Names Project Quilt Coming!

The Names Project AIDS Memorial Quilt is coming to Lancaster on December 1-3, of this year. The American Red Cross (Lanc. Chapt.) will co-sponsor the Quilt's coming to Lancaster with Millersville University along with the Lancaster AIDS Project, Betty Finney House, RAIN, Dream Ride for AIDS, The Crispus Attucks Center, and the Urban League of Lancaster. This venture unites the many AIDS service organizations of Lancaster and will again remind us of how the AIDS virus affects all of us.

The Quilt was conceived in November of 1985 by Cleve Jones, a gay rights activist from San Francisco. Cleve was inspired by the sight of thousands of names of those lost to AIDS, that were displayed on placards on the wall of the San Francisco Federal Building. A little over a year later he created the first panel in memory of longtime friend Marvin Feldman. In June of 1987 The Names Project Foundation officially began. It was displayed for the first time on October 11, 1987 during the National March on Washington for Lesbian and Gay Rights. At that time it consisted of 1,920 panels. Today the Quilt covers more than 32 acres and includes more than 50,000 panels.

The Quilt is the largest example of a community art project in the world and holds more meaning than words can express. It reminds us of how the AIDS epidemic has touched all of our hearts in some manner. If you are interested in making a panel or volunteering, or can make a donation to help absorb some of the costs of bringing the Quilt to Lancaster, contact Angela Lightfoot at the American Red Cross, or one of the participating agencies. ▲

Thanks and No Thanks

Thanks to:

PEOPLE FOR THE AMERICAN WAY ACTION FUND. This liberal minded non-profit organization which identifies itself as "Committed to promoting respect, tolerance and understanding of our society's pluralism" recently sent strong opposition to the well-publicized congressional hearing on "whether schools receiving federal funds should be barred from offering programs and activities that may have the purpose or effect of presenting Homosexuality in a positive light. In an open letter widely published in many newspapers nationwide, People for the American Way took congress and Newt Gingrich to task for being unduly influenced by

Ask Anne Drogeny

Dear Anne,

I am a gay male, age 15, who will be returning to high school this fall. I am not sure if I should come out to my classmates. My family knows and is fine with my sexuality.

—Back to the 3R's

Dear 3R's,

Coming out in high school is a highly commendable feat, although it seems to be happening a lot more lately. You mentioned that your family knows, which is wonderful, considering many times they are the last to be told. By coming out to your classmates, you are setting yourself up for possible ridicule, danger, and misunderstandings. People can be very intolerant. I'd say, start slow and tell your closest friends. Then begin speaking up when you hear derogatory statements being made against gays and lesbians. Then start your own gay and lesbian youth group in your school. The more people are educated about us the less frightened they will be of us, and the world will be a better place. ▲

Dishin' with GP

Well it was another fabulous summer of fun and I have many fond memories, so I thought I'd write them down before my new found, short term memory loss kicks in. I can always tell I've had fun at a party if I end up face down on the ground. Which is what brought the 4th of July weekend to a crashing end. After three days of partying and working my full time job at the free clinic for the terminally hard to dress, I still had time to witness some really close friends hop in a van and drive around naked, lick shots off of someone's head, and see way too many of my friends in their bloomers.

The 110° U.S.M. party was a blast even with Miss South Central Pennsylvania getting raccoon eyes, seeing the world's largest, itty, bitty, yellow polka dot bikini, and Miss Shawn shaking her money-maker.

Three cheers for Harrisburg Pride! Oops, I mean the Central PA Pride Fest. Coco Vega rules, she and her troop were fearless. Poison showed us again why she is the new diva of Harrisburg. And who can beat a pride fest with a bar right behind center stage? The perfect place to grab a nice cool drink before the long walk up the hill to the PTC booth.

Yes, summer has passed and it's back to school. Bring on the college boys (you thought I was going to say high school, didn't you?) The great thing about the coming of fall is the fact that most of you will be wearing more clothing, but will it match? Speaking of clothing I hope you all go to see Issac Mizrahi's movie "Unzipped" it is what "Ready to Wear" and "Truth and Dare" could have been.

