Of the classes, of admission into the College, and of the course of study.

The Students shall be divided into four classes: each class to continue one year: those of the first year shall be denominated Freshmen; those of the second year, Sophomores; those of the third year, Juniors; and those of the fourth year, Seniors.

Applicants for admission into the Freshman Class must be approved by the Faculty on an examination, in Latin, on Cæsar's Commentaries; the Orations of Cicero against Cataline; and the first four books of Virgil's Æneid: in Greek, on the Gospel of John, and Dalzell's Collectanea Minora: and in Arithmetic, as far as the Double Rule of Three.

When any particular book, above mentioned, shall not have been studied, it is expected, that the applicants for admission shall be prepared in an equal amount of Latin and Greek.

Applicants for admission, who shall not have been in any College before, must, on examination, satisfy the Faculty of their acquaintance with the subjects of study, which are required of the students of Dickinson, previous to that stage of the course at which they propose to enter.

No student shall be received from any other College, without satisfactory testimonials of character.

Students from other Colleges, with good credentials of their character and standing may be admitted ad eundem.

The commencement of each Session shall be the stated periods of admission, particularly of the winter session, which applicants are requested to bear in mind.

No young man shall be considered as fully member until he be matriculated:—For six weeks after his admission he shall be on trial; and if his behaviour shall be rude, disorderly or immoral, he shall at the expiration of that time or sooner, if circumstances require, be sent home.

Young men who may not find it convenient to go through a complete College course, may, at the request of their parents or guardians be admitted and allowed to attend such recitations and prelections of the professors as they and their parents or guardians may select—provided, that such students shall have undergone an examination into their qualifications to pursue the particular studies.

Young men pursuing their studies in this manner, shall not be entitled to Academical degrees or honours unless they shall have made up for all deficiencies, by the middle of the senior year; but a certificate with the seal of the Corporation (and signature of the Professors) attesting the degree of their proficiency and attainments.

Students of this description shall in all other respects be under College Laws and Regulations, except by special permission of the Faculty.

The College course shall be divided into two sessions, the First with which the Academical year commences, beginning precisely five weeks after the fourth Wednesday of September, and continuing for the twenty-three weeks following; the Second, beginning precisely nineteen weeks before the fourth Wednesday of September, and continuing till the Commencement.
