeing that each of the residents of the county is given full opportunity to enjoy all the benefits that Monmouth County can offer, Ben is indeed a public servant in the finest senses. We at Dickinson shall follow his career with great interest.

In the November elections Benjamin H. Danskin, '47, won a seat on the Board of Chosen Freeholders in Monmouth County, one of the largest and fastest growing counties in New Jersey. As a Freeholder, Ben will share a wide variety of responsibilities. It is the Board's responsibility to administer the county budget; maintain the county roads, buildings, parks and bridges; and, to supervise the administration of public welfare.

Charlotte Wilson was married to Sidney R. Garrett in Baton Rouge, Louisiana, on December 24, 1961. Sidney is a painter and sculptor and is presently teaching Fine Arts at Pan American College in Edinburg, Texas. Charlotte, immediately prior to her marriage, had a two-months writing fellowship at the MacDowell Colony in Peterborough, N. H., and had some poems published in Poetry. Last semester, she taught advanced writing at Pan American College and the previous semester had taught a class of freshmen composition. Charlotte notes that this was a difficult course to teach as most of the students spoke better Spanish than English.

Weston C. Overholt, Jr., Esq., president of the General Alumni Association, has been made a partner in the law firm of Harper, George, Buchanan & Driver in Philadelphia.

Thomas W. Richards has been chosen chairman of the Arlington County Board. He had previously served as vice chairman of this board. Richards, who is a research analyst for the U. S. government, on the occasion of his election outlined a program of action for the new year. He stated that Arlington faces several knotty problems including mass transportation, open space preservation, school improvement and capital projects.

Joseph H. Cooper, M.D., of Haverstown, Pennsylvania, is now a resident in pathology at Lankenau Hospital, Philadelphia.

Hugh Ford, a member of the faculty at Trenton State College, Trenton, N. J., has recently had several honors bestowed upon him. He has been awarded a grant from the American Philosophical Society to work on a manuscript entrusted to him by Nancy Cunard, who owned and operated the Hours Press in France. Her press published work by such authors as Robert Graves, Havelock Ellis, Norman Douglas, Ezra Pound, Samuel Beckett and many others. The manuscript entitled, Such Were the Hours, will be an important chapter in the history of the literary life of the late 1920's and early '30's. Hugh's work will be to edit and complete the manuscript and see it through publication. He will leave for France to complete this assignment following a six week lectureship at Laval University in Quebec. In the meantime, he has just completed the preparation of his dissertation for publication by the University of Pennsylvania Press, entitled A Poets' War: British Poets and the Spanish Civil War.

William D. Morgan, an attorney of Clark's Summit, Pa., has been named treasurer of the Lackawanna County Heart Association.

A Christmas letter from Dr. Robert E. and Margaret Valentine Berry told of their leaving New York on July 21 aboard the Cristoforo Colombo to Bombay via Naples. From Bombay, they were transported to New Delhi by night train and flew to Kathmandu, Nepal, where Bob is part of the department of surgery at the United Mission Hospital, an inter-denominational and international project designed to provide Christian medical service to Nepal. Following the completion of a language school which presented quite a challenge with nearly 140 written characters, Bob began his thoracic surgical practice in Nepal, a service which is sorely needed because of the inordinate rate of tuberculosis. Nearly 1,000 cases a day are treated by the three hospitals and two dispensaries of the United Mission Hospital.