What if you could go back in time and change the course of history, what would that mean to me? Well... first off I could have stopped Michael Jackson two noses ago, Marilyn Monroe would still be alive, and I never ever would have gotten the perm in '82.

Till next time...ta ta.

Letters to the Ed

Dear Ed,

During a recent work weekend I had the unfortunate opportunity to visit the Tally Ho on a Saturday night and experience a phenomena which I've noticed is common to all the bars in central and southeastern PA. As I approached and introduced myself to the several men who I found to be moderately attractive they gave me a reception that a Texas cowboy might describe as "mean as a bobcat." As a sociable, reasonably cute, well-heeled young man who spends a fair amount of time at the gym, this confuses me, everyone ( and I do mean everyone) complains about how they can't meet anyone nice at the bar. In fact I meet more fun, hunky local men in large cities that I do locally and they all have the same complaint. And who can blame them? My conclusion then is that men who go out locally are not aware of the rules of bar etiquette. So here they are:

1) Don't assume that anyone who mutters a word to you or glances in your direction wants you badly. Trust me on this one, it's not true! Maybe they are just bored with standing around stonefaced. I once saw, in Washington D.C., a stunning bodybuilder sitting on a step outside Mr. P's talking to a homeless man. I guess by Central PA standards that meant he was preparing to take him home which leads to the next one.

2) Even a Grinch-faced troll deserves common courtesy and respect. This may come as a shock to you but... There is value in every human being. Furthermore there is a bible quote that I can't help but bring up, concerning this issue. "As ye sow so shall ye reap" Rudeness generates rudeness, besides,

3) We're all in this together. In today's social and political climate we need all the allies we can get. The bar should be a place to come to be around like-minded individuals ( at least when it comes to sexual preference), where you can be yourself, not a place where anonymous peers rip you to shreds for no reason other than that they're bored. Besides, that older gentleman next to you might just be a resource to you. If , for example, you're a budding fashion designer, he might have a friend with a sewing factory who's is looking for an extra product line. Or he might have a young friend who's looking for... well, you get the picture.

4) And finally, if you're angry or upset don't come out and unleash your hostility on others. Keep it at home. Get counseling, get Xanax, get Ben & Jerry's deep dark chocolate ice cream, and get better. Then go out and meet people, make contacts, make friends, and make this place a more hospitable environment in which to be gay, lesbian, or bisexual.

Thank you, signed,
 Fed Up

Dear Ed,

Earlier this summer, the Lancaster Newspaper's headlines again reported the arrests of men involved in sexual activities at Long's Park. The police department's approach of using undercover agents for entrapment followed by a big exposé by the newspaper has done little to stop the use of the public rest rooms by gay men. However, it "outed" some men, caused others to lose their jobs, friends, and families, and created more negative press about homosexuals.

We all know that cruising tea rooms is illegal, but many of us have done it ourselves. So I pose the following questions. What do we ,as a gay community, do to change the policies of the police department? Do gay men have other healthy and legal sexual alternatives in Lancaster County? Why does the Lancaster Newspaper consider this news worthy? How often do heterosexual adults caught having consensual sex in a back seat of a car, get reported under special headlines? These are questions that we as a community need to address.

If these issues concern you, as they do me, there are several things you should consider. Come to a Pink Triangle Meeting, contact a board Member, or just call the PTC and offer your support. You can aid the PTC in its attempts to create change in the Lancaster Police Department's and the Lancaster Newspaper's view of the gay community.

Finally, if you or someone you know has been a victim of this type of harassment, contact the PTC. There are things that the victim needs to do to avoid having a criminal record. The PTC can offer you support and possibly direction to help you to deal with the legal actions filed against you.

Help PTC make a positive change in the community that you call HOME!

Greg Snyder
 PTC Board Member
