Attention....

Common Roads and the Women's Circle have teamed up to offer a mentoring program for young lesbians in central Pennsylvania. We are looking for responsible women to serve as mentors in this program. Our goals are to create opportunities for young women to gain skills and become active advocates for themselves and their community and for older women to serve as role models and gain new ways of thinking about all of our experiences.

Over the course of a year, mentors and mentees will participate in activities that are fun and safe, while focusing on important issues for young lesbians. We might watch a film and talk about it together, or spend time with an artist creating shared artwork, take a field trip, play softball, or just have dinner together. In September, the Women's Circle will provide scholarships for participants to attend the annual retreat, held at a camp in northern Lancaster County.

If you care about our community and have a little time to help the next generation become strong and confident young women, please consider serving as a mentor. This might be the most important thing you do in 2006. For details or a copy of the application, contact Amy Skillman at:

skillman@culturalpartnerships.org, or call (717) 238-1770.

Attention GLAD community: I am a contributing writer for the Alternative Central Newspaper. I am seeking GLAD community members who are positive role models, mentors, etc., who by their actions positively influence our community and open the minds and hearts of those outside of our community. If you or someone you know fits this description, I am interested in writing about them in the Alternative Central. As a community we need to build each other up and honor people who give of themselves. By this column I am hoping to do just that, as well as, spark an interest to be more altruistic in each of us.
